WAR SENDS U.S. BUDGET FOR '42 PAST 22 BILLION

Deficit Is Estimated at 12.8 Billion.

BY JOHN FISHER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 31.—Because of the lease-lend and domestic arms program now totaling 43 billion dollars, the federal budget for the new year beginning July 1 was revised sharply upward tonight to an all time high.

Budget Director Harold D. Smith disclosed that total expenditures in the 1942 fiscal year will be 22 billion 169 million dollars, or nearly 5 billions more than President Roosevelt estimated in his Jan. 3 message to congress. This budget surpasses the previous record of 18½ billions for 1919 and compares with estimated expenditures of 13.3 billions the year ending June 30.

War Aid Causes Rise.

The deficit for next year is raised by 3½ billion dollars to 12 billion 800 millions. Virtually the entire increase in the revised budget expenditures is believed to represent the estimated cost in the next year of aid to Britain and other countries, under the President's dictatorial powers to give away or lend war materials, foodstuffs, etc.

The budget director declined to give an exact estimate on lease-lend costs but the new budget shows a "national defense" expenditure of 15⅓ billion dollars within the next year, compared with the earlier estimate of 10 billion 811 millions. Since domestic arms expenditures were already believed outlined for 1942 when the President submitted his earlier estimate and the lease-lend act and a 7 billion dollar appropriation for that purpose has since been voted, it is reasonable to assume that the 5 billion dollar increase represents the lease-lend program for 1942.

Smith said the January budget was based upon an estimated total arms cost of 28¼ billion dollars. Since then, he asserted, 7 billions has been voted and the program for production of planes, ships and other arms materials has been greatly expanded, bringing the total estimated cost to 43 billions.

20 Billions for Army.

He broke down the arms program, as now foreseen, as follows, including appropriations, authorizations and pending recommendations:

Army	20 billions
Navy	14 billions
Other agencies	2 billions
Lease-lend	7 billions
Total	43 billions

The estimated 15⅓ billions for the year beginning July 1 is that portion of the 43 billions which will actually be spent during the period, based upon present estimates.

"Increased expenditures of 51 million dollars for agricultural aid and 50 millions for interest on the public debt are offset by a reduction of 105 millions in prospective expenditures for work relief," Smith said in explaining the revised budget.

Expect 9 Billion Revenue.

"The treasury estimates receipts for the fiscal year 1942 will amount to 9 billion 402 millions—an increase of 1 billion 127 million over the estimate included in the budget. Of this increase in revenues 910 millions will be derived from income taxes."

Smith said the 3½ billion dollar tax bill now under formulation in congress will help to reduce the estimated deficit for the next fiscal year.

"In a world at war," he added, "estimates of any government's financial program are subject to constant change. If the present defense program progresses at the rate now contemplated there is every reason to believe that the estimates here presented accurately reflect the amount of cash to be paid out in the fiscal year 1942."

CALLS U. S. AID BRITISH VICTORY IN DIPLOMACY

WELLINGTON, N. Z., May 31.—William D. Stewart, former finance minister, today described the mobilization of American resources behind Britain as London's "diplomatic success of the war."

"Britain has won a victory over American public opinion," Stewart declared.

He said that "what really tipped the scale is the quiet, tenacious courage of the British people."

Fire Sweeps Railroad Yards at Jersey City

New York, May 31 [Special].—A spectacular fire, endangering armament materiels estimated to be worth $25,000,000, tonight laid waste an area one-fourth of a mile square in the Erie railroad yards on the Hudson river waterfront in Jersey City, N. J. While the flames still raged investigations were started by both federal and Jersey City authorities.

Starting from an undetermined origin at 4:45 p. m. Chicago time, flames that shot 400 feet into the air roared thru two eight story filled grain elevators, baked the outer walls of a seven story brick warehouse and ignited several piers and tied up barges. The flames and smoke were seen for 50 miles. The fire then swept north into the Erie ferry terminal which connects with midtown Manhattan.

Soldiers Assist Police.

This building several times caught fire, but in each case the flames were extinguished. Soldiers, returning to Fort Hancock, N. J., from leave were conscripted by the police, to aid in handling crowds. The Mid-Hudson warehouse was last to be ignited. Firemen and fireboats aided by a sprinkler system within the building, fought the blaze, but were hampered by low pressure.

The fireboats and tugboats which had forced their way into ferry slips were compelled by low tide to draw their water supply from long hose lines. The fireboats, in addition, were hampered by the wreckage of three barges, which had been caught in the first rush of the flames and had sunk at their moorings after burning to the water's edge.

Much additional merchandise had been stored near the fire in the yards of the Pennsylvania railroad. Switch engines and nearly 100 railroad employés began moving this material, and railroad officials later estimated that most of their cars and merchandise had been saved, but that the damage to railway property might reach $100,000.

Sheep and Calves Burned.

The flames raced thru most of the 135 pens of the stockyards and 450 sheep, lambs and calves were destroyed.

The two grain elevators known as the Erie elevator, in recent months had delivered large quantities of grain to British ships for export. The double structure collapsed and was destroyed.

Defense articles periled or destroyed, police said, included rubber, tool steel, oil, and alcohol, some for domestic use, some for export.

U. S. ARMY PROGRAM LEAVES MANCHESTER GIRLS HIGH AND DRY

Manchester, Tenn., May 31 [Special].—The ol' swimmin' hole ain't what it used to be, since the army boys came to town, and the local girls don't like it a bit. They let it be known they are "plenty burned up about it," and their faces certainly are red.

The change was discovered, with some embarrassment, by a group of Tullahoma girls when they hurried out to their favorite pool in Duck river, about a mile from town. Giggling in anticipation of the cool dip, they donned bathing suits and were ready to dash into the water when they peered thru the brush and gasped. Disporting themselves in the pool were about 500 soldiers—all in the nude.

"It's a darned shame they have to use the only good swimming hole around here," complained Emile Dickerson, 16, as the girls scampered away. "I know there's thousands of soldiers here for maneuvers, and they have to bathe somewhere, but so do we."

DISCLOSE PLANES DROPPED WATER TO NAZIS IN CRETE

BERLIN, May 31.—The most serious problem that faced the invading German troops in Crete was the scarcity of drinking water. Sinking of wells proved fruitless because when finally water was reached it was below sea level and therefore salty.

One of the tasks of the German air force was to drop drinking water, usually soda water in bottles, and chocolate for the land troops.

Large stores of canned Hawaiian pineapple juice were seized in the early operations and later used with success, both as a hunger and thirst quencher by the German units.

MAY WARMER, DRIER, SUNNIER THAN NORMAL

May was warmer, drier, and sunnier than usual, the weather bureau reported yesterday. The estimates cover only the first 30 days. The average temperature was 62.2 degrees, compared with a normal of 57.5. The rainfall was 2.75 inches, compared with a normal of 3.54. The amount of possible sunshine was 73 per cent, while normal is 64. It was the warmest May since 1936 and the driest since 1937. The hottest day was recorded last Wednesday when the temperature rose to 91.

"Lease-Lend" Cheese Pleases Peer, Dockers

BY GUY MURCHIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 31.—The first food ship sent to Britain under the American lease-lend act was unloaded today at a British dock.

W. Averell Harriman [top] and Lord Woolton.

Lord Woolton, food minister, received the shipment from W. Averell Harriman, President Roosevelt's special lease-lend coördinator. There were 120,000 pounds of Wisconsin cheese, 4,000,000 eggs from Nebraska, and 1,000 tons of flour.

Holding a cake of Cheddar cheese from Manitowoc, Wis., Woolton cut a slice and ate some of it with Harriman as a symbol of British-American coöperation.

America Is Thanked.

"We appreciate this load of cheese and eggs from America's middlewest to the people, dock workers, and miners of England," Woolton said. "These tasty foods bring not only encouragement, but vitality to us."

Harriman replied, after passing a cracked cold storage egg to the Briton:

"President Roosevelt is sending this shipment because he appreciates that the right kind of food is as important to men as powder to guns."

Woolton smacked his lips as he devoured in three minutes, for the benefit of cameramen, the equivalent of a week's ration of Cheddar.

"A very good cheese," he commented. "That's what we want for the miners."

Dock Workers Sample It.

"What about us dockers? Cheese has always been our dinner dish."

Woolton handed over a 20 pound package.

"Thank you, my lords," said the worker who received the gift.

The cheese was distributed among 240 workers.

The food was paid for by the United States.

VICHY CHARGES ENGLAND WITH WAR OF PIRACY

VICHY, May 31.—France's vice premier, Admiral Jean Darlan, accused Britain today of conducting a piratical war against French shipping and declared he was determined to force respect for French rights.

Apparently speaking with the approval of the chief of state, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, he issued his statement as it was reliably reported that Sfax, Tunisia, a French port in North Africa, had been attacked for the third time by British planes and the Italian freighter Florida II., 3,113 tons, set afire. He had just returned from Paris, where he had conversations on collaboration with the German occupation authorities.

Tells of Ship Seizures.

Darlan charged that 143 French freighters have been "seized by the British, and not merely searched and returned, as they pretend. Against all rules of the sea, the British admiralty has taken the habit, so far as France is concerned, of transforming right of search into right of capture, even when the ships are empty. All this well demonstrated that Britain is waging against us a piratical war with the double purpose of reducing the French population to famine."

"In point of fact," he added, "these acts of brutality have but one object, namely, to crush French naval power, cut off the metropolis [continental France] from its empire, and isolate us from the rest of the world."

Lays Bad Peace to Britain.

Darlan sketched the course of Anglo-French relations for the last 20 years and accused England of having acted in such manner at the peace conference after the world war that France was compelled to sign a "bastard peace." He declared Britain left to France "almost all the military obligations under the treaty and reserved for herself the advantages arising from the economic exploitation of the German people."

Other offenses he laid to Britain were these: The separating of France from Italy in 1920-21, the furnishing of gold and arms to rebels in Morocco and Syria, the supporting of Marxist politicians and governments in France, the "constraining" of France to subscribe to sanctions against Italy in 1935, and the refusing of all help to oppose German military reoccupation of the Rhineland in 1936.

France "To Compel Respect."

Discussing the attacks on Sfax, Darlan said:

"I am more than ever determined to compel respect for France's right to use freely her ports and her means of communication."

Admiral Darlan presented the French case as regards Sfax "after obtaining all necessary precisions and giving Britain time to explain." He refuted British arguments of the necessities of war by invoking international law, under which ships of a belligerent power have the right to seek shelter in a neutral harbor for 24 hours. Then he asked, "Why do the British navy and air force interfere almost exclusively with France, her ports and her ships?"

Accepts Place in New Order.

Sections of the vice premier's statement indicated that it surpassed the bounds of a formal protest against

Surprise Edict Slaps Limit on English Buying

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 31. — A surprise order effective at midnight will place Britain under a clothes rationing system and make it impossible for any Briton to buy garments without coupons.

The order, which was issued by the board of trade, a government department, fell upon the public like a bombshell. The news found much space in the Sunday newspapers, ousting the war from the front pages. The Sunday Pictorial filled five and a half of its 16 pages with information concerning this "most sweeping order of the war."

Secrecy Bars Rush To Buy.

Authorities had been so careful to preserve secrecy and prevent a rush to buy from available stocks that the rationing coupons have not yet been printed. Until they are issued, the people will use surplus ration books intended for the purchase of margarine.

Every one is entitled to 66 coupons a year. Regardless of the price of any article specified, coupons are required for its purchase. The most costly gown from an exclusive West End salon calls for the same number of coupons as the cheapest frock from the most humble East End shop.

The order applies to clothing, cloth, footwear, and knitting wool. Exempted are hats, caps, workmen's overalls, ready made baby clothes, boots, garters, suspenders, laces, fabrics less than three inches wide, sewing thread, and secondhand items.

What Coupons Will Buy.

For a new dress, a woman must part with 11 of her 66 coupons. To obtain a shirt, a man has to produce eight coupons; for a suit, 26 coupons.

At the most, a woman will be able to buy no more than six dresses annually, and to do this she will have to forego all other items of clothing or shoes.

A man can buy two suits, one shirt, five collars, and a necktie. If he wants shoes, socks, and underwear he'll have to forego one suit.

A man wanting a nightshirt or pajamas will have to relinquish eight coupons. The same purchase for a child, however, requires only six coupons.

Other items, with the number of coupons required, are: Slacks, 8; an apron, 3; a pair of stockings, 2; galoshes, for adults, 4; for a child, 2; dressing gown, 8; bathing suit, for an adult, 4; for a child, 3.

Dressmakers Restricted.

Personal tailors and dressmakers come under the restrictions, as well as stores, and coupons must be surrendered for such purchases. Stores will obtain new supplies on a basis of coupons received.

A chief objective of the plan, the board of trade said, is to overcome faulty distribution brought about by changes in the population due to evacuation. It explained further that rationing also prevents hoarding and places every one on an equal footing.

[Clothing rationing was introduced in Germany at the start of the war, and Germans have bought on a point system, by which every article of clothing takes a certain number of points from a yearly quota. Rationing of clothes was introduced in France early this spring and has been in effect in Switzerland for some time.]

BRITISH PLANES BOMB AIRDROME IN SYRIAN RAID

BERNE, Switzerland, June 1 [Sunday]—(AP).—A Havas, French news agency, dispatch from Beirut, Lebanon, reported early today four British planes bombed the Neirab airdrome near Aleppo, in French mandated Syria, at 4:30 p. m. yesterday.

Gunfire in Mediterranean.

LONDON, June 1 [Sunday]—(AP).—A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from Vichy said reports from Algeciras, Spain, told of heavy gunfire from the direction of the Mediterranean early this morning. Algeciras is just across the bay from Gibraltar.

Pope Pius XII. Delivers a Radio Message Today

ROME, May 31.—Pope Pius XII. will deliver a radio message at 6 a. m. [Chicago time] tomorrow which will deal principally with economic and social questions. The speech is based largely on the text of an encyclical issued by Pope Leo XIII. on May 15, 1891. That encyclical, known as "Rerum Novarum," stated the Roman Catholic church's social doctrine.

IRAQ GIVES UP TO BRITISH; ASKS FOR ARMISTICE

Bagdad Falls; Hear Nazi Planes Flee.

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—German airmen who went belatedly to Iraq to bolster the axis inspired war against Britain were reported fleeing the country tonight as Iraqi resistance collapsed.

Iraqi troops and a citizens' committee which took charge in Bagdad joined in asking the British for an armistice. British imperial advance forces entered the disorderly capital, a Palestinian motorized column leading the way.

Negotiation of armistice terms for the whole country is under way with the Iraqi commander, Gen. Mourad Mahmoud, and the mayor of Bagdad, Arshad el Umari, British authorities said.

"Whole Thing Is Over."

"As between ourselves and the rebels, the whole thing is over," they added.

[A British broadcast heard in New York said terms for the armistice already had been agreed upon and put into effect. The radio, quoting a communique issued in Bagdad, said the armistice "safeguards Iraq's unity and independence."]

The mayor, who with a committee of four sought to restore order in Bagdad and put down wandering bands of looters, announced that the people desired Regent Emir Abdul Ilah to return and restore a constitutional government for the peace and independence of Iraq. The Emir was last reported in Iraq, closely following the British march on Bagdad, and may already have returned to his capital.

Crosses Border into Iran.

The pro-German premier, Rashid Ali Al Gailani, who seized power from the Emir April 4 and started fighting the British on May 2, had made good his flight to Iran [Persia].

He and a party of 30 crossed the border at Qasr-i-Shirin yesterday. Among them was his chief of staff, Amin Zaki; the Italian minister to Bagdad and his staff; that old foe of Britain, the former Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin Husseini; and Adolf Hitler's expert on Arabian affairs, Dr. Fritz Grobba.

Former German minister to Iraq and Saudi Arabia, Grobba secretly returned to Bagdad when the Rashid Ali began his coup.

Doubt King is Hostage.

Officials quarters here chose to regard as "most unlikely" reports that Grobba and the Rashid Ali had taken with them the 6 year old King Feisal II. as a possible hostage for future bargaining with Britain.

British news dispatches said Arab irregulars indulged in an orgy of looting and shooting in Bagdad after the government heads fled.

[The British broadcast, which reported the armistice had been concluded, said Bagdad had returned to normal with the blackout lifted.]

A reliable British source commented that the Rashid Ali's flight to Iran rather than to the German base at Mosul "shows the faith he places in the protection the Germans can give him."

This was followed quickly by reports via Cairo that the German planes were flying out also, but it was not disclosed whither they were bound.

THE PROMISE

President Roosevelt, on October 30, 1940, speaking to fathers and mothers on the selective service act:

"And while I am talking to you mothers and fathers, I give you one more assurance.

"I have said this before, but I shall say it again and again. Your boys are not going to be sent into any foreign wars.

"They are going into training to form a force so strong that, by its very existence, it will keep the threat of war far away from our shores.

"The purpose of our defense is defense."

119 SURVIVORS OF ZAMZAM IN SPAIN EN ROUTE TO U. S.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, at the French frontier, May 31 (AP).—A United States embassy official said today he would go Monday to Biarritz, in occupied France, to find out why 21 American ambulance drivers were detained while 119 other American survivors from the Egyptian liner Zamzam were permitted to enter Spain en route to Lisbon and probably New York.

The ambulance men were confined to a hotel in Biarritz. A representative of the Berlin foreign office ordered them held, saying their cases would be decided in Berlin.

The Americans reported that Germans referred repeatedly to "bad treatment" they said was given German sailors arrested in American ports.

Tell of Sinking.

Reaching Spain among the survivors of the ship, torpedoed by a German raider in the South Atlantic, were many missionaries and their families.

The group stopped here briefly and were supplied with needed clothing by the Red Cross. Some of the missionaries objected to being returned to the United States, saying they wanted to go on to their original destinations in Africa. An American born Dachshund named "Willy," belonging to one of the missionary families and rescued from the Zamzam, was with the party.

Many of the Americans told of their 30 days at sea aboard the Dresden, the German merchant ship which took them after the Zamzam was sunk.

Women and younger children were assigned to cabins and mattresses—some of which were moved from the Zamzam—in the salons forward. The boys from 3 to 11 years of age joined the men in the after holds. Martin Conboy of Westfield, N. J., who was en route to Johannesburg for an American mattress factory, helped the men to make mattresses from cotton they found in the hold.

Allowed Two Hour Visits.

The women were allowed to visit the men from 10 a. m. to noon and at other hours they were permitted to wave to each other or shout across the deck. They said German lookouts sighted British convoys four times off the French coast, and these incidents delayed their arrival by five days.

All were given one slice of bread and butter for breakfast, soup at midday and another slice of bread and butter in the evening. When a committee protested two days before docking, children and pregnant women were allowed rations of milk.

William P. Fix, who said he lost 30 pounds during the voyage, could not find a pair of trousers big enough in San Sebastian, so he welcomed a topcoat to hide large holes in the seat of those he was wearing.

Family Tossed Into Water.

W. H. Edwards and his wife, Edna, missionaries of Detroit, Mich., who were en route to their post in the Belgian Congo, also were aboard the British liner Athenia when it was sunk the first week of the war. They said the sinking of the Zamzam was "more pleasant," since she was hit at dawn instead of at night.

Mrs. Lillian Danielson of Lindsborg, Kas., said she and her six children were thrown into the water when their lifeboat capsized but were picked up by the German rescue boat.

Seventeen American born priests of the French-Canadian brotherhood who were traveling on Canadian passports declined a German offer to release them, saying they preferred to remain in France.

INJURIES IN FALL FATAL.

Mrs. Sophie Heywood, 67 years old, Hebron, Ind., died yesterday in St. Bernard's hospital of injuries suffered Tuesday in a fall in the home of a friend at 5719 Normal boulevard.

In French Council

Britain's attitude and showed a preference for collaboration with Germany.

"That London should treat us like a continental Ireland, even like a colony, matters little to me," said Darlan, "for I intend to act in such manner that France shall recover her place as a power in Europe and in the universe. That implies that she shall participate in the construction of the new order, that she shall act toward hastening the hour of peace in Europe, for if British imperialism needs war in order to destroy Europe, France has need of peace in order to live and to grow as one of the essential parts of that Europe."

In another passage, he declared:

"In a victorious Anglo-Saxon world, France would become only a second rate dominion, an outside body within a system where she would have no honorable rôle to play."

Britain's Offenses Listed.

The admiral recapitulated grievances against Britain since the armistice—the taking of New Caledonia, the occupation of equatorial Africa, the attack on Dakar and the killing of 1,500 sailors at Mers el-Kebir, Africa, "for no other valid reason than the destruction of France as a naval power."

Darlan declared Britain's course has been set by an old plan: "Divide Europe in order to rule and trade as she will."

Answering those who argue that a British victory "would save France from slavery," Darlan said:

"In the more than improbable event of a British victory, we know Britain would be inspired solely by her own interests, whatever might have been our attitude during the war."

SQUARE DIVISION VS. TRIANGULAR; WHICH IS BETTER?

Army Officers Discuss Relative Merits.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Manchester, Tenn., May 31.—Preparations for the 2d army maneuvers, beginning in this area Monday, have led to wide discussion of the relative merits of square and triangular divisions.

The new streamlined triangular division consists of three regiments of infantry, two regiments of field artillery, a signal company, one engineer battalion, one medical battalion, and one quartermaster battalion. The older square division consists of two brigades of two regiments each of infantry, a brigade—three regiments—of field artillery, a regiment of engineers, a quartermaster regiment, and a medical regiment.

All National Guard divisions are square; those of the regular army have been streamlined into triangular units.

Included in the 77,000 troops here for the maneuver are the 5th [regular] division from Fort Custer, Mich.; the 27th [New York National Guard] from Fort McClelland, Ala.; the 30th [Tennessee, Georgia, North and South Carolina National Guard] division from Fort Jackson, S. C., and the 2d [regular] armored division from Fort Benning, Ga.

Division of Specialists.

Of the three infantry divisions, only the 5th is triangular. While the 2d armored division is modern, its organization necessarily is different from an infantry division. Men of the 2d armored division are hand-picked professional soldiers, and the function of the division requires that each man be a specialist.

Theoretically all armies are created for defense, but military leaders thruout the world hold to the maxim that the best defense is an attack, and this is especially true since the advent of mechanization.

In setting up the triangular divisions the army command sought tremendous striking power. To obtain this power it was necessary to have a highly mobile and flexible organization, plus simplification of command. This has been accomplished by elimination of the brigade command, providing each infantry regiment with a greater variety of weapons and motorization.

Units Able to Act Alone.

With the elimination of the brigade command, division orders are transmitted to regimental commanders who not only have riflemen under their command, but machine guns and mortars, all of which permits a wide range of action without requiring the coöperation of other regiments. In other words, the triangular division's regiments actually are small divisions and are almost entirely self-contained.

Army officers still see a need for the square division. With the powerful triangular and armored divisions for shock troops to smash thru enemy lines, the square divisions would be used for support and as a holding and mopping up force.

It has been suggested that National Guard divisions were retained in their square form to save the commissions of 75 brigadier generals, but army men say this is not true. They say the brigade command is needed in the larger division, with 18,000 men, whereas it is not needed in the triangular division, with only 10,894 men.

What the United States army is trying to do, according to Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the 2d army, is to put the best possible force into the field with the men and materiel at hand.

DUBLIN COLLECTS BOMB PIECES TO ESTABLISH GUILT

Hunt for 25 Missing; 27 Killed by Raiders.

DUBLIN, May 31 (AP).—Authorities tonight preserved for future examination fragments of four bombs which unidentified warplanes dropped on this neutral capital early today, leaving 27 persons known dead, 25 missing, and probably 200 injured.

The government declined, however, to speculate on the identity of the bombers in this third and worst attack Dublin has suffered. Unidentified planes killed three persons and injured 12 the night of Jan. 2-3, and bombs again were dropped May 5, without causing casualties.

[Strongly suggesting the identity of the raiders, RAF headquarters at Belfast, in British ruled Northern Ireland, announced that German planes crossed that territory during the night, but dropped no bombs.]

De Valera Views Scene.

His face set in hard lines, Prime Minister Eamon de Valera visited the bombing scenes today, striding around among the wreckage of at least 10 residences and 14 business establishments as workmen searched for the missing.

Determined to preserve this country's neutrality, he made no comment.

Expressing doubt that the bombing was intentional, police said Irish anti-aircraft guns began to fire at planes overhead shortly after midnight, but that the bombs were not dropped until 2 a. m. They theorized a plane may have been hit and forced to jettison its explosives.

Windows in U. S. Legation Broken.

One of the bombs fell about a quarter of a mile from the United States legation in Phoenix park. American Minister David Gray said the concussion shattered a skylight near the front door. Windows also were broken in the official residence of President Douglas Hyde, which is nearby.

[American circles in London immediately speculated on the possibility the Dublin bombing was a German warning against Irish collaboration with the United States in the aid Britain program—a topic which is understood to be again in an informal discussion stage. These circles mentioned that Ireland's situation under the blockade is becoming increasingly difficult. Hints have been dropped indicating some American quarters are considering support for De Valera's ambition of a united Ireland in return for use of Irish ports by American and possibly by British ships.]

JAP-CHINESE ROBBER TEAM MAKES A BIG JOB LOOK VERY EASY

SHANGHAI, May 31.—Two men, one a Japanese, the other a Chinese, today drove off with 2,500,000 dollars [Chinese] from the central postoffice here [About 125,000 American dollars].

The money was being loaded into an armored van for delivery to various banks and postoffices by five Chinese coolies.

A sedan, with the Japanese at the wheel, drove into the postoffice compound. The Japanese ordered that the money be transferred into his car. The Chinese coolies, apparently assuming the Japanese to be a high official, complied. The operation was completed in 10 minutes, and the Japanese and his Chinese accomplice drove off.

Japanese authorities, suspecting collusion because of the quick compliance of the coolies, now are questioning Chinese employés of the postoffice.

COL. M'CORMICK TERMS AIR FORCE BAR TO INVASION

Reviews Role of Planes in Naval Battles.

North America cannot be invaded if it is amply guarded by aviation, Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, said last night in an address over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. The address was made during the Chicagoland hour. Despite the rain and bad weather every seat in the studio was filled.

Col. McCormick reviewed naval engagements of the last week and said: "On the open ocean an aircraft carrier would now appear to be enormously superior to a battleship, perhaps to a whole fleet of battleships." He said the United States is fortunate in having air bases so far from other lands that airplanes may not be flown to attack them and can be protected by land aviation from attack by airplane carrier. He said acquisition of bases from Newfoundland to Trinidad and British Guiana likewise was fortunate and that the nation should bend every effort to obtain a base at Natal or Pernambuco in Brazil.

"The inescapable lessons of last week are that airplanes dominate surface craft; that planes from landing fields dominate planes from aircraft carriers," Col. McCormick said. "In consequence, islands that are distant from an enemy—and a thousand times more—a self-contained continent like North America, amply guarded by aviation, cannot be invaded by any nation or by all the nations on earth."

TEXT OF ADDRESS

The following is the text of Col. McCormick's address:

"I will talk to you tonight about the strength of the different navies of the world.

"As this strength is made up of the comparative numbers of ships, I suggest that you take out your pencils and write down the figures as I give them to you.

"Until this week, at any rate, the strength of navies was principally reckoned by the number of their battleships.

"Battleships may be said to be ships displacing more than 20,000 tons, carrying protective armor at least 8 inches thick, with a principal battery of guns firing shells from 12 to 16 inches in diameter, each from 5 to 8 feet in length.

Probability of Hits Greater.

"It is obvious that the larger shells go faster, hit harder, penetrate a greater thickness of armor and carry larger bursting charges than smaller shells. Thus a 16 inch shell has nearly two and one-half times the punishing force of a 14 inch shell. As against this advantage, ships of the same size can carry twelve 14 inch guns but only eight 16 inch guns, and therefore the probability of making hits on an enemy is half again as great with the lighter guns.

"We have 17 battleships.

"Since the loss of the Hood, Great Britain has 16 battleships, of which one, the Malaya, is undergoing repairs in New York harbor. Two others were damaged last week in the battle of Crete, and it may be that still others are being repaired in American, Canadian, or other unbombed shipyards. Congressman Fish told the house of representatives last week that our navy yards are filled with damaged British vessels.

Germany Has 3 Battleships.

"Germany has three battleships, two of which are in French ports and have been heavily bombed by British aviation and are presumably damaged. Germany also has two so-called pocket battleships. These displace 10,000 tons each, fire six 11 inch guns, and are lightly armored. One of this class was driven into Montevideo by one British heavy cruiser and two British light cruisers.

"Japan has 13 battleships.

"So much for battleships. What about cruisers?

"Heavy cruisers are ships of about 10,000 tons displacement, carrying armor up to 5 inches thick, with guns that do not exceed 8 inches in caliber.

"Light cruisers carry little or no armor and guns from 6 inches downward.

"Heavy cruisers are faster than battleships. Light cruisers are faster than heavy cruisers.

"Of heavy cruisers we have 18; Great Britain something less than 15; Japan 12; Germany 6; Russia 5.

U. S. Has 19 Light Cruisers.

"Of light cruisers we have 19; Great Britain had 50 and now has that number minus as many as have been destroyed or damaged in recent actions; Japan has 23; Germany 6; Russia 2.

"Some 50 years ago a man named Whitehead invented self-propelling torpedoes. Immediately small, fast steamboats were built to carry these torpedoes to a place from which they could be launched to travel under their own power to their target.

"To protect capital ships against torpedo boats, torpedo boat destroyers were built, larger, faster, and better armed than torpedo boats. Then the building of torpedo boats was stopped, to be revived recently in the form of hydroplanes driven by internal combustion engines. Great claims are made as to the efficiency of these little ships, but no dependable information upon them has come to my notice.

"Of destroyers, after giving 50 or more to Great Britain, we retain 156; Great Britain has 173, less losses; Japan, 118; Germany, 13; Russia, 91.

102 Submarines in U. S. Navy.

"In submarines we far exceed any country except Russia, for we have 102; Great Britain has 51; Japan, 64; Germany, perhaps 50 or 60 left intact; Russia, allegedly 170.

"Returning to the subject of battleships, our battleships, following the tradition of the war of 1812, are more heavily armed and more heavily armored than those of other countries, and this is also true of our cruisers.

"Taking into account the wear and tear on the British and German ships, which is constantly going on, it is fair to assume that our navy is considerably stronger than those two navies combined, if it were possible to conceive of their getting together.

"The Russian navy has never been efficient.

"The Italian and French navies are so broken as to be negligible.

Fleet Kept in Own Waters.

"The Japanese navy has a splendid record for victories, largely because it has had the good sense to keep the fleet in its own waters, where it fought to great advantage. Its fleet is designed to fight in its home waters, and does not carry fuel enough to go far from Nippon.

"When I described last week the various ways airplanes could attack battleships, I did not suspect that my theory would be so soon justified and by a semiobsolete plane against the newest and most powerful battleship afloat.

"Early in the war, the battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau sank the British aircraft carrier Glorious. That would now appear to have been because of recklessness on the part of the captain of the Glorious in getting in range of the battleships' guns, or because the carrier was caught in narrow waters.

"But last week, after the German battleship Bismarck, in action with the British battleships Hood and Prince of Wales, had sunk the Hood, the Bismarck was defeated by the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal.

Ship Against Ship.

"It was ship against ship. The Ark Royal, out of sight of the Bismarck, sent over torpedo planes which crippled the battleship. Not a plane or a man from the aircraft carrier was injured in destroying the 100 million dollar battleship and over a thousand of its crew. The defeated battleship was then successfully attacked by torpedo boat destroyers; then the British battleship fleet came up and engaged it with fire but could not sink it. Finally the cruiser Dorsetshire sank the wreck with torpedoes. You can hardly conceive it!

"It is claimed for the battleship that the Bismarck was not accompanied by torpedo boat destroyers, as is contemplated in the use of battleships, but if the battleship could not resist the airplane torpedo it is pretty tenuous to suggest that a frail destroyer could have done so.

Troops Bombed on Island.

"On the open ocean an aircraft carrier would now appear to be enormously superior to a battleship, perhaps to a whole fleet of battleships. Billy Mitchell told me this would happen, six or seven years ago.

"At the very moment this epic battle was being fought German bombers, operating from Greece, were driving the British fleet from the waters north of Crete, sinking and damaging many of its ships, and were bombing the troops on that island, and landing parachutists and air infantry.

"Torpedo planes can attack ships supposedly safe in port. The sinking of three Italian ships in the harbor of Otranto was laid by most to Italian inefficiency, but in view of the Bismarck-Ark Royal battle we must conclude that it was a normal operation of war.

"Turning then to aircraft carriers, we find that Great Britain has eight, of which one, the Illustrious, was badly damaged by bombs from land planes off Malta; Japan has seven; we have six; Germany two. France has one practically interned at Martinique

"We may be fortunate that our navy program has bogged down. Ships that started as battleships perhaps will be finished as aircraft carriers. It is likely, furthermore, that the experiences of the war may considerably change aircraft carrier design.

Planes and Carriers Limited.

"The old saying that a gun on shore is worth two on a ship is more than true of aviation. Aircraft carriers must be limited in size, and in turn the airplanes they carry must be limited in size and in performance so that they may take off and land on the carrier's deck. Airplanes flying from land have no such limitation. They may be as large as desired, armored and equipped with engines of enormous power. Airplanes from carriers will never be able to contend against airplanes from landing fields.

"Just as airplanes must come down to refuel, to be repaired, and to rest the crew, so navies must come into bases. Air ports may be camouflaged and are easily built and repaired. Dock yards are costly, difficult to repair, and cannot be concealed.

"We now learn that the German blockade of Great Britain is carried on almost exclusively by bombing ships in the British harbors, bombing docks and warehouses, and dropping torpedoes in the harbors.

"Perhaps the most significant development of air war is that it has rendered every naval base in Europe unsafe.

British Ships Take Refuge.

"Damaged British ships have taken refuge in American ports but there is no refuge for damaged German ships. It may well be that the inferior British air force will wipe out that part of the German navy which is not tracked down and sunk by the British navy.

"Lucky for us that Seward bought Alaska, that Grant took Samoa, and McKinley Haiti. Here we have air bases so far from other lands that airplanes may not be flown to attack them, and they can be protected by land aviation from any attack by airplane carrier.

"Fortunate are we to have bases from Newfoundland to Trinidad and British Guiana. We should bend every effort to obtain a base at Natal or Pernambuco in Brazil, thus shutting South America to foreign invasion as our Pacific and Atlantic bases shut off North America from attack.

"The inescapable lessons of last week are that airplanes dominate surface craft; that planes from landing fields dominate planes from aircraft carriers. In consequence, islands that are distant from an enemy—and a thousand times more—a self-contained continent like North America, amply guarded by aviation, cannot be invaded by any nation or by all the nations on earth."

CHICAGOLAND HOUR

Robert Spiro, a baritone who won first place vocal award in the Chicagoland Music Festival two years ago, was guest soloist on the musical portion of the Chicagoland hour. It was his final appearance in radio before entering the army. Spiro sang "Your Land and My Land," from "My Maryland," being joined by the W-G-N chorus.

Spiro, Attilio Baggiore, and Gunther Decker, a member of the chorus, presented three songs from Romberg's "The Desert Song." Spiro sang "Many Loves," Baggiore "One Flower," and Decker "One Alone." The three also joined in "One Alone." Baggiore and the chorus also presented "Someday," by Friml.

Marion Claire sang "Yours Is My Heart Alone," by Lehar, and with the chorus presented "O, Promise Me." She and Baggiore joined the chorus and the W-G-N orchestra in a group of Victor Herbert songs, including "My Little Gypsy Sweetheart," "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and "Romany Life."

The orchestra presented "Rakoczy March," from "The Damnation of Faust," and "Artist's Life," by Johann Strauss. The orchestra was directed by Henry Weber. The program was produced by William A. Bacher. John Weigel was the announcer.

NAZI NAVAL CHIEF IN NORWAY ENDS LIFE, SAY NORSE

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—Norwegian sources here tonight said a German Admiral Bohn, described as Nazi naval commander in chief in Norway and a friend of Rudolf Hess, recently committed suicide in Oslo after a visit from Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler. These circles reported Bohn's friendship with Adolf Hitler's deputy fuehrer, who flew to Scotland May 10, figured in Bohn's talks with Himmler.

[The British radio yesterday said reports reaching London confirmed the arrest of Maj. Gen. Prof. Dr. Karl E. F. Haushofer, Hitler's No. 1 "brain truster" and close friend of Hess. A lecture by the 72 year old Munich professor, BBC said, was scheduled for May 24 at Strasbourg, but was called off. The broadcast, heard in New York by CBS, said that in the Zeitschrift Fuer Geopolitik, Haushofer, its editor, "made veiled references to the dangers which are threatening Germany in the east."]

[It added that Hess shared "Haushofer's fears of the future of Germany." The Germans have denied Haushofer was arrested.]

Captain of Italian Ship Given a 3 Year Sentence

Savannah, Ga., May 31 (AP).—Capt. Gino Fillini, master of the Italian freighter Clara, was sentenced today to serve three years for violation of a federal law in damaging the engines of the ship. Four members of his crew received sentences of two years each. Sentence was imposed by Judge Bascom S. Deaver, presiding in United States district court, after a jury rendered a guilty verdict last night. Capt. Fillini testified that he had received orders from the Italian naval attaché March 28 to damage the ship's machinery.

Slash Rations for Cattle, Poultry, Hogs in Norway

OSLO, Norway, May 31 (AP).—The Norwegian provisioning department, in an effort to conserve feed supplies, today announced a 30 per cent reduction in proteins for hogs, poultry, and fur-bearing animals. Proteins were eliminated entirely from foodstuffs approved for horses, cattle, sheep, goats, and rabbits, and carbohydrates were forbidden the latter.

SAYS GERMANS WEREN'T ON WAY TO MARTINIQUE

Washington, D. C., May 31 [Special].—The French embassy tonight denied published statements that 210 German passengers on board the ship Winnipeg, a French passenger liner recently intercepted by a British cruiser, were bound for Martinique, French island in the Caribbean. The vessel was taken to Port of Spain, Trinidad, by the British. The embassy said:

"The French embassy wishes to protest against false interpretations of this information implying that these Germans had been authorized to settle down in this island. The French embassy deplores this insinuating presentation of the facts which can only serve to increase the difficulties that the French government has to solve in order to facilitate the departure from France of political refugees.

"In fact, all foreign passengers aboard the Winnipeg were emigrants to South American republics, provided with visas delivered by South American consular authorities and in transit thru Madagascar."

BRITISH FLEEING CRETE POUNDED BY NAZI PLANES

German Army 'Ready' for Its Next Move.

BERLIN, May 31 (AP).—The Nazi air force, bent upon a speedy cleanup of Crete, tonight harassed scattered British forces which the high command said were fleeing from the eastern Mediterranean island. The German army was pronounced ready for the next job ahead.

The high command said some of the imperial forces had escaped to Gavdos Island, 25 miles south of Crete, and that these, along with others attempting to get away from southern Cretan ports, were under a relentless aerial attack.

Germany's main land forces on Crete were pushing steadily along the northern coastal plain from the west in pursuit of the British and the Greeks. A juncture was expected shortly with Italian troops moving from the eastern end of the island.

Flight to Southern Shore.

All that remains of the Crete campaign, Germans said, is the flight of the British and the Greeks to the southern shore, every mile of the rocky route under the bombing and machine gunning of the air force.

Dive bombers were concentrating on the few ports there and ships in the waters to the south. A British destroyer was reported so badly damaged in these waters that its loss was apparent.

The high command indicated British forces reaching Gavdos were cut off from communication with their main forces, since it asserted that the signal station on the islet had been destroyed.

The reported presence of British naval units in south Cretan waters was taken to mean the fleet had come back to cover British withdrawal efforts.

Reluctant About Predictions.

Germans were reluctant, as usual, to make predictions, but it was obvious they expected to take a considerable number of prisoners.

Strategists took account of the commanding position Germany has won in the eastern Mediterranean. Speculation as to "what next" in this region included Axis-encircled Tobruk in North Africa, Alexandria, the base of Britain's eastern Mediterranean fleet; the British held island of Cyprus, and Suez.

Observers said that with the luftwaffe firmly based on Crete, the Germans are in an especially favorable position to deliver smashing blows at Tobruk whenever they chose. Crete is only 200 miles from Tobruk, bypassed by the axis forces in their land drive across North Africa toward Suez.

Too, the distance to Suez is only 475 miles, which, it was noted here, presents no more of a problem than an ordinary bombing raid to Liverpool.

British Report Big Air Battle.

CAIRO, Egypt, May 31 (AP).—With Crete all but lost to Britain, the war rocketed toward a new phase today in a running battle between strong RAF forces and a cloud of German warplanes high above the eastern Mediterranean.

The Cretan situation was best shown in the fact that the British middle east command did not even issue a communique up to a late hour today. The RAF mentioned that it had bombed the airdrome and beach o. Malemi, Crete, Thursday night, but that was all.

The RAF devoted most of its communique to a restrained announcement that a large force of British fighter planes on patrol made "contact" with a big formation of Germans, sending two Heinkels plunging into the sea and damaging "many" others so badly they probably did not get back to their bases.

General Is "Alive."

Altho the British prepared themselves for bad news from Crete's land forces, an indication that the fight continued was seen in a war office announcement from London that the imperial commander in Crete, Maj. Gen. B. C. Freyberg, "is alive and with his troops."

This was in denial of German broadcasts yesterday that he had been killed while flying from Crete to Egypt—an accusation that he had deserted his hard pressed men.

In preparation for the expected expansion of the overwater air war once Crete is lost, the RAF already has been using Hurricane fighters with extra gasoline tanks and medium bombers specially fitted out as fighters.

Raid German Bases.

With these they repeatedly have raided Crete, Scarpanto, and German held Greece bases.

In that phase, however, the RAF was at a disadvantage in having to fly more than 400 miles over water to the fighting scene with planes whose efficiency was reduced by the extra gasoline loads. Such operations were admittedly dangerous, with a high percentage of losses. The Germans had several bases 100 miles or less from Crete. Now the distance factor is getting nearer into balance.

Criticizing the Crete campaign, the London Sunday Times air correspondent will say tomorrow "In Crete a mistake appears to have been made in allowing the enemy to gain possession of an airdrome [Malemi] on which transport airplanes could operate. That airdrome should have been blasted and obstructed and disorganized so no airplane would be able to land on it until after weeks of repair work."

Time For Other Tasks.

The battle of Crete, authorities asserted, enabled Britain to spend the intervening time on these jobs:

1. Wiping out the Iraqi trouble; 2. Winding up the Ethiopian campaign; 3. Preparations to meet the axis threat to Suez from Libya; 4. Resting, reorganizing and reëquipping Gen. Wavell's forces after the battle of Greece.

6 GERMAN SHIPS MEET AT SEA AFTER LEAVING CHILE; HEAD FOR JAPAN

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 31.—Naval circles in Valparaiso today disclosed that six German ships that left Chilean ports simultaneously last week, fully loaded with food and agricultural products, met the following day in the open sea and are proceeding toward Japan. A report says the ships will refuel at a Japanese island and continue on to Vladivostok to unload their cargo for delivery to Germany by rail across Russia. Officers from the German training vessel Priwall, four masted bark, at anchor at Valparaiso since the beginning of the war, were said to have taken charge of two German ships, the Bogota and the Quito, when they left the port of Coquimbo. All naval cadets from the Priwall were reported to have been distributed among the six ships before their departure.

TEST MENTALITY OF "FUEHRER" OF CHILE NAZI PARTY

BY NORMAN INGREY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 31.—The "fuehrer" of Chile's Nazi party, Deputy Jorge Gonzales von Marees, is being held at his home here under "clinical" observation as the result of a recent raid by a band of young Chilean Nazis on the Radical party convention. In the attack one delegate was slain and another wounded.

Jorge G. von Marees.

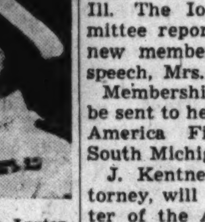
First placed in the state insane asylum on the order of Premier Arturo Olavarria, Von Marees within a few hours escaped and took refuge in the chamber of deputies, of which he is a member. Protected by his congressional immunity, he defied the officials. However, the Appeals court ruled in effect that the government's decision to send him to the asylum must stand, but with the reservation that the "clinical observation" which was ordered for him might take place in his home.

After the raid on the Radical convention, Premier Olavarria issued an order blaming Von Marees for the invasion of the party meeting. He pointed out that the Chilean Nazis are mostly boys under 20 years who are "blindly obedient" to the Messianic suggestions of a leader who teaches homicide as something ennobling and glorifying for youths. Olavarria said Von Marees impressed the boys by his hierarchy, gestures, and attitudes contrary to those used by a politician of normal mentality.

BRITISH ARRANGE TO REOPEN SALE OF OIL TO SIAM

U. S. Firms Also May Resume Trade.

SINGAPORE, May 31 (AP).—British and Thai [Siamese] representatives arranged today for at least partial resumption of petroleum sales to Thailand by British and, possibly, United States oil companies after a lapse of almost two years.



Sir Geoffrey Layton.

Shell, Standard Oil, and Texaco had withdrawn from the Thailand market because of the stringency of the kingdom's control regulations.

British Vice Admiral Sir Geoffrey Layton said after a conference with Thai representatives that discussions were so satisfactory that arrangements were being concluded directly with the companies, without negotiations with the Bangkok government.

Since withdrawal of their marketing organizations from Thailand, the companies have supplied crude oil sufficient for the minimum needs of the government, but not enough for Thai's commercial needs.

British and American crude oil is refined in Thailand in a Japanese built plant at Bangkok.

The announcement today followed a Bangkok denial that the Thai government had contracted for large quantities of petroleum from Japan and Russia on a partial barter basis. Oil authorities, however, said Thailand had obtained a small oil supply from both countries.

5 Indiana Counties Vote Against Convoys and War

Kokomo, Ind., May 31 [Special].—A poll conducted by the Kokomo Tribune resulted today in an overwhelming vote against use of United States warships in convoying supplies to Great Britain and against American entry into the war. Residents of five counties covered by the Tribune took part in the poll, which showed 89.8 per cent of them opposed to convoys and 95.6 per cent against entering the war and sending American troops abroad.

AMERICA FIRST TELLS OF GAINS IN MEMBERS SINCE FIRESIDE CHAT

More than 6,000 new members have joined the Illinois America First committee since President Roosevelt's fireside chat Tuesday, Mrs. Janet Ayer Fairbank, national vice chairman, announced yesterday. She said the 98 units in Illinois now have 236,000 members. New chapters were formed last week in Midlothian, Maywood, Warrenville, Yorkville, and Streator, Ill. The Iowa America First committee reported an addition of 2,000 new members since the President's speech, Mrs. Fairbank said.

Memberships and contributions may be sent to headquarters of the Illinois America First committee at 122 South Michigan avenue, she said.

J. Kentner Elliott, a Chicago attorney, will address the Loyola chapter of the America First committee at 6519 Sheridan road at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Walter F. Boye, an attorney and author, will speak at the same hour before the Oak Park chapter in the unit's headquarters at 736 Lake street in the suburb.

Masonry Tumbling from Building Perils Passersby

A stone cornice and several rows of bricks crashed to the sidewalk from the roof of a two story building at 2653 North avenue yesterday, endangering several pedestrians. Police said the masonry apparently was weakened by rain and vibration caused by street traffic.

JAPAN HITS U. S. INFLUENCE ON DUTCH TRADING

Lashes Export Control in Philippines.

TOKIO, June 1 [Sunday] (AP).—The Times Advertiser, which is controled by the Japanese foreign office, carried a double barrelled attack on United States policies today under the headings "Influence on the Dutch" and "Unnatural Restriction."

Referring to Japanese negotiations with the Netherlands East Indies, the editorial said. "It is obvious that the Dutch government in London and the island administration are not acting alone. They are subject to the persuasive influence of the United States and Britain.

"Allowance can be made for the military needs of Britain, yet there is a substantial surplus [of East Indies products] which must be left to other nations in this geographical area.

Sees "Indirect Hostility."

"In such things as rubber, oil, tin, and quinine, nations within the co-prosperity sphere [the Japanese ideal for east Asia] have a natural right of exchange.

"Influence [of the United States and Britain] should be employed in a reasonable effort at a solution. Procrastination can only be set down as indirect hostility.

"The trifling charges that Japan can be used as a re-export base for Britain's enemies cannot stand in the light of known transportation conditions and other impediments, the chief of which is Japan's own national requirements."

Nothing in recent months has aroused such a storm of criticism in the Japanese press as the long delay in the Japanese trade negotiations with the Indies.

The Times Advertiser referred to extension of United States export control regulations to the Philippines, and said:

"Japan is not at war with the United States, and a prohibition of supplies in the circumstances is highly provocative.

"The Philippines are anxious to continue trade with Japan, their established customer. They should brook no artificial measures of blockade."

The Japanese navy ministry in a war summary issued yesterday said Chinese forces received 100 warplanes from the United States in February, citing this as the reason for increased Japanese air raids on the Burma road.

Report 121 Destroyed.

The summary said Chungking, China, would be bombed at every opportunity and claimed 121 Chinese aircraft had been destroyed in the last five months, including 30 new ones of Russian manufacture.

The newspaper Chugai, supporting Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's pledge of fulfillment of Japan's axis obligations, at the same time urged improvement of relations with the United States.

"We believe the United States wants world peace," it said. "If this is the case, the United States should coöperate with Japan."

Couple and Three Children Found Dead in Cemetery

Fresno, Cal., May 31 (AP).—A Japanese couple and their three children, a funeral wreath resting on the blanket which covered them, were found dead in a cemetery today. They were poisoned in what Undersheriff John Ford said was a murder and suicide pact.

BROOKS CHEERED AS HE REMINDS F. D. R. OF PLEDGE

Warns Racine Audience to Expect Name Calling.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Racine, Wis., May 31.—United States Senator Wayland Brooks [R., Ill.] was cheered by an audience of Racine fathers and mothers tonight when he called upon President Roosevelt to keep his election pledge that no American boys would be sent to fight in foreign lands.

Senator Brooks warned opponents of the war party that they would be called obstructionists. He urged them to continue their fight and to maintain their constitutional right to freedom of expression of their beliefs.

Brooks spoke at the Racine Women's club at a meeting sponsored by the Republican women of Racine. Before the meeting he was the guest at dinner of a group of 50 men and women.

He Disparages Namecalling.

The senator disparaged attempts of those who are trying to lead America into war to stifle criticism and opposition by name calling.

"The Republican party has a tremendous responsibility," he said, "to keep alive the spirit of the republic in presenting constructive views and keeping open debate.

"We will be accused many times of being obstructionists because of our loyalty to the true principles that made our country great.

"The Republican party has contributed much to our progress and we must keep the two party system progressive and enthusiastic at all times. Constructive criticism or suggestion should not be considered obstruction or interpreted as lack of love of country or loyalty to the country's cause.

Wants "Fearless Competition."

"As individuals and not as partisans we should not fear to express our views as we interpret the will of those we represent in the local, state, and national legislative bodies, for it is only thru fearless competition of ideas that America may become thoroly informed and freedom of speech and freedom of the press preserved to the minority."

The large hall of the women's club building was filled despite a heavy rain and despite the three day Memorial holiday, which found many Racine leaders out of the city.

Lansing J. Hoyt, chairman of the Republican party of Milwaukee county, occupied a seat on the stage with Senator Brooks, as did Lester Bradshaw and Mrs. Bradshaw of Milwaukee. Bradshaw was head of the Taft for President movement in Wisconsin last year and is active in state Republican affairs.

Woman Leader Presides.

Mrs. Violet Christensen, leader in the Racine Republican women's organization, presided. Mrs. E. C. Pfeifer and Mrs. Blanche Lawton were heads of the women's committee that arranged for Senator Brooks' appearance. The senator was introduced by the Rev. Dr. George Cady of Kenosha, pastor of the Kenosha First Congregational church. Many Kenoshans were in the audience. Dr. Cady was a Dewey pledged delegate to the Republican national convention last June.

Senator Brooks again was cheered when he declared that an overwhelming majority of the American people are against becoming "shooting participants" in any European war.

"The President was reëlected for a third term on the definite pledge to the American people that the sons of Americans would not be sent to fight on foreign shores outside of the Western hemisphere," Brooks said.

Wants People to Know.

"Before he causes by executive order any act that is destined to take us into a foreign war, he should take the people as a whole into his confidence and give them opportunity for full expression of their sentiment. Integrity of government must not be lost to America

Senator Gerald P. Nye [R., N. D.] will continue the campaign to keep America out of war when he speaks on Monday night at a mass meeting at Milwaukee auditorium in Milwaukee. He will be introduced by Herbert H. Halble, principal of the Appleton, Wis., high school. Arrangements were made tonight for a large delegation of Racine people to attend the Nye meeting.

Mrs. Lillian Grochoki, 52 years old, part owner of a tavern at 3570 Avondale avenue, was held by Albany Park police yesterday after an alleged attempt to shoot her partner, John Baran, 60. Baran told police three shots were fired as he struggled to disarm Mrs. Grochoki.

61ST ARTILLERY IS RECALLED TO FORT SHERIDAN

Camp Forrest, Tenn., May 31 (AP).—The 61st coast artillery anti-aircraft regiment received orders today to abandon plans for participating in the Tennessee maneuvers and proceed to Fort Sheridan, Ill.

The 1,600 men of the anti-aircraft to complete the 600 mile trip in three unit will leave here Monday in 450 vehicles, taking with them 12 three inch anti-aircraft guns. They expect and a half days.

Military secrecy covered the reason for the regiment's sudden departure. It had arrived here from Fort Sheridan May 26 to take part in the second army's maneuvers.

It was reliably reported that upon its arrival in Fort Sheridan the regiment would receive new equipment, including newly developed fire directors and possibly 19 mm. anti-aircraft guns.

NAZI MACHINES BEATING BRITISH FORCES: MENZIES

Australian Leader Sees Darker Days Ahead.

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 31 (AP).—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, commenting on British reverses in Crete, today declared that "machines are defeating us" and "it may be we have not yet reached the lowest ebb of our fortune."

Robert G. Menzies.

The newspaper, Argus, declared meanwhile that public opinion was prepared to pass over the defeat of British imperial forces in Greece without recrimination, but said such restraint was conditional on no further continuation of the "unreal policy" which brought about the situation in Crete.

"We are passing thru most critical hours," Menzies said in an interview with Reuters [British news agency]. "I appeal to the men who make equipment for soldiers and to householders to keep up their spirit.

"Immense Superiority."

"Why has the enemy swept over us in Greece and why is he sweeping over us in Crete? Not because he is a better or a more courageous man. But he has developed an immense superiority in air and land equipment. Machines are defeating us.

"Our men, when battered down by air and mechanical superiority, do not cry for peace, but 'give us machines.' Our task today is to lead and drive our people so our heroes can be equipped as heroes should. When we have only half the number of Germany's machines we shall beat her from the skies and off the earth."

"Road to Realism."

The campaign in Crete "shows no progress along the road of realism," the Argus said. "A handful of men plus their traditional equipment has been called upon to clear the air of swarming Huns.

"Germany has failed to overcome Britain because Britain expected and was ready for invasion. She should have expected an invasion of Crete and been prepared for it."

BURGLARS SEIZED IN FLOSSMOOR CONFESS 13 JOBS

Dineen, chief of Flossmoor police, said yesterday. The men, seized at Perth avenue and Gordon drive in Flossmoor, identified themselves as Hugh Catron, 27, of 5200 South Park way, and Ernest King, 21, of 4436 Indiana avenue. Thru information which they supplied, Dineen and Morgan Park police recovered about $100 worth of personal and household goods stolen Wednesday from the home of W. G. Nusz of Burns drive, Flossmoor. F. D. R. IS ENOUGH TO MAKE HITLER BLUSH: JOHNSON

Senator Hurls a Challenge at War Mongers.

Washington, D. C., May 31 (AP).—Declaring "dictatorship and war" have been the trend of the Roosevelt administration, Senator Hiram Johnson [R., Cal.], asserted tonight that "Dismayed, betrayed, we reel and stagger, as we realize that the subtle plan is about to flower."

Johnson challenged those who favor intervention in Europe to present to congress a resolution for declaration of war. In a radio speech he said that President Roosevelt "Speaks with the confidence of a Hitler or a Mussolini." And, he added, the President's statement would put "to blush even these two braggarts."

"Does he feel so confident of the congress that he can utterly disregard it?" the senator asked.

"Let It Be Tested."

"How better and braver it will be for those who are demanding war to present their resolution and let it be tested instead of waiting in the dark and sulking in the hope that some incident will arise. We'll meet as best we can such a resolution and pray God He'll keep war from this country."

The 74 year old Johnson, one of the senate group which blocked America's entry into the League of Nations after the world war, said this country's entry into the war now "could be nothing more than disastrous."

Referring to Mr. Roosevelt's address on Tuesday night, Johnson asserted:

"It is pretty to hear the head of the government boast about what we have done in terms we do not understand and about our readiness to repel attack from any quarter.

"It makes us all proud to hear him tell about our two ocean navy now, and how it would, as we all know, give a good account of itself in case of war; but it is terrible to realize the fact that we have not as yet a two ocean navy, and that it could not do what is claimed for it."

"Artistically Preached Fear."

Saying that Mr. Roosevelt had talked of possible German bombing of middle western cities, Johnson contended that the chief executive has "artistically preached fear, while decrying it. He has said there is nothing to fear but fear, and then, in bold lines, he has drawn the picture of fear so that our people will feel it."

Johnson said that "all of our precious civil liberties" would be lost if this country entered the war.

"It is only a step now to forbid free speech in this country," he added, "and the minority of our citizens who are so enthusiastic for Britain would justify it and, perhaps, the concentration camp would follow, but there are some of us who laugh at a concentration camp, and who are old enough to spend the rest of their days in one laughing.

"The four liberties for which the President so eloquently appealed, and which Anthony Eden so weakly reechoed, would have but a sorry chance of existence if we would march our armies from Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand."

Denounces Dictator Act.

Referring to the lease-lend [dictator] act, Johnson said that it was "hypocritical, ill begotten, misnamed," and added that it was "conceived in deception and carried out in hypocrisy."

"Now America stands at the crossroads," he said. "One of which takes up upon our peaceful way that we may live our own lives. The other is the road lighted with the flames of war, and into which we fear we will be driven."

DEBATE? SURE! WHEELER TELLS CLAUDE PEPPER

Heated Clash in Senate Is Expected.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 31. — A spectacular debate in the senate between Senator Burton K. Wheeler [D., Mont.], leader of the noninterventionists in congress, and Senator Claude A. Pepper [D., Fla.], outstanding war advocate, appeared today to be scheduled.

Pepper yesterday challenged Wheeler to face him in Helena, Mont., in Wheeler's home state, on June 4 when the Floridan makes a speech there.

Wheeler noted today that his duties as chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee will prevent him from journeying to the far west, but he telegraphed Pepper in Kansas City, Mo., that he would be glad to debate the issue of "a vote of confidence" in the President's foreign policies at any time in the senate.

Offers a Reminder.

"You will recall," Wheeler wired, "that the last time you made a speech in the senate advocating war, you refused to permit senators to interrupt you."

Wheeler remarked that the President had disagreed with Pepper, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox on repeal of the neutrality act.

"I think President Roosevelt has been right many times," he said in his telegram to Pepper. "He was particularly right when, during the recent campaign, he promised the American people again and again and again that he would not send American sailors, soldiers, or pilots to fight in foreign wars.

"He was right when he promised to stand upon the platform of his party—a platform which I fought for and you fought against. He was right when he said that convoys were outmoded and when he disagreed with you and Knox and Stimson that he would not ask for repeal of the neutrality act.

"If He Keeps Promises."

"If he keeps the promises made during the campaign and continues to refuse to follow you into a war in Europe, Asia, and Africa, he will, in my opinion, be everlastingly right."

Wheeler assured Pepper that the people of Montana will show him "every courtesy," even tho they are "opposed to getting this nation into this war."

"They will permit you to speak in any hall in the city," Wheeler said.

Seize 2 in Forest Preserve on Complaint of Girl, 16

Benjamin Johanson, 20 years old, 1947 Sheffield avenue, and John Meshke, also 20, of 1879 Poe street, shipping clerks, were charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor yesterday on the complaint of a 16 year old girl. They were arrested at Hollywood and Kedzie avenues, on forest preserve property, after the girl had directed police to their car in which the alleged attack took place. They will appear in Boys' court Tuesday.

STOVE BLAST CAUSES $2,000 FIRE.

Damage of $2,000 was done yesterday by fire, following a gasoline stove explosion, in the home of John Eyman at 9423 Emerald avenue.

GREEN CONFIDENT U. S. WILL KEEP FREEDOM ALIVE

In two speeches delivered in Chicago yesterday, Gov. Dwight H. Green drew a contrast between dictatorship and the constitutional form of government and asserted his belief that Americans will keep the rights of free speech, free press and free assemblage. The first address was to the Order of Railway Conductors in the Hotel Sherman and the second to the Illinois Credit Union league in the Stevens hotel.

"On the one hand lies centralized government," the governor said, "which teaches that the superior efficiency of the totalitarian state in war, industry, and commerce will become so established that government as we know it will cease to exist.

"On the other hand lies the preservation and strengthening of government founded on the doctrine that all men are created free and equal. . . . Here in America the ideals and hopes of liberalism and just government burn bright and we will keep them burning."

BRITONS RECEIVE MILK FROM U. S. IN CASES OF TOOLS

LONDON, May 31 (AP)—Twenty-four cans of evaporated milk were found in three cases of machine tools from the United States received today by the ministry of supply and ordnance. With them was a typed note:

"Employés of the Jones Machine Tool works at Cincinnati send this box to employés where this machine is sent. "The milk is intended for your children and has been sent without the knowledge of the purchasers of these tools or any agent connected with same."

[William F. Meyer of the Jones concern said at Cincinnati, O.: "I supervise the crating of all materials and I am positive none of our men ever put in the tins of milk."]

HULL MAPS PLAN TO DROP TREATY RIGHTS IN CHINA

U. S. to Withdraw Forces When Peace Returns.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 31.—The United States will move for relinquishment of special extraterritorial rights in China when peace is restored to that country, Secretary of State Cordell Hull promised today.

Reports also are current that army and navy pilots and mechanics are being allowed to volunteer for service in China as another gesture of war aid to the Chinese.

According to these reports, pilots and mechanics would retain their American citizenship and would be subject to recall for service in the United States air corps when needed. The idea would be to aid China and give the airmen experience.

Dates to Boxer Rebellion.

"Extraterritorial rights" covers the practice of foreign countries, including the United States and Great Britain, of assuming jurisdiction over their nationals and properties in China. Such rights have been exercised strictly by the United States, especially since the Boxer rebellion, altho China had been subjected to demands for these rights as early as 1689, when it entered into treaty negotiations with Russia for that purpose. Many other nations have demanded and retained the rights of extraterritoriality in China.

Hull's pledge was contained in a letter to the new Chinese foreign minister, Dr. Quo Tai-chi, who recently visited Washington and is now en route to Chunking.

Hope to "Move Rapidly."

"It goes without saying," Hull wrote, "that the government of the United States, in continuation of steps already taken toward meeting China's aspirations for readjustment of anomalies in its international relations, expects when conditions of peace again prevail, to move rapidly, by processes of orderly negotiation and agreement with the Chinese government, toward relinquishment of the last of certain rights of special character which this country, together with other countries, has long possessed in China by virtue of agreements providing for extra territorial jurisdiction and related practices."

The extra territorial rights of the United States and other powers go back nearly a century. These allow the United States and other world powers to maintain courts and troop garrisons in some parts. The United States now has approximately 1,200 troops stationed in China.

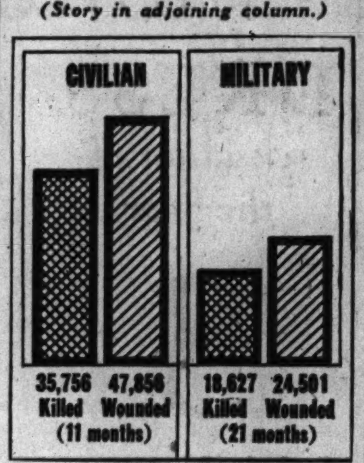
Draft New Note to Vichy.

It also was reported today that the state department is drafting a note to the Vichy government advising that the future attitude of the United States toward France will be governed by French actions rather than promises.

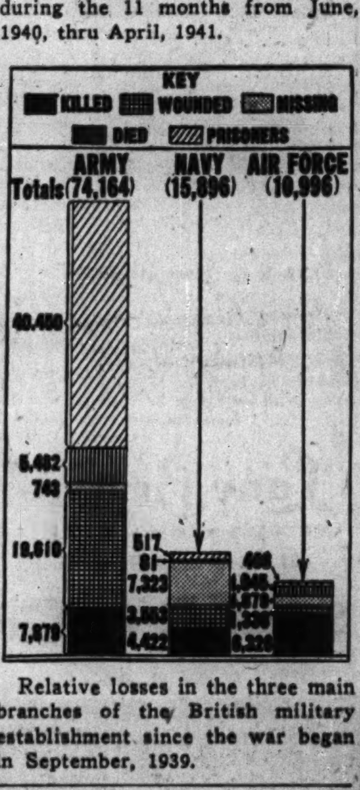
The note was expected to express grave apprehension over the occupation of Syria by Axis forces and to reject the French thesis that the armistice with Germany gives Germany the use of air fields in Syria. The United States will argue that Syria is mandated territory, and not a French territory granted in the armistice with the Nazis.

British Casualties

(Story in adjoining column.)



Comparison of the numbers killed and wounded in the British military forces for the 21 months of the war with the numbers of civilians killed and wounded in air raids on Britain during the 11 months from June, 1940, thru April, 1941.



Relative losses in the three main branches of the British military establishment since the war began in September, 1939.

BRITAIN REVEALS FIGHTING FORCES LOSE 101,056 MEN

More Killed in Air Raids than Die in Battle.

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—Nearly twice as many Britons have been killed in bombing raids as in action against the axis, figures issued by the government indicated today.

The war so far has cost Britain fewer than 5,000 military casualties a month, it was announced, and the total killed in all three fighting services during the 21 months since the conflict began was 18,627.

This is a little more than half the number of civilians killed in Britain during the 11 months of heavy German air raids between June, 1940, and the end of April. During that 11 month period, previous government figures have revealed, 35,756 civilians were killed and 47,856 injured.

Total Casualties 101,056.

Today's figures on military losses for the first 21 months of the war show aggregate casualties of 101,056 men, of whom 24,501 were wounded, 9,945 are missing, 6,608 died and 41,375 were taken prisoners.

Of these, total military casualties, 74,164 were from the army, 15,896 from the navy and 10,996 from the air force. The figures were believed to include some of the British lost in Greece, but none in Crete or in the recent sea fighting which involved the sinking of the battle cruiser Hood and one destroyer.

A breakdown of the figures showed:

Service.	Killed.	Wound.	Miss.	Died.	Pris.
Army	7,879	19,610	743	5,482	40,450
Navy	4,422	3,553	7,323	81	517
Air force	6,326	1,338	1,879	1,045	408

The air force totals included those killed and wounded in action on active service or in training or as the result of bombings.

Fraction of Last War's Figures.

The aggregate military loss, it was noted, is but a fraction of the 3,190,235 British killed, wounded, missing, or taken prisoner during the war of 1914-'18.

Another 300,000 men were registered for national service by Britain today—the 40 year old age group—bringing the aggregate total registered to more than 6,000,000. The 18 year olds and the 41 year olds are the only two groups covered under preesnt legislation which have not yet been registered.

Denies Roosevelt Created Office of Transportation

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 31 (AP).—The temporary White House said today "it is not true" that President Roosevelt had ordered creation of an office of transportation and thereby wiped out the last remnant of the old national defense commission. Asked whether Mr. Roosevelt had inferred that he did not intend to create such an office, Secretary William D. Hassett replied in the negative, but said he had not inquired about that angle.

ARMY TIGHTENS RESTRICTIONS AT PANAMA PIERS

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone, May 31 (AP).—United States army headquarters issued a blanket order today barring all unauthorized persons from pier areas at Pamana canal terminals here and at Cristobal.

Officials said the move was not linked directly with the sabotage vigil in the United States, but conceded it was part of a "general tightening up." Fuel storage depots previously had been made forbidden zones.

The new order permits exceptions only for persons boarding or leaving vessels at those piers and persons on official business who have special military passes.

RAILROAD ACROSS SOUTH AMERICA NEARING REALITY

35 Year Old Dream to Aid Hemisphere Defense.

BY ANTHONY PATRIC.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CORUMBA, Brazil, May 5.—[By mail].—Across South America are moving steel sinews which soon will bolster western hemisphere defenses and open immense and highly valuable regions to swift transportation. The bands of steel form the South American Transcontinental railroad, which ultimately will link the Chilean port of Arica on the Pacific with Santos, Brazil, on the Atlantic.

Hailed as a major contribution to South America's military and strategic position because it will be able to swiftly move large bodies of troops to either coast in event of an emergency, only a comparatively few miles of the road remain to be constructed before this 35 year old dream will become reality.

Coast Links Completed.

Out of a total length of 2,486 miles, at present 1,700 miles of the railroad are in full operation, 468 miles are under construction, and only 318 miles have not been started. However, early work on this part of the road is anticipated.

At present, completed sections of the line stretch out from both coasts. The western end runs from Arica, Chile, to La Paz, Bolivia, and then to Vila Vila, Bolivia. From the Atlantic coast the road runs from Santos, Brazil, to Porto Esperanca, only a few miles from the important Paraguay river port of Corumba. Under construction is the middle stretch between Corumba and Santa Cruz, Bolivia. The sections not yet started are in Bolivia and Brazil, the Bolivian unit lying between Vila Vila and Santa Cruz, the Brazilian portion being that between Porto Esperanca and Corumba.

Link May Be Open in '43.

It is expected that work on the 468 mile stretch between Corumba and Santa Cruz will be completed by the end of 1943 and the section in operation then. Work on the line was begun in 1936, when Bolivia and Brazil signed an agreement to share the costs of the project.

Only the difficulties of bridging the Paraguay river are holding up work on the 57 mile extension of the line from Porto Esperanca to Corumba. American experts have come to Bolivia to direct the building of the Santa Cruz-Vila Vila section. Hence, it is indicated that it will be only a few years before the line completely spans South America, providing a strong link in hemisphere defense by making it possible to rapidly shift South American troops without resort to lengthy voyages thru either the Panama canal or the Straits of Magellan in order to reach the opposite coast.

FRANCE EXPANDS POWERS OF ITS RULER OF JEWS

VICHY, France, May 31 (AP).—The Jewish commissariat at Paris, formed to administer all laws concerning Jews in France, has been revised to establish greater power.

The commissariat will coördinate all governmental activities dealing with Jews, as well as direct police in Jewish matters. All proposals of the commissariat will be acted upon by the cabinet as a whole, instead of by Chief of State Marshal Phillipe Petain alone.

Another decree instituted a governmental loan plan for able-bodied Frenchmen from 25 to 45 years of age with rural experience who wish to settle on the soil.

OPM'S ALUMINUM HAUL IN MADISON IS 40,000 POUNDS

BY FRED GRAFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., May 31.—About 40,000 pounds of scrap aluminum was piled in an enclosure on the state capitol grounds here today in response to a test campaign to determine whether a nation-wide drive to collect bits of aluminum for the rearmament program would be feasible. Officials estimated the collection would be sufficient to build a large airplane.

Dane county, Wis., of which Madison is the center, and Henrico county, Va., were the two areas of the United States selected by the Office of Production Management for the test. The campaign here will continue for several more days.

Among the items collected in the Virginia test were some artificial legs made of aluminum.

Nearly 50 trucks were used to pick up what had been collected at different points, thru the coöperation of practically every civic, service, and patriotic organization in the city. Other trucks brought in loads from the surroundings towns.

"Surprised and Pleased."

Everett King, OPM representative who is directing the drive, said he was "surprised and highly pleased" with the results here, and indicated that extension of the project on a nation-wide basis is probable.

Meanwhile police were trying to determine the origin of handbills attacking the project as a "racket" and a "pots and pans goose chase experiment in regimentation to make the people ware conscious." The bills made their appearance in several parts of the city early today. Officials in charge of the campaign assured again that the project is a patriotic nonprofit venture.

"The aluminum will be sorted and baled by a local scrap metal company, which is donating the use of its building and equipment, and will be paid only for the labor necessary," explained William E. Walker, one of the campaign's leaders. "Then it will be sent to one of 12 smelters designated by the government."

It's a Strange Sight.

The high pile of aluminum pots, pans, castings, and scrap presented a strange sight against the capitol background. Project leaders estimated that Madison homes would contribute an average of four pieces of aluminum, an estimate which provoked all kinds of guesses on the amount of aluminum that would be collected, at that rate, if the campaign is made nation-wide.

Regardless of how they feel about the position this country should take in the European war, Madison people seemed to coöperate wholeheartedly in the drive.

"I'M GLAD MY HUSBAND WAS STUBBORN

. . . that's how I discovered the laundry washes whiter!"

Mrs. V. McDermott
2807 Leavitt St., Chicago

MEMO to June Brides . . .

Your husband wants you to be radiant and lovely when he comes home. Don't let a weekly wash rob you of your pep and sparkle. Call the laundry . . . for HIS sake, as well as your own. And remember . . .

The laundry uses rain-soft water (not hard water). Rain-soft water is easier on fabrics.

The laundry uses milder soaps that are kind to your clothes.

And the laundry uses 10 to 12 complete water changes in washing a single batch of clothes. Everything will come back thoroughly washed and rinsed, made hospital clean.

*This week . . . enjoy a 10-minute washday, just the time needed to gather up your clothes.

"To keep your sparkle and zest, Try the laundry . . . it's best."

Read Mrs. McDermott's interesting, voluntary "confession." It may answer some of your questions about laundry service.

"I used to be so tired and discouraged at the end of washday. No matter how hard I rubbed, I never could get my husband's shirts clean like he wanted them. He kept insisting only the laundry could do them right. Finally I gave in, AND AM I EVER GLAD I DID! I never realized how much whiter the laundry washes. We send everything now.

"It's such a relief to be rid of washday. I notice our clothes seem to last longer, too. When I washed I had to rub so hard to get the dirt out. That's hard on clothes. Now I never hesitate to send even my prize bedroom curtains, for I know the laundry's easy on things. I also know our family of three is lots happier . . . now that we use the laundry."

BRITAIN GETTING NO U. S. WAR AID, BYRD DISCLOSES

Assistant to Harry Hopkins Admits It in Letter.

Washington, D. C., May 31 (AP).—Senator Harry F. Byrd [D., Va.] asserted today that practically no "lease-lend" equipment had been shipped to Great Britain in the two months since congress approved the 7 billion dollar appropriation implementing the war dictatorship act.

Senator Byrd.

Contending that production of the most essential war equipment was bogging down, the Virginia senator said in an interview that if the British were to get the weapons they need speedily "something ought to be done toward putting one man at the head of this program and eliminating the strikes that hamstring it."

Byrd showed reporters a letter from Maj. Gen. J. H. Burns, assistant to Harry Hopkins, the "lease-lend" administrator, on which he based his conclusion that only an "infinitesimal" amount of supplies had gone abroad.

Asks Report on Losses.

Burns' letter was in response to a request from Byrd for a report on actual dollar losses of "lease-lend" equipment due to sinking of vessels on the high seas. Burns said:

"Because of the status of our stocks and current production, together with the needs of our own forces, the foreign aid programs depend in most part upon procurement under the 7 billion dollar appropriation.

"This in turn requires the establishment, in coöperation with the country to be aided, of the detailed programs, the negotiation of contracts or agreements therefor by the appropriate agency of the government, in most instances the production of the material, the transfer to ports, and finally the overseas shipments.

"It is obvious that in the approximately seven weeks during which procurement funds have been available, no appreciable flow of materials could have reached the ports, much less the danger zones.

Can't Furnish Information.

"At the present time, therefore, the division of defense aid reports, which records lend-lease activities, is unable to furnish information that is of any significance as to present or probable losses at sea of materials shipped under such legislation."

Elaborating on his contention that production of essential weapons was lagging, Byrd said, "I understand that the British need for heavy tanks is acute and we are not producing any heavy tanks.

"My information is that we are turning out from 500 to 600 combat planes a month, but we are just getting started on the production of 90 mm. anti-aircraft guns, which the British forces need badly."

MUNITIONS DUMP AT TOBRUK BLOWN UP BY NAZI GUNS

BERLIN, May 31 (AP).—German desert artillery has blown up a big British munitions dump in the beleaguered garrison of Tobruk, Libya, the high command announced today. The Germans also repulsed an attempt by the British to break out of the garrison.

German Stukas and fighter planes, with Italian bombers, also assaulted Tobruk, machine gunned British troop concentrations in the Egyptian desert, and bombed oil deposits.

Steamer Bombed.

ROME, May 31 (AP).—Italian and German planes yesterday damaged a large steamer north of Matruh, Egypt, the Italian high command said today. In Ethiopia, Italian garrisons were said to be continuing their resistance to "preponderant British forces."

CAIRO, Egypt, May 31 (AP).—British, South African, and "Free French" flyers yesterday pounded remaining Italian nests of resistance in Ethiopia, the British air command announced today.

PEOPLE APPROVE HIS EMERGENCY, ROOSEVELT SAYS

Declares Thousands Wire, Write Him.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 31.—President Roosevelt claimed in a statement tonight that the American people have indorsed overwhelmingly his proclamation of an unlimited national emergency in his radio address to the nation last Tuesday night.

The President's announcement was seen as a nimble maneuver to offset demands for a change of national leadership which have arisen from such noninterventionists as Charles A. Lindbergh. The White House is believed to have been considerable alarmed by the growth of such movements as the America First committee.

The statement also was seen as a covert attempt to offset the vast quantity of anti-war mail which has been received by senators and congressmen. Even the administration's congressional spokesmen have been forced to admit their mail has been running heavy against intervention.

Thanks People for Messages.

"The President would very much like to thank in person all those who have sent him letters and telegrams after the Tuesday night speech," his statement read.

"But with his relatively small staff they would have to abandon everything else for a week or two in order to prepare the letters in view of the thousands and thousands of messages which have come from every part of the nation and from other parts of the hemisphere, and even from other continents.

"Therefore, the President wants it known that all these messages are very welcome, that he has read them, and that he has personally been made very happy by them."

Secretary Quotes Figures.

Acting White House Secretary William D. Hassett said that more than 95 per cent of the letters expressed approval of the President's address. The percentage of approval was said to be as record breaking as the volume of messages.

A few days ago when the White House received a flood of telegrams in response to a campaign waged in Illinois by the America First committee to have sympathizers urge the President to keep the nation out of war, the White House did not release statistics on the number of wires received nor their nature.

During the day Mr. Roosevelt pressed forward aid to Britain in a lengthly telephone conversation with John G. Winant, United States ambassador to Great Britain, who arrived in this country yesterday by trans-Atlantic Clipper after three months at his post. The ambassador will submit a formal report to the President at the White House on Tuesday.

Unoccupied France to Take Census, Check Employment

VICHY, France, May 31 (AP).—The French government today ordered a census of every one in unoccupied France between the ages of 15 and 65 to take stock of Frenchmen and foreigners who are working—or could be put to work.

SHOT BY MISTAKE, SON, 19, RALLIES IN FIGHT FOR LIFE

Richard Aman, 19 years old, who was shot by his father early yesterday when he was mistaken for a prowler, rallied in Ravenswood hospital as physicians prepared to remove a bullet lodged near his heart.

Surgeon John A. Graham said Richard, a sophomore at Northwestern university, must gain additional strength before he can withstand the operation.

Young Aman was shot twice while attempting to enter his home at 2171 Eastwood avenue thru a window. His father, Al Aman, an investigator for the federal bureau of narcotics, was awakened. He demanded to know who was there and fired twice when he got no reply. Police said Aman had been warned that a Negro prowler had been raiding the district.

4 QUARTER TERM TO BE ADOPTED BY N. U. IN 1942

Official Denies That Move Is Defense Speedup.

All branches of Northwestern university, except the evening schools and University college on the Chicago campus, will be operated on a quarterly basis beginning September, 1942, Dr. Fred D. Fagg, vice president of the university, predicted yesterday.

Dr. Fagg denied that the four quarter term was designed to speed students thru the university in three years so as to make them available for preparedness program jobs a year ahead of schedule. He intimated, however, that students could complete a four year course in three years with the well spaced "breathing spells" provided by the four quarter plan.

Planning Change for Year.

"Northwestern has been planning this change since the technological institute in Evanston opened on the four quarter basis a year ago," Dr. Fagg said. The new term will consist of three 12-week quarters and one eight week quarter, probably in the summer, or 44 school weeks. This would leave eight free weeks for vacation periods to be divided between each quarter and between the end of one term and the beginning of the next. The school term, for example, would begin the latter part of September and the first quarter would end in time for the Christmas vacation. The second quarter would run until the beginning of the Easter vacation. An ample rest period, about the middle of June, would separate the third and fourth quarters and there would be another holiday between the fourth quarter and the new term."

The university's downtown professional schools have four quarters to the year but no speed-up is possible there as students normally work the year round. The technological school employs the quarterly plan so that students may attend classes during the first and third quarters of the year and work in industry during the second and fourth, Dr. Fagg said. He predicts that the technological school will have an enrollment of 1,000 students by next fall and that the enrollment will grow rapidly as demands from expanding industry increase.

Other Schools Use Plan.

The University of Chicago has operated on a quarterly basis for a number of years. De Paul and Loyola universities have school years of two semesters and a summer session at their uptown schools but their downtown professional schools operate quarterly. Illinois Institute of Technology operates on the semester plan, altho many students there are enrolled in coöperative courses providing that they work halftime in industry. These students complete a four year college course in five years.

Multigraphed letters over President Roosevelt's signature have been received by parents of college and university men in this area urging them to discourage young people from interrupting their college careers "because it is more patriotic to work." The selective service administration, however, has not altered its rule of deferring college seniors only from the draft.

1ST DIVISION VETS TO HOLD ANNUAL REUNION TODAY

Veterans of the 1st division, AEF, will gather today at Cantigny farm near Wheaton, where they will be the guests of Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, for their annual reunion and outing. The farm was named for the battle in which 1st division men distinguished themselves on May 28, 1918. Col. McCormick was commander of the 6th field artillery regiment, one of the units of the division. Preparations have been made to serve a barbecue to the veterans, and there will be baseball and horseshoe pitching games. It is expected that about 200 will attend.

Miss Florence Lieberz, 27 years old, of 7216 38th place, Lyons, yesterday became the bride of Earl H. Davis of Akron, O., in a ceremony in the Brookfield Congregational church. Mrs. Davis was the Western Electric company's vacation beauty queen in 1938, and in 1934 she was "Miss Brookfield" at A Century of Progress exposition. Davis is a professor of accounting at the University of Akron.

LABOR LEADERS DEFY CONGRESS IN UNION AFFAIRS

Ignore Inquiries on Dues and Finances.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 31.—Labor leaders thus far have defied the attempt of congress to obtain a full financial accounting from the great unions of the nation, it was learned today.

On May 1, the house naval affairs committee dispatched to all labor organizations, having members employed on naval arms projects, questionnaires designed to obtain information concerning the delays in, and the excessive cost of, the huge war preparations program. A May 15 deadline was set for answers.

Financial Setup Sought.

Unions were requested by the committee to reveal in detail their financial assets and liabilities as of Oct. 1, 1939, when the arms production effort began, and as of last March 31.

They were ordered to give a full accounting of their receipts and disbursements, a complete listing of special assessments or dues in the last year, and an explanation of the amounts of their initiation fees, permit fees, regular dues, and per capita taxes paid parent or affiliate organizations.

In addition the committee required a sworn statement relating to the citizenship or nationality of each executive officer, business agent, and organizer.

Two Extensions Granted.

The deadline for answers to these queries has been extended twice from the original May 15 date. The unions have been given until June 15 to disclose how they operate, but with the exception of a few small locals both the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations have ignored the questionnaires.

A showdown on the issue has been postponed because 10,000 arms contractors, required similarly to submit detailed information regarding arms orders, were given time extensions.

A committee spokesman said members were disposed to be lenient with labor until June 15 because they do not wish to be in the position of forcing the unions to disclose their finances before industry has answered the questionnaires.

RUN STATE PENAL INSTITUTION LIKE MILITARY SCHOOL

Prisoners Called Cadets at New Reformatory.

New Cumberland, Pa., May 31 (AP).—Four hundred youths, many of draft age, are receiving military training at Pennsylvania's new $4,500,000 industrial school in a penal program described by its originator today as an "advanced experiment in rehabilitation."

Maj. Henry C. Hill.

Opened only two months ago, the school within a year will house 1,400 young men sentenced by state courts for minor crimes.

Operation of the reformatory like a private military school was the idea of Maj. Henry C. Hill, named superintendent after 12 years' experience in administering such institutions as the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., and the Illinois state prison at Joliet.

"The boys don't live in cells," he explained. "They live in rooms. They don't live in cell blocks, they live in halls."

Age Range 15 to 25.

Clothing worn by the youths, who range in age from 15 to 25, is military in appearance—neat, cadet-blue trousers and coat, with a blue denim or white shirt and black tie.

The military academy pattern is carried out further by granting titles of cadet, first, second, third, or fourth class, depending on behavior, interest and character.

Maj. Hill feels that "a prison sentence always places a social stigma on youth." He added:

"That's what we intend to remove, if possible, by providing a new, clean environment and an education that will enable the boys to find responsible jobs after completing their terms here."

Offer High School Courses.

With the coöperation of the state department of public education, the industrial school has established its own educational system, offering courses from grade school thru high school.

"If a boy is sentenced here after completing a part of his public school training," said Hill, "he can pick up right where that education was disrupted, and after leaving he could return to the public school and graduate with his class."

CAROL IS PLEASED WITH CUBA; HOPES TO VISIT U. S., TOO

HAVANA, Cuba, May 31.—"I am a simple refugee and have no definite plans for the future," former King Carol of Rumania said today in his first interview since his arrival here yesterday with Mme. Elena [Magda] Lupescu. "I want first to say how pleased I am to arrive in Cuba, where the spirit of kindness and of absolute individual liberty exists."

Carol spoke of the "charming hospitality" he enjoyed in the Virgin Islands, and said he hoped to visit the United States, but did not know when this would be. To a question whether he expected to lead a socially active life in Cuba, Carol laughed and said, "I do not see why I should not."

During the interview Carol sat at a table facing some 50 newsmen and women correspondents, as well as movie cameramen. He spoke in English and smiled frequently. After the interview he went out to the terrace and posed for photographers.

CORRECT DENTAL ILLS OF 4,000 IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Six thousand teeth were extracted from Chicago public school children thru the civic dental health program inaugurated last September by the board of education, the Chicago board of health, and the Work Projects administration.

In announcing this yesterday, William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, said dental work for more than 4,000 pupils was completed and that their oral hygiene now was perfect.

A total of 1,271 children were relieved of swollen areas around the teeth and swelling of the jaws, and 39,579 cavities were filled with silver, cement, or porcelain, an average of a little more than seven fillings per child, the superintendent said.

The civic dental program was inaugurated after the discovery that 92 per cent of Chicago's school children had dental defects. This was revealed in a survey sponsored by the board of education, the board of health, the Chicago Dental society, and the Mouth Hygiene council.

KEN TIPS SCALES AGAINST A RARE GLAND DISORDER

Boy, 10, Gains 6 Pounds in Fight for Growth.

Kenneth Pilger, 10 years old, a patient in the Children's Memorial hospital, was all smiles yesterday. He tipped the scales at 36 pounds, the heaviest he has ever weighed.

Suffering from a rare glandular disease which has not yet been identified by medical authorities, Kenneth entered the hospital two months ago weighing 30 pounds, the normal weight of a 2½ year old child. The six pound increase is the first he has had in several years.

Wadlow Case Recalled.

It is believed that Kenneth's disease may be the direct opposite of that suffered by Robert Wadlow of Alton, Ill., who died last July at the age of 22, Dr. W. S. Nock, resident physician at the hospital, said.

"Wadlow grew to be 8 feet 9½ inches tall because of excessive functioning of the pituitary gland," said Dr. Nock. "Altho we cannot say exactly what is the cause of Kenneth's trouble, it might be the insufficient function of the pituitary gland."

"This is the second case of this kind I have encountered in 25 years," said Dr. C. A. Aldrich, chief of staff, who is supervising Kenneth's case. "We have to base our treatment on long time observation, administering all the known growth factors in the hope that we may find some deficiency basis for the trouble. Up to now, we have been unable to ascribe his gain in weight to any particular factor."

He Is Bright Eyed and Happy.

Kenneth is 4 feet 2 inches tall. He has a forearm circumference of only 3¼ inches. Despite his thinness and muscular weakness, he is bright eyed and happy and eats with the appetite of an active youngster.

He is given three meals of high vitamin and caloric content a day. He gets two glasses of orange juice between meals and a malted milk before going to bed. He eats meat at lunch and dinner, cocoa that is almost all cream, and extra supplies of fruit.

"I never get spinach, tho, the way you used to make it," he told his mother, Mrs. Raymond Pilger, 3851 Southport avenue, yesterday. Mrs. Pilger, a pretty, slender woman, drew her young son to her. "You see he even likes spinach," she laughed. "Kenneth has never been a fussy eater. He weighed 5 pounds at birth, 15 pounds at 16 months, 18 pounds at 2 years, and 24 pounds at 4 years.

"He is good at games, especially marbles and checkers, and when he was at home he used to wrestle with his 12 year old brother, Ray. He has never played running games, for his muscles are weak, and when he starts to run his knees give out beneath him. It has been difficult for him because he wants to do all the things that normal youngsters do."

Just then, Kenneth reached over and whispered in his mother's ear. "We'll have to see, son," she told him, with a sad smile. Then she explained: "He wants to know if we will get him what he wants for his birthday in August—a bicycle."

A GENERAL MOTORS MASTERPIECE

WHEN AN OWNER of a lowest-priced car changes to Pontiac, the first good news he gets is the small size of his monthly payments. 25 TRIBUNE HONOR ROLL PUPILS WIN SCHOLARSHIP AID

19 Colleges Help Leaders of 'Future Citizens.'

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

Twenty-five boys and girls, all high school seniors on the "Honor Roll" of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's Citizens of Tomorrow, a half hour radio program heard each week on W-G-N, received special delivery letters this morning from 19 colleges and universities of the central west informing them they have been awarded scholarship aid. The total value of these awards, based upon the students' continuing high scholastic records and the renewal for four years of the grants, is more than $20,000.

The final matching of the institutions' choices in granting awards and the preferences of the students was made by the Tribune's scholarship committee, headed by Dr. Thomas N. Barrows, president of Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis. Seven other institutions were willing to grant aid but were eliminated in the matching process. All students given aid are in the upper 10 per cent of their classes.

How Matching Was Done.

The matching process worked this way: A list of the colleges giving aid was sent to the senior honor students. They checked the colleges in the order of their preference. Scholarship questionnaires filled in by the students and their principals were sent in duplicate to the first three institutions named. The colleges then selected one or more students to whom they wished to award aid and reported back to the committee. The final step was to match the students' and the institutions' wishes.

The financial resources of the students had to be taken into consideration. It would have been useless for a college costing students $900 a year to offer a $200 grant to a scholarship applicant who had only $200 available for his or her future education. Even campus jobs and other aid would not fill the gap.

73 Students on Honor List.

There are 73 students on the "Honor Roll." Some received scholarships from other institutions and others had various plans for their future.

Here's a typical scholarship winner among the boys: John Burnett Jones, 17, is a senior at the Riverside High school in Milwaukee, Wis. John is a member of the National Honor society, editor of the school annual, won letter in tennis for two years, and is president of the Orient debating society of his school. He was president of his junior class and now ranks second in a senior class of 287. His father is dead and his mother is a secretary in a grade school. John plans to be a lawyer. His principal, W. G. Kastner, refers to him as "a very fine young man." John receives a University of Chicago scholarship.

Typical Girl Is a Leader.

Now for a girl. Miss Jane Olivia Strohm, also 17, attends Shortridge High school in Indianapolis, Ind. She gets a scholarship to DePauw university at Greencastle, Ind. She is editor of her school paper, Echo, president of the Girl Scout club, and secretary of two other organizations, and a splendid musician. She ranks 24th in a class of 740. She intends to take up personnel work. Jane's father is office manager of a box manufacturing concern. Principal George Buck of Shortridge wrote of Miss Strohm: "She is an excellent student and one of our leaders."

The last of the second series of Citizens of Tomorrow programs will be heard Tuesday, June 10, at 8:30 p. m. Next Tuesday [June 3] Lane Technical High school will be saluted. Six hundred members of the student body, accompanied by their principal, Charles E. Lang, will come to W-G-N's audience studio No. 1 at 4:30 p. m. that day to make the broadcast's transcription.

LA SALLE MAYOR TELLS BARS: NO DAYLIGHT TIME

La Salle, Ill., May 31 [Special].—Dr. H. M. Orr, mayor of La Salle, is angry. The town is going on daylight saving time tomorrow morning despite his strong opposition to "tinkering with the clock."

Dr. Orr is so angry that, in his capacity as liquor commissioner, he has ordered all taverns to keep running on standard time and city employés have been given to understand they're to have nothing to do with daylight saving time.

Industry and business of the community determined to accept the new time after aldermen, meeting at a special session while Dr. Orr was away, voted for it, 8 to 3. The mayor has threatened to veto the ordinance, but he can't do it until Monday night, because the law says five days must be permitted to elapse after adoption of the ordinance. By that time everybody except the city hall "crowd" will have set his clock ahead. Plenty is expected to be said about the situation by Dr. Orr when the council meets Monday night.

U. S. SPIRITUAL NEED TOLD AT ALUMNI DINNER

Among the guests tonight were Joseph P. Kennedy, former ambassador to Great Britain, tomorrow's commencement speaker; The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, who will preach the baccalaureate sermon, and the Rev. Henry P. Stark, C.S.P., superior general of the Passionist fathers.

CHURCHILL ON FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Roosevelt added a fifth freedom—the freedom of the seas—to those he had previously declared to be the objects of the crusade he is preaching. Now Mr. Anthony Eden, the British foreign minister, has made a speech which is said to outline Britain's war aims. He has joined Mr. Roosevelt's crusade so far as the four original freedoms are concerned. As for freedom of the seas, Mr. Eden says Britain and the United States have been battling for this principle for a long time. Evidently Mr. Eden places an interpretation upon the phrase which is somewhat different from the usual one.

Freedom of the seas was one of the cardinal points of our previous crusade in 1917. Mr. Wilson listed freedom of the seas as the second of his 14 points. Toward the end of October, 1918, Germany informed Mr. Wilson that it accepted the 14 points as the basis of an armistice.

What happened afterward has been related with admirable clarity by Mr. Winston Churchill in a volume entitled "The Aftermath," published in this country in 1929 by Charles Scribner's Sons.

The representatives of the principal allied powers met with Col. House on the afternoon of Oct. 29 to find out just what the 14 points meant. As Mr. Churchill tells it:

"This point about what is called the 'freedom of the seas' naturally aroused British concern. It sounded well-intentioned, but what did it mean? Did it mean that the right of blockade in time of war was abolished? We were emerging from a struggle in which blockade had played an important part in preserving the liberties of Europe and the rights of the United States. The British navy had just crushed the submarine. British ships had just carried the greater part of the American army to Europe. We had saved ourselves from invasion and maintained our population unstarved by sea power.

"It certainly seemed hard to be told, in the moment of common victory by the friend we had aided, that this great weapon of defense was to be blunted if not broken. . . . Mr. Lloyd George said he could not accept this clause under any conditions."

And Mr. Lloyd George stuck to his position. President Wilson threatened to make a separate peace, and still Mr. Lloyd George stood firmly against the freedom of the seas. Mr. Churchill says Lloyd George was everlastingly right. "It is a measure of Lloyd George's quality when acting for his country that he did not quail before this unwarrantable pressure."

A few days later Col. House again pressed Lloyd George to accept the freedom of the seas. Says Mr. Churchill:

"Mr. Lloyd George repeated his refusal. Were he to accept, he said, it would only mean that in a week's time a new prime minister would be here who would say that he also could not accept the principle. . . . On this point the nation was absolutely solid. Consequently it was no use for him to say that he would accept when he knew he would not be speaking for the British nation."

A day or so later Mr. Wilson backed down. Today Mr. Churchill sits in Mr. Lloyd George's seat.

CHICAGOLAND.

A map of the Chicago metropolitan area, drawn in accordance with the findings for 1940 of the census bureau, was published in THE TRIBUNE a few days ago. The area includes almost all of Cook county, part of Lake county, Illinois, part of Du Page county, and part of Lake county, Indiana, and has a population just short of 4½ millions.

The definition of "metropolitan area" used by the bureau says that such an area ends where the density of population is less than 150 persons per square mile. A few miles farther out there may be closely settled regions whose people in their economic relations and their social attitudes may be members of the metropolitan community, but they are nevertheless outside what the census bureau chooses to call the metropolitan area. The Fox river cities and towns have been lopped off metropolitan Chicago in this fashion, tho any one who has walked the streets of Aurora or Elgin knows that the residents of these and the neighboring cities are metropolitan people. They have the briskness and the alertness that go with big city life. Their personal and business habits, their taste in amusements, their way of speech, their clothing, and, indeed, everything about them proclaim them for what they are—members of the larger Chicago community. More than 300,000 such people have been left out, however. In reality the population of metropolitan Chicago approximates 5 millions.

In common sense the definition of metropolitan areas should be altered to take account of such situations. The census bureau's own definition of industrial areas as employed in the census of manufactures is much more serviceable. In this reckoning the Chicago industrial area includes all of the surrounding counties in their entirety. That provides a realistic account of the Chicago metropolitan area.

RADIO GETS A GLIMPSE OF ITS FUTURE.

Ed Kirby, director of the radio division of the army, told the convention of the National Association of Broadcasters at St. Louis that there is immediate need of a central clearance agency in the radio field to establish "program priorities." He said that this was necessary so that prime time be made available for prime purposes and that the "right time is not made available to the wrong person or group."

Mr. Kirby made a choice of words that can properly be called cute. "Priority" has a resounding, martial sound. It is connected in the public mind with the rationing of raw materials that our defense program may go forward at top speed. It would not have sounded so nice if he had substituted the word "censorship," but that is exactly what his words mean.

As an employé of the war department Mr. Kirby undoubtedly regards the quaverings of its secretary and the bellicose bawling of Senator Pepper as the prime purposes for which prime time should be reserved. Nor is it putting any strain on his words to mention Mr. Hoover, Col. Lindbergh, and Senator Wheeler as among the "wrong persons" to whom he would deny time. He overlooks only one thing—the provision of law which requires radio stations to give equal time to both sides of a controversial question.

But that, presumably, would be abrogated by his proposed program priority measure. The conversion of the radio to a government propaganda machine, already far advanced thru the license gun that the administration holds at the heads of the station owners, would be completed.

The radio may continue to be a dependable source of entertainment to the American people. The Kirby speech is a portent that soon they will have only the newspapers from which to get dependable news.

JOBS FOR RELIEFERS.

Leo M. Lyons, Chicago relief administrator, said recently that if Chicago is ever going to make any significant reduction in its relief load, now is the time to do it.

That seems a logical observation, and yet with employment booming due to rearmament, the city has more than 100,000 families on relief and WPA, of which more than half have one or more employable members. Mr. Lyons does not appear to have a clear cut plan for getting these unemployables off relief and back into productive life. Neither have we. What follows is put forward as a tentative suggestion.

The fundamental principle of relief is that if a man is unable to find work some government—federal, state, or local—will see to it that he doesn't starve. No one wants to see that altered. But there is a corollary principle, sometimes more respected in the breach than the observance, that if a man is unwilling to work for a living, he has no claim on public support.

A good deal might be done to lighten the relief load if more attention were paid to this second principle. To apply it without injustice, however, a greater effort than is now being made must be put forth to find jobs for those on the relief rolls. Reliefers have been reluctant to accept jobs that they suspect may be temporary because they claim it is hard to get back on relief. There should be no such barriers to reemployment. The relief authorities assert that there are none. If they are right, objections on this ground to accepting employment should be overruled. If the barriers are shown to exist, those in the relief administration who maintain them should be sharply disciplined.

A considerable number of reliefers have suffered in morale thru long unemployment. To get them to work it will be necessary to take the jobs to them, instead of expecting them to seek the jobs. That is a task that should be imposed on the state free employment service. The service maintains at present that it has no more concern in placing a reliefer than any other jobless person. That, we think, is an error.

The morale problem also should be attacked by a restraining program designed to fit the chronically unemployed man or woman for a job. Most able-bodied reliefers are qualified only for common labor, and there is less demand for common labor than for any other type. Other cities have done far more in the field of job training than Chicago has.

Both the reliefers and the relief administration should disabuse themselves of the idea that a steady job is the only way that a man or woman can make a living. There is a great deal of work by the day or half day, particularly in the domestic field. A good worker can in a short time find enough of these jobs to provide steady employment. Both the relief administration and the free employment service seem to have been doing less than could be done to put reliefers in casual employment.

Finally, Chicago should face the fact that its relief and unemployment problem has a strong racial aspect. An abnormally high proportion of the city's colored population is on relief. There are colored loafers, just as there are white loafers, but no one has ever advanced any proof that the colored race is any less willing to work than the white race. Its members perform some of the nation's heaviest, most disagreeable, and worst paid tasks. There is abundant proof, on the other hand, that colored people are widely discriminated against in employment.

If the business interests of Chicago are really as concerned about the relief tax load as they say they are, the most constructive thing they can do to lighten that load is to lower whatever bars they may have against colored employés.

And, it may be added, the claim of trade unions to be organs of democracy will remain severely impaired so long as so many of them, particularly in the skilled crafts, maintain their barriers against Negro membership.

Editorial of the Day

MORE ABOUT A LOST ART.

[Portland Oregonian.]

A little while ago there appeared on this page the veracious account of a sad frustration in primary technology. The wistful hero of the record had set about, in utter confidence, to duplicate the willow whistle of his boyhood. But the whistle that he made could be called so only by courtesy, for it wouldn't whistle at all. As sundry ancient arts of the Aztecs are said to be lost to our culture, so this simplest of the juvenile handicrafts was lost to maturity. It was an odd sensation, he testified, to confess to this failure. He stood there by the river while its chuckle seemed derisive, sort of.

The melancholy matter would not have been broached again were it not for the circumstance that several masculine readers reported, subsequent to its discussion, that their hands, too, had lost their cunning in the fashioning of willow whistles. Nor had they been challenged by the recital of another's disappointment, since each, on his own initiative, had cut the willow, and tapped the bark, and prepared the whistle—for the fleeting restoration of the days that come no more—and each in turn had tossed the faithless wood aside, with never a sweet shrillness lifted, and resumed the frets and worries of his way. They laughed about it when they recited their failure. But under their laughter there was something else.

The experience must be universal, and the willow whistle but one of its many symbols. As the little girl said to the baffled artisan who used to make willow whistles in southern Missouri when he was a boy 50 years ago, "I guess only boys know how to make willow whistles." To be sure, undoubtedly it is a craft that could be regained, for men have made marvelous things—such as winged ships that carry cargoes to break down the strongest city—but there isn't time enough for recapturing the knowledge of how to make a willow whistle, tho there is time enough, as they think, for all else. As a great tidal wave, towering to break, so is time.

WHAT IS A DEMOCRACY?

The people of the United States have been deluged in recent months with propaganda urging them to embark on a crusade to save the democracies of the world.

This selection of allies on an ideological basis is unprecedented in history. It is unprecedented because it is so obviously foolish. Alliances are made to serve national self-interest and endure only so long as they continue to serve the interest of, not one, but both allies. Our own government has had the sound sense to let the ideologies go hang when it served our interest to ignore them. The present rulers of Cuba and Santo Domingo are rather thorogoing tyrants, but that has not prevented the United States from maintaining with those countries the close relations rendered necessary by their strategic location off our shores.

However, in view of the attempts to persuade this country to conduct its foreign affairs on a basis of emotion rather than reason, it should be useful to our thinking to appraise the numerous nations now being represented to us as democracies. Are they democracies? Democracy is a hard word to define, once one gets beyond the Greek word roots signifying rule by the people.

Is a democracy necessarily a republic? If so, none of the important European nations qualifies. On the other hand, the Latin American states are republics, yet some of them lack other characteristics of democratic government, and Russia, which in the last year has completed a system of tyranny that makes the czars look like the little fathers they were styled, still calls itself a union of republics.

Is the universal franchise essential? The Germans still have it. The British did not have it until 1918. Is a constitution essential? The British have no written constitution, yet boast of centuries of constitutional government. We have one, yet our present Supreme court seems to have difficulty in finding in it any restraint on executive actions.

* *

Democracy, it would appear from this, is a quality that transcends the bare bones of political government. It partakes of the whole way of life of a people, their social as well as political institutions. A factual appraisal of these institutions may not give a direct answer as to whether a given nation deserves to be called a democracy, but it should do what is much more valuable at the moment. It should demonstrate to what extent the institutions, habits of thought, and way of life of that particular nation parallel our own. The comparison need not be critical. Their institutions suit them. Ours suit us. Neither people, it is probable, would be satisfied if conditions were reversed.

Since Great Britain and the British empire occupy the largest place in the discussion of democracies, it is appropriate to consider them first. This picture of the British government, society, and empire is a broad and fascinating one.

An American is a citizen. The Briton is a subject. He has a king who, as a humerous historian once pointed out, can still, without the consent of parliament, disband the army [altho he cannot increase it], sell the navy, cede Dover or Cornwall to a foreign power, or make every one of his male subjects a duke. Of course he wouldn't do any of these things, but that is merely one of the inconsistencies, alternately delightful and exasperating, that make an attempt to appraise British institutions such a puzzling task.

A more fundamental contrast is that between the Englishman's legal rights and his political rights. Americans rightly reverence English law, which we have adapted as our own, because it is the most perfect system ever devised for protecting the individual against oppression by his rulers. All Englishmen, it may be said in passing, do not stand equal before the law. A peer charged with felony or treason is still tried by his peers, the house of lords, but the lords have shown themselves in the past as ready to hang a peer for murder as a jury of British commoners is to hang a commoner for the same crime.

There is a wide gulf, however, between protection by law against oppression by government and political participation in that government. In this latter respect the common man in Great Britain has won his rights much more slowly than the average American imagines. Representation in parliament was, from the earliest times, a representation accorded to property, not to persons.

The great electoral reform bill of 1832, which abolished the rotten boroughs, did not alter this fundamental, but merely broadened the base of representation to recognize the industrial and commercial wealth which after the industrial revolution had been denied the same voice in national affairs held by the older wealth based on land. Subsequent extensions of the franchise, up to the world war, were all based on property qualifications, most often expressed in latter years on payment of some certain sum in taxes. It was not until 1918, when the first woman voters were enfranchised, that the property qualifications were wholly removed. Some 2 million British men were given their first vote by that act. In local governmental affairs the franchise is still often confined to rate payers—local taxpayers. Plural voting, under which the same person can vote in more than one parliamentary district by reason of property rights or a university degree, still obtains, but to much less degree than formerly.

This comparative inexperience in political affairs, combined with the fact that British society is a very real and moderately rigid class system, has had the result that while the common man in Great Britain now is represented in the government, he rarely rises to any important position in the administration of that government. Even the trade union leaders are hardly a significant exception. Ramsay MacDonald could become prime minister, but in the governmental structure that he headed the overwhelming majority of the posts in governmental bureaus, army, navy, and the established church were held by men born to position. This governing class in England was aptly described two decades ago by A. Lawrence Lowell, then president of Harvard university, and a deep admirer of the British way of life. What he said then is still, in its essentials, true:

"The government is one to which Prof. Burgess alludes as 'government of the people, for the people, by the best of the people.' Without discussing in what sense they are the best of the people, it is clear that most of the seats in the house of commons are still held by members of a distinct social class. The elements are not, indeed, precisely the same as those who made up the aristocracy of a century ago. The old landed gentry are less numerous, and the representatives of commercial wealth more prominent, than they were then; but the English aristocracy has never been a closed body. Its doors have always been open to achievement, success, and wealth.

"Society in England is a national institution. It is not a collection of separate groups in separate places, but a single body with ramifications all over the country, and a central meeting ground in London during the season. Unlike the other classes in the community, which are local, society is universal. Its members have an extraordinarily wide acquaintance with one another from one end of the land to the other. They are connected by marriage, by early association at the public schools and at Oxford and Cambridge, and they are brought constantly together by entertainments in the capital and visits at country houses. Such a constitution gives to society great solidity and influence, without the narrowness and rigidity that attend a purely hereditary caste."

Further light on British society as an institution of government is shed by that remarkable document, the table of precedence. It will be discussed next week.

JUNE BUGS.

JUNE has long been associated with moonlight, roses, and weddings. But it is also the month in which biting and stinging insects make their début.

It behooves us, therefore, to be sure that screens are tight and that every possible breeding place has been removed. This means that piles of leaves and decaying vegetable matter, including manure, should be burned or disposed of.

Not only are flies annoying but their presence may prove dangerous to health. The common household variety can drag millions of noxious microbes over clean food. They prefer to feed on carrion—the fouler the material, the more "critters" will it attract. Thereafter, they may proceed from such a contaminated area directly to your kitchen or mine—if they are admitted. A goodly number of cases of "summer complaint" will arise just because the sugar or the butter on the table has been befouled by these transport planes of germ life. Should these pests gain entrance to the living quarters, go after them with sprays and swatters.

Most of us like to get out of doors and we will be certain to encounter chiggers. The adults of the species are fairly civilized. They live in the soil and lay their eggs on the ground or among dead leaves. Their special delight is to find caterpillars or other insects which constitute their natural prey. But when the young hatch, they creep up blades of grass or the stems of plants and there await an opportunity to attach themselves to any human being who comes their way. They are almost too small to be seen, hence they can pass easily thru clothing and reach the epidermis—where their antics may be most annoying. They love blood and they feel at liberty to take it where they can find it.

While they do not live long, they will cause so much irritation that scratching may be uncontrollable. This is a most hazardous practice as we are likely to infect the skin with bacteria from the fingernails. In consequence, inflamed spots may persist for weeks.

Before starting on a hike, or sitting on the lawn, it is wise to dust powdered sulphur on the legs and inside the stockings. If this precaution has been neglected, a bath in sudsy or salt water will allay itching. Covering the cuticle with a thin application of chloroform or spirits of camphor may bring relief.

Those who journey to the mountains, particularly the Rockies, must protect themselves against wood ticks. If these invaders harbor the causative organism of Rocky Mountain fever they may transmit the disease to a human host.

Some localities are widely infested with fleas. During warm weather, a well fortified household pup can spread them far and wide. As a rule, the type which we encounter routinely is not responsible for bubonic plague, altho wherever rats abound these too will be found. If we can wash Rover with a 2 per cent solution of creolin [a tablespoonful to a quart of water], the "jumpers" will become so nauseated that they will depart in haste. Sometimes naphthalene powder [moth balls] can be rubbed into the dog's fur, but this chemical should not be allowed to remain long in contact with the body as it may cause smarting.

The warmer days, for most of us, will not be comfortable unless we can avoid mosquitoes. On any lengthy tramp, take along a repellent consisting of one ounce of oil of citronella, one ounce spirits of camphor, and one-half ounce oil of cedar. Some pharmacists add a little castor oil. This will retain the pungent odor of the more volatile ingredients and will make the mixture last longer. This concoction will be reasonably efficient in a mosquito laden region.

Spuds are spuds—regardless of the season. They are among our most important starchy edibles. As a rule, a summer diet is not only lighter but more healthful. It contains more green things and fewer heat producers.

EMOTIONALIZING NEWS.

New York, May 26.—You probably know the story of the pathetically crippled mendicant who approached the kind old lady and told her his tale of woe, whereupon the kind old lady turned to her chauffeur and said, "Take him away, he's breaking my heart."

The indiscriminate, repetitious broadcasting of world war news thru the day [on many stations hourly and oftener] is directly responsible for public apathy.

It is in the nature of radio broadcasting of news that everything said seems like a headline; and a headline repeated ad infinitum becomes a headache. I am sure you will agree that psychologically it is impossible to try to emotionalize the public some 16 or 18 times a day. My personal experience has brought me into contact with dozens of people who have confessed that they have either stopped listening or have arrived at the stage of listening without hearing—apathetic. Thus instead of national morale we are encouraging national apathy.

The line of least resistance for a sponsored broadcast at the moment is a newscast. Many commercial users of time, with limited budgets, find it comparatively inexpensive to buy spot announcements advertising their products preceding or following some form of newscast, or even sponsoring an entire 15 minute newscast to serve as a background for a series of interruptions for commercial blurbs.

While the fires of hell and hate are consuming the very heart of civilization, radio, like Nero, keeps fiddling away; and in the most ingratiating tones, in a cooing, caressing voice, keeps ever repeating, "Sit down, America, take off your shoes, put on your slippers, get out that robe, put a little tobacco in your pipe or a cigaret between your lips and I will help you to enjoy being lazy, and show you how to 'kill' an evening. All you have to do to enter this zone of immunization from reality is to twist your wrist." IRVING CAESAR.

TIGHT WAD; THEN SPENDTHRIFT.

Chicago, May 19.—Altho the danger of America getting into a war is great, there is one that is even more serious. That is the danger that our economic system will collapse. Altho our brilliant intellects in Washington are deliberately trying to destroy our present way of earning a living, they do not seem to have anything better to offer in its place.

For instance, any one knows that American prosperity is based on purchasing power. We have a lot because we earn more and because we buy more. Indeed, up to the time of the present "emergency," government agencies were doing their best to get Americans to spend every dime they made. We were told that spending creates jobs.

Suddenly there is a reversal of this policy. Now we are told not to buy so many automobiles. We are urged that it's not patriotic to trade in radios. In the name of national defense we are urged to buy products not made of metals [practically an impossibility because America is built on steel].

All right, supposing we play ball with the boys in Washington and curtail our spending. Let's assume the old car is wonderful, and that we don't need a radio. Let's assume we "do without" and get ourselves adjusted to sacrificing conveniences. What will happen when the affair in Europe is over? Does the government think that merely by waving a wand we'll suddenly start buying things? You can't convert a man into a tight wad for 1941 and expect him to revert back into a spendthrift in 1943.

National defense is necessary, no doubt about that. But let's make our defense "national" and not "international." There's plenty of steel, aluminum, zinc, and copper for both domestic and defense uses. All we have to do is keep in mind that our interests are on this side of the Atlantic. STEPHEN TEDOR.

SAYS I. E. R. C. IS EFFICIENT.

Chicago, May 26.—As a relief client who has seen better days I will say a few words about the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. This highly efficient organization did not happen over night. Meeting after meeting was held. Mistakes were made, but were not made twice. This splendid organization is not a politicians' pay roll. The workers are qualified by education and experience. No matter what department you contact you will find it modern and efficient. It would be treason to curtail the excellent service.

Defense has taken some off the rolls. The major cause of extreme poverty is crime. As crime costs go higher and higher more and more innocent victims of crime will be forced on relief. As crime increases taxes increase. As taxes increase, rents increase, and the poor are depressed and oppressed. M. C.

PROPAGANDA FUNDS.

New York, May 27.—Can't we have a law [and have it at once] which will compel all propaganda agencies to fully reveal the source of their funds? How absurd it is to have a law requiring this of political parties but not of the committees dealing with the infinitely more vital field of international affairs!

Why need any honest American be ashamed of an honest conviction? If German funds are backing the isolationists the American people have a right to know this! And if British funds are backing the interventionists the American people have a right to know this, too! K. D. M.

TOUCHING ON "DEAR ALBEN."

Terre Haute, Ind., May 27.—Congratulations upon your editorial relative to having Senator Barkley of Kentucky as an enemy. Millions of good citizens agree with you.

If our government was ever afflicted with a pestilence, it is summed up in the word Barkley. I have talked with many good citizens from Kentucky.

Keep up the honest fight. Our democracy may be a lost cause. However, if it is worth having it is worth fighting the evil influences that in my opinion are tearing it apart. More power to your good paper. C. R. LA BIER, M. D.

WOES OF THE LANDLORD.

Chicago, May 25.—To consider the perennial question of apartment rents, taxes paid and unpaid, we suggest to tenants, landlords, and assessing board experts, consider the following concrete facts:

A two apartment building, five and six rooms, hot water heating plant, stone front and brick construction, built year 1908—cost $7,500, and kept in good repair. Total present year's rental—two families at $600—$1,200.

Depreciation building 2½ %	$ 187.50
Annual cleaning-painting 2 apts.	150.00
Sundry, other upkeep [low]	50.00
Coal for heating, 18 tons	162.00
Gas bills, hot water heating for 8	84.00
Janitor	180.00
Tax bill for year 1940	226.02
Total	$1,039.52
Income, rents	$1,200.00
Net income	$ 160.48

Assessment valuation per tax bill is $2,374. Same income $160.48 capitalized at 4 per cent net equals $4,012. A $4,012 conservative mortgage investment would then have an assessment valuation of $401.20, which at the 1940 tax rate, $9.52, is $38.19.

Speculative values, of course, being out in sound computations, no investment has any value over its net income return, so that consistency would then suggest that the above real estate should be taxed at $38.19 instead of $226.02.

The writer is not in the real estate business nor do we own any other real estate in Chicago, nor obviously wish to do so. A 40 YEAR CHICAGO RESIDENT.

OUR UNPREPAREDNESS.

Champaign, Ill., May 24.—The Tribune photo of the military display at the University of Illinois is an echo of the desperate condition of our country's preparedness. Horse drawn artillery with pea shooter effectiveness against tanks, and not a tank or caterpillar at the school with which to maneuver. The school has its Black Hawk cavalry, something like Chicago's Black Horse troop—good for display, but the brutes have a three minute life expectancy in actual conflict. One Stuka dive bomber probably could have incapacitated most of the participants in short order. We must awake, for God helps those who help themselves FORNEY WINGARD.

A PARK BOARD "ECONOMY."

Chicago, May 19.—A comfort station located at Milwaukee avenue and Logan square has been closed and barricaded by the park board. They say it costs too much to keep it up. This comfort station was used by many mothers and children during the summer months.

If the park board would remove some of its political favorites such as are paid to watch the gold fish in the lagoons, count the dandelions in the lawns and watch the bees make honey, then the park board might be able to reopen the comfort station this summer. LORETTA MEEGAN.

TITLE TO PROPERTY.

Chicago, May 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I owned a lot in Illinois and had to [1] turn it in to a bank for a debt when the bank failed in 1932. Recently some one bought the tail end debts of the bank and evidently the lot was included. I never gave the bank a deed or abstract to the lot.

2. The man who bought the debts of the bank called me and said he had paid taxes on the lot for the last seven years and wanted me to sign some papers to give him full possession.

3. Could this man go into court and get full possession without a deed or abstract from me regardless of whether he has paid taxes on same?

4. My opinion would be that I would have to give him some kind of a signed paper so as not to put a cloud on the title. F. J. K.

1. In view of your later statement that you never gave a deed, it is not clear what you mean by your statement that "you turned it in."

2. Payment of taxes would not be enough to give him a title unless he had some kind of paper title, in addition to the facts stated in your letter.

3. No, on the facts that you state, but it seems probable that additional facts are involved. We suggest that you examine the tract index in the recorder's office to see whether he doesn't have some kind of conveyance.

4. Even if he has a paper title and is in a position to defeat you under the seven year statute it nevertheless would be true that a quit claim deed from you would be of value to him since it would relieve him of the expense of court proceedings to clear the title. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MONEY OWED.

Chicago, May 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A man who owes us a large sum of money has an automobile. He has paid off quite a bit by time payments but still owes a few instalments on his car. He has told people that nobody will ever be able to place a lien on his car because as soon as he finishes paying for it he is going to take a loan on the car.

1. Is there any way we can place a lien on the car before it is paid for completely? If he contends that he needs his car for his work [2] could we place a judgment or lien against it, since his son is working and makes enough to support his parents?

3. Have you any suggestion as to how we could collect our money? W. A.

1. Yes. There can be two liens on a car just as there can be a first and second mortgage on real estate.

2. Yes. His personal property exemption is $400 worth if he is head of a family, otherwise $100 worth. The claim that he needs the car for his work has nothing to do with it.

3. Your chances of collecting depends upon his assets and income. If you have no experience in such matters, it probably would be advisable to employ an attorney.

BOY GRADUATES GET A CHANCE TO PICK AND CHOOSE

Armed Forces, Industry Vie for Their Favor.

Professional commencement speakers will have to stir up a new speech next month when they address high school students. The old stuff about making the most of meager opportunities, meeting discouragement with a smile, and conquering adversity with fortitude must be discarded.

This year's high school seniors, and the boy graduates particularly, are being courted with jobs, promises, and careers that would have seemed unbelievable a year ago. They're looking to commencement orators for advice about choosing one of several offers rather than how to find one.

Among the most ardent suitors for the favor of the graduates are three branches of Uncle Sam's armed forces, the coast guard, the marine corps, and the navy.

Lists Are Studied.

Already recruiting officers of the coast guard and the marine corps are studying lists of the 17,999 graduates who will pour forth from Chicago's public high schools on June 27. The navy is doing its missionary work thru the showing of moving pictures illustrating the attractions of life at sea in two high schools each day.

In all three of the services recruiting has fallen off in the last two or three weeks. For the first time since the new preparedness program began there aren't enough recruits to fill the quotas.

The recruiting officers are agreed about the reasons. Offices and factories are competing for the services of young men with energy akin to fierceness. The draft is siphoning off older men who might otherwise make acceptable recruits. As a result, the high school graduates seem to be the most promising prospects for careers in the armed services of voluntary enlistment.

To meet the stiffer competition for men, recruiting officers have revised and improved the old arguments.

Security in Navy Stressed.

Lieut. David N. Goldenson, chief recruiting officer in Chicago for the navy, stresses security to his candidates for enlistment.

"You can enlist in the navy for six years," he says, "and learn a trade — machinist's, carpenter's, electrician's, radio engineer's, or others. You will get food, clothing, shelter, medical and dental attention, and education free. You will receive $21 a month for four months, a raise to $36 at the end of four months, and by the end of the year you should be getting $54 a month clear.

"Your job with the navy is permanent. You won't be thrown out of your job if something happens to halt the rush to rearm. The depression after the war won't reach you, and if you show aptitude you may be sent to Annapolis to learn to be an officer."

First Sergt. B. F. Rippy, marine corps recruiting officer, finds that a little patriotism mingled with the standard arguments is effective.

Appeals to Patriotism.

"You can do your country a great patriotic service," he tells his candidates, "and at the same time give yourself a break. You can learn any one of 15 trades in marine schools free. You can earn up to $154 a month clear as a petty officer and by applying yourself you can become a commissioned officer. You can travel to Cuba, China, or any of our territories. You'll have a lot of fun in the marine corps and you'll profit from the experience."

Chief Boatswain's Mate A. C. Stewart challenges young men with the prospect of hard work and worthwhile rewards: "You have to work and dig in the coast guard," he says, "but if you have the ability and are willing to apply it you can go right straight from this office to top ranking officer. We start you off with $21 a month plus all your expenses of living. At the end of three months you draw $36. Even if you do not become a commissioned officer, you may rate $157 a month and all expenses as a chief petty officer. After 20 years you can retire on half pay and allowances. There are at least a dozen trades you can learn at no cost."

CAMP DAVIS (N.C.) DRAFTEES FIGHT PLAGUE OF DUST

Dirt and Sand Assail Chicago Soldiers.

Camp Davis, N. C., May 31 [Special].—Thousands of Chicagoland boys in traning here are finding the ordinary military hardships grossly increased by an almost constant plague of dirt and dust that blows over them from the filled swampland on whch the government erected this big camp.

They strive to clean it from their perspiring bodies, to which it adheres tenaciously as they toil in heat of 90 and more degrees, but they are covered again so quickly they assert it is almost a waste of time to try to wash it away.

Few Improvements Made.

Little has been done in the way of landscaping at the camp. A few asphalt roads recently were completed but most of the avenues are dirty sandy stretches. Even the parade ground has not been leveled off and now resembles the rough of a poor golf course.

Many camp buildings are in the process of erection, with men working day and night to complete them.

The barracks are two story structures made of wood and each houses about 60 men. Utmost care must be exercised to prevent fires.

Radio Reception Poor.

Radio reception is poor here. This seems to be a dead spot so far as the ether waves are concerned.

During the day the heat is intense, hovering above the 90 degree mark even this early in the summer. Fortunately, however, the nights are cooled by ocean breezes.

The work is hard but the boys are gradually becoming acclimated to their new surroundings. The most common ailment is homesickness, from which few have escaped.

U. OF I. WILL BE HOST TO CROWDS OF FARM FOLK

Urbana, Ill., May 31 [Special].—Two meetings to be held at the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois on Tuesday and Wednesday will bring thousands of farm folk to the campus. They are the annual 4-H tour and the annual meeting of testers for 85 dairy herd improvement associations and 2,100 Illinois dairy farmers.

A citizenship ceremony will feature the 4-H tour. All county delegates who will become 21 years of age before next year's tour will participate.

Award at a banquet Tuesday night of master cow tester awards to the 10 outstanding testers will feature the dairy farmers gathering.

LEGISLATOR HITS DE LEUW LOBBY IN SUPERROAD BILL

Sullivan Tells of 'Joker' in House Amendment.

BY HAL FOUST.

The Illinois senate this week will debate amendments to the Chicago and Cook county toll superhighway bill, including an alleged joker injected thru the lobbying of Charles E. De Leuw, engineer for the Chicago commission on subways and superhighways.

The professional and political background of this city hall engineer was made an issue by Representative T. J. Sullivan [D., Springfield] in opposing the bill in the form it was passed by the house last week. The legislator recalled that De Leuw was author of an abortive Congress street superparkway scheme and he was also a subject of a council inquiry of a drain of expert fees from the city's traction fund. Sullivan charged that recommendations from De Leuw were not worthy of consideration by the lawmakers.

Familiar with Roads Laws.

Both Sullivan and De Leuw formerly worked for the Illinois highway department, during the Horner administration, Sullivan as an attorney in condemnation cases and De Leuw as assistant chief engineer. Both are familiar with the ins and outs of Illinois roads laws.

Sullivan said the lawmakers intended the state highway department to supervise location and design of the proposed toll routes but that Chicago city hall interests had inserted an apparently innocent phrase—"minor changes"—into the bill to thwart the legislature.

As the bill was amended before house passage, with De Leuw in the lobbies superintending the draft of amendments, the proposed new road building authority could make "minor changes" after receiving state approval of location and designs. Sullivan cited Supreme court decisions interpreting broad discretionary powers in highway affairs into statutory authorization for "minor changes."

Agency Could Sell Bonds.

Another De Leuw amendment would cause the toll road building agency to consist of two men to serve five year terms. One of the two would be appointed by the mayor of Chicago and the other by the Cook county board. The agency would be empowered to sell bonds without referendum and without limitation as to amount, with the bonds to be a lien on toll collections, probably at 10 cents a car. Under the original bill, the Cook county highway superintendent would be the road building agent, subject to supervision by the county board and the state highway department, with his construction within Chicago subject to approval by the city council.

"Who is this man De Leuw, the only person who appeared before this house in support of the amended bill?" Sullivan asked, and then told of the engineer's connections with a Congress street plan that is condemned by the postoffice department as a threat against Chicago's mail service. He also told of the council's inquiry in experts' fees paid from the traction fund.

Scheme Killed by Exposé.

De Leuw and Ernst Lieberman, state highway engineer, were employed in the board of local improvements in 1931 and 1932 under Benjamin F. Lindheimer as president of the board, and the late Anton J. Cermak as mayor. It was in that era that the city hall hatched a scheme, killed by an exposé, to assess property owners the extra cost of an asphalt surface on concrete slab to be laid on 41 miles of Chicago streets with state and county gas tax money.

De Leuw and Lieberman left the city hall to top the state highway department when the late Henry Horner became governor in 1932 and Lindheimer became one of his cabinet members. De Leuw was a highway department executive for four years during scandals of pay roll padding, labor racketeering, and collusive bidding for contracts.

While in the highway department De Leuw opposed construction of a west side elevated highway, contending the money could be spent better on conventional street pavements. He indorsed a scheme for a wide parkway in Congress street, which the government contends would block mail trucks at the new postoffice. The plan would spend millions of motorists' gas tax funds for depressed realty for a wide right of way.

Employed on Subway Job.

For the last four years De Leuw and his engineering firm, Charles E. De Leuw & Co., have been employed by Philip Harrington, Mayor Kelly's commissioner of subways and superhighways. With the aid of aldermen and ward politicians, they drafted a so-called 200 million dollar comprehensive plan of superhighways for Chicago, including the Congress street job. De Leuw also has worked on the subway project.

In February and March the council finance committee requested and received reports from City Controler Robert B. Upham showing that $2,961,589 had been withdrawn from the city's traction fund to pay city employés' salaries in three years and $514,688 in vouchers to lawyers, engineers, and real estate experts.

"The report," said Ald. John S. Boyle [16th], "shows De Leuw received $10,000 a year salary from the traction fund in 1938 and $12,500 for 1939 and for 1940. This was a total of $35,000 in salary for three years. At the same time $116,710 was paid from the traction fund to Charles E. De Leuw & Co. as a fee for its expert advice. The total was $151,710. Certainly such large items should be explained to the aldermen."

MIDNIGHT GANG'S HOUR TO STRIKE AT THRILL SHOW

Police Will Round Up Mob in Gun Battle.

BY WILLIAM MOORE.

Eddie the Clock and his mythical outlaw band will be among the spectators at the fourth annual Chicago Police and Fire Thrill show in Soldiers' field Sunday afternoon, July 13.

The mythical gangsters will attend in what they mean to be a joke on the policemen in the show's crime drama. Eddie the Clock's plan is to write the police a letter after the show, telling them that they might have captured him and all his gang if they'd had their eyes open.

Face Roundup During Show.

But the police will have their eyes open for the outlaws. Informed in advance that the gangsters will be there, the police will be close on their trail, and will start a roundup of the gang in the midst of the show. The gangsters, realizing that they have fallen into a trap, will then leap over the railing and run into the field to shoot it out with the police in a desperate gang battle.

The crowd will be given an opportunity to pick out the gangsters scattered thru the stands before the drama begins. A description of the gangsters will be given over the loudspeaker system.

Eddie the Clock is the leader of a band of eight outlaws who always commit their holdups at midnight. For that reason the gang is known as the Midnight Gang.

How to Recognize Eddie.

Eddie the Clock himself is a bandit with an obsession about time. He wants all the gang's movements timed to the minute.

He will be easy to pick out because he is always looking to see what time it is—and he carries enough watches to stock a jewelry store. On either wrist he wears a watch which he consults constantly. He carries a lapel watch in his coat. He has pocket watches in his vest. And a complete description of him will be given to make it easier to identify him.

Eddie the Clock's first lieutenant loves the sparkle of diamonds. Every place there's room for a diamond, he wears two. There'll be diamonds on his fingers, and diamonds in his cuff links, and a diamond stud in his shirt. If you get a chance to see his belt buckle, you'll discover that it's studded with a diamond.

They'll Become Boastful.

The police will get on the gang's trail because the gangsters become too boastful in their hideout apartment. The dramatic way in which their conversation about going to the Police and Fire show is disclosed is one of the things you'll have to wait until the show begins to discover.

But don't let the gangsters alarm you. They're really actors with hearts of gold who shoot at policemen only in police dramas, and they hope that if you do recognize them sitting next to you you won't tell a soul.

It'll Be a Finish Fight.

The gang battle will bring into play every modern weapon of the police. Speedy squad cars, machine guns, siege shields, and tear gas will all be used to capture the bandits when they barricade themselves for a finish fight.

The Police and Fire show is sponsored by the Chicago fire and police departments and the Chicago park district in coöperation with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. In strange contrast to the modern crime drama will be a wild west stagecoach robbery in which a daring sheriff's posse will round up a gang of desperadoes.

The fire department will bring its biggest trucks and present a stirring spectacle in a fight against flames in a six story building.

3,000 PAY TAXES IN 3 HOURS; GRACE ENDS TOMORROW

More than 3,000 persons jammed into County Treasurer John Toman's office during yesterday's three business hours and paid $2,554,745 on 18,242 assessments for real and personal property taxes. The total was one of the largest over the counter payments for a short day in the history of the office.

Today is the deadline for payment of first instalments on 1940 taxes, but the period of grace has been extended until midnight tomorrow because the last day fell on Sunday. Payments postmarked before that time will not be subject to penalties. Nearly $73,000,000 had been collected this year thru yesterday, compared with $42,896,409 at the close of business Thursday and $38,503,851 on Thursday's corresponding date last year. An estimated $30,000,000 additional has been received by mail in the last two days, Toman said.

Some of the large payments awaiting tabulation, the approximate amounts and the taxpayers are: Commonwealth Edison company, $5,000,000; Illinois Bell Telephone company, $4,000,000; Chicago Surface Lines, $2,800,000, and the Peoples Gas, Light and Coke company, $2,300,000.

COUNTY'S AUTO TOLL RISES 16 IN 5 MONTH PERIOD

City Deaths Increase Only One, Survey Shows.

Automobile fatalities in Chicago and Cook county increased in the first five months of 1941 compared with the corresponding period in 1940, according to figures made public yesterday by the coroner's office. Virtually all the increase consisted of accidents which occurred in the county outside Chicago.

There were 368 deaths in the entire county, including Chicago, during the first five months of 1941, compared with 352 for the first five months of last year. This was an increase of 16. Chicago's death toll for the two periods was 273 and 272, an increase of one. Thus 15 out of 16 of the additional fatalities occurred outside the city.

For May, up to 2 p. m. yesterday, there had been 94 fatalities in the county, of which 65 occurred in Chicago. In May, 1940, there were 71 deaths in the county, of which 58 occurred in Chicago.

Three Detectives Injured.

Three members of a detective bureau squad were injured last night when their car collided with a beer truck and overturned at Roosevelt road and Racine avenue. The injured policemen are George Harding, 35, of 7254 Jeffery avenue; Raymond McCahill, 34, of 7725 Sangamon street, and Peter Meyer, 36, of 1217 Albion avenue. Harding was taken to St. Luke's hospital and the others to Mother Cabrini hospital. At the time of the accident the squad was going to a building at Jackson boulevard and Sangamon street, where a burglary had been reported.

Herman Nelson, 47 years old, a bricklayer, was injured fatally when he was struck by a hit and run car at 76th street and Langley avenue. Nelson, who lived at 7556 Champlain avenue, died in Jackson Park hospital.

Six Injured in Collision.

Six persons were injured in a collision of two cars at 79th street and Archer avenue, Justice. The most seriously hurt were Edward Madij, 24, of 5213 South Mulligan avenue, driver of one car, and Miss Clare Rainer, 19, of Ottawa, La Salle county, who was in the other car.

FOUR WEDDINGS DRAW INTEREST OF CHICAGOANS

Anita Smith Is Married to Radford Van Ness.

BY JUDITH CASS.

One of yesterday's prettiest brides was Miss Anita Smith, daughter of the Lawrence D. Smiths of Lake Forest, who was married at 5 o'clock in the Lake Forest Presbyterian church to Radford Van Ness of Chicago. The slim, dark haired bride wore a gown of ivory satin and an old family veil.

The wedding was small because the bridegroom's family is in mourning for his father, the late Gardiner B. Van Ness. A reception followed in the Smith home. Mr. Van Ness and his bride left on a brief wedding trip.

Elizabeth Brown Weds.

Most of the hundred guests present at the marriage in Wheaton yesterday of Miss Elizabeth Brown and Dudley F. Jessopp were relatives of the bride, who is a member of one of Chicago's largest and most prominent families. She is the eldest daughter of the William B. Browns, in whose home the ceremony took place. The Rev. Robert Stewart of the Wheaton Presbyterian church officiated.

The bride, who is tall and dark, wore a gown of traditional white satin and carried stephanotis. Old family lace trimmed her veil. Mr. Jessopp and his bride will live in Highland Park.

Virginia Ballard Marries.

For her marriage to Walter L. Cherry Jr., at 4:30 o'clock yesterday in the Winnetka Congregational church, Miss Virginia Ballard chose an all white motif. The bride's gown of white tulle was fashioned with tight bodice, long sleeves, and scalloped neckline and over her golden hair lay an heirloom lace veil.

At the Winnetka Woman's club, where the Roger K. Ballards gave their daughter's wedding reception, the receiving line was formed against a screen of green ferns. Mr. Cherry, whose parents, like the Ballards, live in Winnetka, will take his bride on a three week wedding trip. They will be at home in Wilmette.

Katherine Lightbody Becomes Bride.

Miss Katherine Jane Lightbody, daughter of the James D. Lightbodys, of Glencoe, and Lieut. Francis W. Parker III., son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Parker Jr. of Highland Park, were married at 4:15 o'clock in the National Cathedral in Washington, D. C.

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress of brocaded crepe de chine. Among her attendants was the bridegroom's sister, Miss Jeanne Parker. The ceremony was held in the St. Joseph of Arimathaea chapel of the cathedral.

CHICAGO LEADERS MAP CAMPAIGN TO SAVE AUDITORIUM

Recall Commodore Peck's 1923 Victory.

There's a movement afoot to keep open the Auditorium hotel and theater, which under present plans will be closed on June 30. Failure of the building to earn sufficient income to meet expenses is the reason for the closing.

William F. Krahl, president of the Stevens hotel, yesterday called a meeting of hotel, theater, and business men for noon Tuesday to discuss means of saving the historic property.

He said yesterday that it is unfortunate that the man who conceived the Auditorium project, spent 15 years of his life and much of his money bringing it to fruition, and brought it thru the crisis of 1923 when a threat was made to tear it down — Commodore Ferdinand W. Peck—is not alive to direct the drive.

Only One Other Attempt Made.

The commodore, one of the outstanding pioneer Chicagoans, died in 1924 at the age of 76. During his lifetime only one attempt—that of 1923—was made to tear down the Auditorium. His reply was:

"Since 1887 the Auditorium has been my child. As long as I live I'll never let them tear it down."

Then, too, the complaint was that the structure did not pay.

"I say it has paid!" the commodore answered. "It has paid enormously, thousands of per cent in 34 years. The prestige and enjoyment this building has brought to Chicago cannot be measured in dollars."

Theater an Acoustic Marvel.

His pride was the theater, an acoustic marvel, that was then the home of the Chicago Civic opera. With Sullivan and Adler, the architects, and his son, Ferdinand Jr., the commodore toured Europe's opera halls studying design, so that the Auditorium might profit by Europe's mistakes.

Ferdinand Peck Jr. recalled yesterday that his father raised by subscription $3,500,000 to build the Auditorium and warned every subscriber that it would not be a financially profitable venture.

"Yes, dad would be fighting to save the Auditorium," the son said, "if for no other reason than sentiment. Thousands of Chicagoans feel the same way.

"I know the buildings are no longer profitable, that taxes have piled up, but it seems a shame that the theater can't be moved into Grant park and rebuilt. It seats 3,500 people, its architecture is beautiful, and Chicago needs it.

Urges Financial Aid.

"There should be enough civic minded individuals to finance the move, to preserve this monument of Chicago's heyday."

"It's a long jump and a tragic one," Peck added, "from the night of Dec. 9, 1889, when the dedication was held, to the present. President Harrison, Gov. Fifer of Illinois, and Mayor DeWitt C. Cregier of Chicago attended the opening, and Adelina Patti sang 'Last Rose of Summer.'

"George M. Pullman, P. D. Armour, Marshall Field, and others congratulated dad. Now the large estates that own the land operate the buildings, back taxes are more than $1,000,000, and the final straw was the withdrawal of heat, light, and hydraulic power by the Congress hotel."

The Congress announced it is installing a smaller plant and will not be able to serve the Auditorium any more.

SLAYS 2 IN QUARREL.

Isaac Williams, 44 years old, and George Goff, 48, a janitor, both colored, were shot and killed by a third Negro in an argument over $12 in Williams' furniture store at 3357 State street yesterday. Police held Robert Rockmore, 44, of 3718 La Salle street.

MAYOR REVOKES $500,000 THEATER CAFE'S LICENSES

Mayor Kelly revoked the operating licenses of the Theater café at 4812 North Clark street yesterday on complaint of Commissioner Allman that liquor had been sold to minors.

The revocation was directed against the Rainbow Amusement company, Joseph Miller, president, and Peter Fremont, secretary. The place was formerly owned by Michael Todd. Police said the Theater café was outfitted and opened at a cost of nearly $500,000.

Licenses of four taverns and one liquor store also were revoked by the mayor. The establishments and the charge against them: Plaza Distributing company, 316 North avenue, Albert J. Beyer, owner, selling to minors; Fred Buckmaster, 3216 East 92d street, Charles Torres, 9228 Commercial avenue, and Michael Wlodarski, 3219 East 92d street, employing tavern hostesses, and Joseph Bionde, 4143 South Halsted street, operating a handbook.

CUPID HANGS UP A RECORD; 239 LICENSES ISSUED

A staff of extra clerks worked yesterday to keep pace with the stream of couples who jammed the marriage license bureau.

A total of 239 licenses was issued during the day, bringing to 5,015 the number issued during May. The month's total was more licenses than ever were issued in May, with the exception of May, 1937, before new marriage requirements went into effect in Illinois. The rush brought the 1941 total to 16,368, an increase of 2,788 over the first five months of 1940.

Many applicants said they were speeding their marriage plans because they have received draft questionnaires. Single men without dependents are the first to be taken into selective service.

KNIFE SHARPENER FALLS DEAD.

Henry Chadwell, 62 years old, 121 North Ogden avenue, an itinerant knife sharpener, died of a heart attack yesterday in front of 7004 North Clark street.

SOX BEAT BROWNS, 4 TO 3; GAIN ON INDIANS

ALSAB'S STRETCH RUSH WINS STAKE AT LINCOLN FIELDS

INDIANA TRACK TITLE RETAINED BY NOTRE DAME

Beats Indiana U. by Eight Points.

Table of Points

Notre Dame	68¼	Taylor	5
Indiana	60¼	Indiana State	3
Butler	17¾	Ball State	3
DePauw	7¾	Earlham	0

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Bloomington, Ind., May 31.—Notre Dame successfully defended its Indiana state track championship this afternoon in Memorial stadium against the challenge of Indiana university, which was crowned champion of the Western conference two weeks ago. Notre Dame's well balanced squad could win only 4 of the 14 individual titles and share in another, while the Hoosiers took 6, but the Irish scored in every event and climaxed their parade of strength with victory in the mile relay.

Notre Dame scored 68¼ points to Indiana's 60¼ and the Irish demonstrated superior personnel by taking 26 of the 56 scoring places in the 14 individual events. Butler university was an indifferent third with 17¾ points, but the Indianapolis school shared in the individual honors when Ray Alsbury scored 13 points to match Indiana's Roy Cochran.

He's a One Man Team.

Alsbury won the 100 yard dash, was second to Cochran in the 220 yard low hurdles, and then defeated Cochran in the broad jump. Cochran's other title came in the quarter mile, in which he matched the seven year old meet record of 48 seconds established by another Hoosier star, Ivan Fuqua.

This was the only approach to establishment of new state records. Indiana's Archie Harris, who has been within two inches of a world record in the discus twice in the last two weeks, failed to break his own mark in this event. Harris threw the discus 163 feet 1¼ inches, compared with his national record of 174 feet 1 inch. Archie was second in the shot put to Notre Dame's Jim Delaney. The Irish star won with a mark of 50 feet 3⅜ inches.

Campbell Kane scored two victories for the Hoosiers, taking the mile and half mile, and Fred Wilt captured the two mile run.

Other Irish Winners.

In addition to Delaney, Notre Dame's individual winners were Keith O'Rourke, William Dillon, and Frank Sheets. John Wietoff shared the pole vault championship with Colin Higgins of DePauw. O'Rourke outclassed the high jump field to win at 6 feet 3 7/10 inches. Dillon won the high hurdles in the fair time of 14 6/10 seconds, and Sheets was first in the 220 yard sprint.

Wilt's time of 9:18.2 in the two miles—his second best competitive effort—was too much for Notre Dame's Oliver Hunter, who was beaten by 10 yards. Wayne Tolliver, Indiana's Big Ten champion at this distance, after leading for four laps, fell back, but finally saved third place. Wilt went into the lead at the end of the fifth lap and never was headed.

Kane Wins Mile Easily.

Closest battle on the track was the duel between Cochran and Ray Roy of Notre Dame. Roy's brilliant bid in the stretch, where he pulled up on even terms, unquestionably forced Cochran to his effort that tied the meet record. Marc Jenkins of Indiana, second in the Western confer-

Bonura Says He's Ready for Call to Army June 19

Minneapolis, Minn., May 31 (AP).—Zeke Bonura, first baseman for the Minneapolis American association baseball team, greeted news today from his New Orleans draft board that he will be inducted June 19 for a year's army training with the declaration, "I'm ready."

Zeke Bonura.

"I'm really in condition for the army," he said. "I'm in the best shape of my whole career."

Bonura said he plans to drive his car, home, take care of business and spend a few days with the folks before reporting. The Miller management will recall Frank Houska from Moline, Ill., to replace Bonura.

Bargain Colt Beats Kirwin by 5 Lengths

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Alsab won the $5,000 Joliet stakes yesterday at Lincoln Fields—but that wasn't the half of it. The way in which he won was what gave a tremendous wallop to his owner, Al Sabath, Chicago lawyer, and to the fans who were backing him at nearly 4 to 1.

This game little colt got the worst of all the trouble that goes with racing in a big field of skittish juveniles in a five furlong dash. Running with the ruggedness of an old handicap star he shouldered his way thru the crowding on the short sprint for the turn. He refused to sulk when he was blocked and forced into eighth place on the curve. When straightened out in the stretch, the veteran Earl Pool sat down and rode him hard. Alsab responded with an amazing rush. He caught the leaders at the sixteenth pole, drew clear very fast and won by five lengths.

Kirwin Saves Second by Head.

Kirwin, owned by Butch Covington of Kentucky, saved second place by the margin of a head from the fast finishing Valdina Orphan. Royal Martha, the filly which had been established as the 3 to 1 favorite because of her victory in the debutante stakes at Churchill Downs never was able to reach a contending position. Valdina Alpha, which had been considered the stronger member of the Valdina entry, got away so poorly that he trailed the field by many yards on the rush for the first turn and he wound up twelfth.

Alsab ran the five furlongs in 1:01, which was excellent time for the conditions under which he was operating. The track had been slowed considerably by overnight rains. Those who backed him in the mutuels collected $9.80, $5.80 and $3.80 across the board. Place and show prices on Kirwin were $14.60 and $8. This horse had closed at 11 to 1. Valdina Orphan returned $3.80 to show, the entry having been third choice in the betting at 6 to 1.

Alsab a Bargain Colt.

Alsab is assured of a place among the bargain colts. Sabath picked him up for $700 at the Saratoga sales last summer out of the consignment of Thomas Piatt, Kentucky breeder. Piatt was in the paddock yesterday to wish Sabath luck when the well proportioned colt went prancing out for the parade to the post.

After the race, Sabath said he plans to send Alsab to Suffolk Downs for the Miles Standish and Mayflower stakes, after which he will bring him back to Chicago for the Hyde Park stakes at Arlington. Alsab isn't eligible for the Arlington futurity but he is in the Washington Park futurity. He'll also compete in the stakes at Hawthorne.

Alsab was brought up to his splendid condition by Trainer August [Sarge] Swenke. It was the 10th start of his career and his fourth victory. He has been second twice and third once while campaigning in Florida, Kentucky, and Lincoln Fields.

It's a Helter Skelter Race.

The Joliet stakes was a helter skelter race from start to finish. Sergt. Bill went right out to make the pace, opening up a lead of two lengths as they went into the turn. Kirwin and K Dorko were strung out in pursuit, three lengths apart. The rest of the field was closely bunched, with Alsab in the thick of the crowding.

Sergt. Bill was three lengths out in front as they came to the head of the stretch and Kirwin and K Dorko were maintaining their same relative positions, but the pack was closing in now and Jockey Pool was guiding Alsab up between horses. Once they were straightened out, Alsab came right on home—and Pool had shown again that he still knows how to ride two year olds.

The mutuel handle for the day was $431,003.

MICHIGAN TENNIS TEAM CAPTURES BIG TEN TOURNEY

Michigan won only two singles titles but clinched the Big Ten tennis tournament in singles competition on the University of Chicago courts yesterday, becoming the first team besides Northwestern and Chicago to win the team championship inaugurated in 1933.

Seymour Greenberg, Northwestern's brilliant junior, beat Jim Tobin of Michigan for the singles crown, 6-4, 6-3. Greenberg's successful title defense places him in a position to tie the record of Frank O'Connell of Illinois, who won three straight years.

Greenberg also won the first division doubles by teaming with Capt. Gene Richards to beat Jim Tobin and Jim Hammett of Michigan, 6-3, 8-6.

Kimetick Upsets Richards.

Harry Hall of Northwestern defeated Chris Geankoplis of Minnesota in straight sets in the third division. Gene Richards, Northwestern's second division entrant, was upset by Walter Kemetick, Chicago's only singles winner.

Michigan's singles victories were scored by Tom Gamon and Alden Johnson in the fifth and sixth divisions. The point score: Michigan, 16; Chicago, 11; Northwestern, 11; Minnesota, 8; Ohio State, 5; Wisconsin, 4; Iowa, 0. Summary:

Faunce Loses to Skeen in Pro Tourney

Johnny Faunce yesterday came to the end of a tennis trail that had one glorious detour—his upset of Champion Don Budge, Tuesday—in the national professional tennis tournament on the Chicago Town and Tennis club courts when he lost to his doubles partner, Dick Skeen of Hollywood, Cal., in a hard fought semi-final, 6-3, 8-6, 2-6, 6-3.

Fred Perry of Los Angeles, Cal., whipped Keith Gledhill, Faunce's fellow townsman from Los Angeles, 6-1, 6-8, 6-4, 7-5, and will meet Skeen for the title at 2:30 p. m. today. Gledhill also will participate in the finals when he teams with Les Stoefen of Palm Springs, Cal., against Perry and Budge for the doubles title.

Faunce Averts Rout.

Only in the third set could Faunce muster enough depth and pace to match the methodical Skeen in long baseline rallies. Skeen raced thru the first set at 6-3 and went to 5-1 in the second. It looked like a rout, but Faunce steadied and won five straight games to lead, 6-5.

Then Skeen went to work again and swept three games to win, 8-6. Faunce had one more burst of good tennis left. He outsteadied Skeen, 6-3, in the third set, but after the intermission Skeen easily won the fourth set, 6-3.

Perry Wears Gledhill Down.

Gledhill was Perry's equal as long as he could carry his fight to the net, but he worked too hard to win the second set at 8-6. Perry's hard hit forehand dominated the final two sets against a tiring Gledhill and paved the way for timely advances to the net.

Gledhill's brilliant volleying and topped forehands that are more effective in doubles indicated that he and Stoefen will be formidable opponents for Perry and Budge in the final which will follow immediately after the singles windup.

Rain fell during the final games of the Gledhill-Perry match and increased to a downpour during the evening. However, tournament officials said late last night that the courts had been covered with canvas and would be playable this afternoon.

CUBS RAINED OUT IN PITTSBURGH; ROOT, MOOTY FACE PHILLIES TODAY

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 31.—The rain which threatened the Cubs and Pirates thruout yesterday's double header standoff caught up with them today—and without causing much anguish to any one except the boys in the counting room.

As a result of the postponement both teams were able to leisurely catch a special train at 2 o'clock, the Cubs to alight at Philadelphia and the Pirates going on to Boston, via New York.

The Cubs will open a four game series with the Phillies in a double header tomorrow in which Charley Root will pitch the first game and Jake Mooty will go in the second. Each will be trying for his third victory.

They're Easy for Cubs.

Root beat Paul Derringer and the Reds, 3 to 2, in Wrigley field on May 25, confining the Reds' scoring to a homer by Ernie Lombardi with one on. In the night game in St. Louis May 27, Mooty pitched a seven hitter, but lost in the ninth. This, too, was a 3 to 2 affair.

The Cubs thus far haven't suffered the humiliation of a defeat at the hands of the tailend Phillies, altho the Phillies have beaten several teams which rate as high or much higher than the Cubs, notably the Cards and the Reds.

Bill Lee knocked two homers and held the Phils to two runs as his contribution to an 11 to 2 victory in Philadelphia on May 7 which lifted the Cubs out of the National league cellar. The next day Vern Olsen hit a homer with two on to supply the bulk of production in a 5 to 1 victory. In Chicago on May 21 the Phils made two runs off Paul Erickson in the second inning, after which Mooty went in, held the tailenders to three hits and the Cubs registered a 7 to 3 victory.

Then Come the Dodgers.

After their four games in Philadelphia the Cubs hope to be in fine fettle for two engagements in Brooklyn. They are more than eager to take that series just as emphatically as they did the recent 7 to 4, 14 to 1, 9 to 1 set over the Dodgers in Chicago.

Bill Nicholson's sore heel continued sore today but the big slugger hopes to be in shape for Brooklyn. Charley George, former Brooklyn rookie, who had some of the Dodgers upset more than a little with his bench jockeying in the Chicago series, has his right index finger in splints as the result of a foul tip in yesterday's game.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox had their pennant ideas on exhibition again yesterday and the display was impressive enough to move them half a game nearer to the pace setting Cleveland Indians, who now are only a game and a half out in front. The impressiveness consisted of a 4 to 3 triumph over the St. Louis Browns, who did the best they could about stirring up a fuss but were properly checked by Jack Hallett, the rookie giant, as the Sox made it four in a row. It was Hallett's second victory of the season. The Brownies were the victims in his other one, too.

The Sox didn't do much hitting, but they made up for light production with distance and getting their hits in bunches. A triple by Luke Appling proved worth a run. Dario Lodigiani, with a double, and Mike Tresh, with a single, helped to produce two in the second when Bob Harris developed a streak of wildness. And Joe Kuhel and Taft Wright combined efforts in the fifth when the decisive run was scored. Harris went away after this inning.

Hallett Has Some Trouble.

Hallett's job wasn't as simple as the score indicates. In the first three innings nine Brownies became base runners. But only two scored, due in a large measure to a spectacular catch by Taffy Wright. Then Hallett changed his tactics and turned out four hitless innings, marred only by Appling's second error and one by Bill Knickerbocker. In the last two innings he was frisked for a pair of hits, one leading to the final Brown tally. By going the distance, Hallett became No. 30 in the list of Sox's pitchers who have turned in complete performances in 41 games.

The first inning, when one Brown scored, easily could have been worse. With one out George McQuinn walked, Chet Laabs scratched a hit past Lodigiani and Roy Cullenbine doubled to left, driving home McQuinn. Hallett escaped by fanning John Lucadello and inducing Harlond Clift to fly to Kreevich. The Sox grabbed back the run in their half on a minimum of energy. Appling tripled into the right field corner and scored a moment later on Kuhel's grounder to McQuinn.

Harris Walks In Two.

Lodigiani's double, a looping contribution close to the left field line, opened the profitable second inning. Kreevich walked and Hoag delivered the customary sacrifice. A single by Tresh was slapped down by Clift, the stop making it advisable for Lodigiani to pull up at third. The full house proved such a burden to Harris that he walked Hallett, forcing in Lodigiani. After Knickerbocker had been dispatched, Appling also walked and Kreevich registered.

Hallett weathered a gale in the Brown's second because Wright, with two on, backed up against the wall to retire the side with a one handed grab of McQuinn's long drive. There was no way of saving Hallett, however, from one run in the third when four fellows reached base. Laabs singled for a starter and with one out Lucadello and Clift singled, Laabs scoring. Appling grasped John Berardino's pop up and Rick Ferrell was handed an intentional pass. This brought up Harris, who tapped out.

Break for Browns.

The Sox burned up three hits to restore Hallett to a two run lead in the fifth. Kuhel launched this offensive with a single to right. Wright did the same and Kuhel legged it for third. He sneaked home while Wright was being forced by Lodigiani. Kreevich came thru with a single to center. Hoag forced Kreevich and when Lucadello's attempt for a double play momentarily escaped McQuinn at first, Lodigiani broke for the plate, but he was killed off.

CARDS LOSE TO REDS, 5-2; LEAD CUT TO ONE GAME

Dodgers Gain; Beat Giants for 8th Straight.

Cincinnati, O., May 31 (AP).—The Reds cut St. Louis' first place lead in the National league to one game today by winning, 5 to 2, while second place Brooklyn beat the Giants by the same score.

The Reds handed Lon Warneke his first defeat after five victories. It was Johnny Vander Meer's fourth triumph.

Extra base blows figured in all the Reds' scoring: Frank McCormick's double, Chuck Aleno's single, and Ernie Lombardi's two-bagger for two in the second; Eddie Joost's double, a sacrifice, and an outfield fly for one in the fifth, and McCormick's single, Aleno's triple, and Ernie Koy's double for two more in the eighth. Rigney, Smith Face Senators for Sox Today

John Rigney and Eddie [Lefty] Smith will handle the White Sox pitching today in the double-header in Comiskey park against the Washington Senators, who will start Ken Chase and Sid Hudson.

Outfielder Ben Chapman, signed by the Sox after he had been given his release by the Washington club, reported to Manager Jim Dykes yesterday and uniform No. 45 was parceled out to him.

Julius Solters, who dislocated his left shoulder when he slipped rounding first base in Friday's second game with Cleveland, will have to operate with one hand for the next couple of weeks. By that time the doctors may be ready to remove the yards of adhesive tape now holding the injured arm against his body.

After singling in the sixth, Jack Hallett barged into Johnny Lucadello while the latter was fielding Bill Knickerbocker's grounder and was ruled out for interference. The collision dazed the Browns' infielder, so he withdrew in favor of Don Heffner.

MORRIS, ESSEX BEST IN SHOW TO NORNAY SADDLER

Madison, N. J., May 31 (AP).—Ch. Nornay Saddler, little fox terrier owned by James M. Austin of Old Westbury, N. Y., stepped out of retirement long enough today to add to his honors one that had previously eluded him—best-in-show at the Morris and Essex Kennel club fixture—the world's largest dog show.

An estimated 10,000 were on hand to see the exceptional terrier receive the premier honor from Enno Meyer of Milford, O.

Nornay Saddler was retired last year after gaining 55 best-in-show awards thruout the country. The best he was able to accomplish in the Morris and Essex, however, was simply a finalist position. Last year he lost to the poodle, Ch. Blakeen Jung Frau, owned by Mrs. Sherman S. Hoyt of Katonah, N. Y., and the year before Ch. My Own Brucie, cocker spaniel owned by Herman Mellenthin of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., bested him.

Nornay Saddler's closest competition in today's show, which attracted more than 3,883 entries and a gallery that reached close to 50,000 at one time, came from a liver and white pointer, Champion Captain Bob, owned by a dog food company of Syracuse. Captain Bob was the gallery favorite, but did not measure up to Nornay Saddler in all-around conformation.

Ch. Buccaneer of Idle Hours, a bloodhound owned by Pearl and Edd Armstrong of Long Beach, Cal., was judged best American bred dog in the show.

IOWA'S 10 HIT ATTACK DEFEATS WISCONSIN, 6 TO 1

Iowa City, Ia., May 31 (AP).—Iowa's Hawkeyes blasted out 10 hits for a 6 to 1 victory over Wisconsin today to sweep the two game Big Ten series. The Hawkeyes hit safely in every inning, but the Badgers never threatened after the first, when they touched Bob Stastny for a pair of singles and their only run.

John Saxor was the victim of the Hawkeye, led by Outfielder Warren Smith, who hit a triple and a single, scored twice, and drove in two runs in three times at bat. Score:

Wisconsin .... 100 000 000—1 8 2
Iowa .... 101 013 00*—6 10 1

Batteries—J. Saxor, Robertshaw and W... Saxor; Stastny, Gerdinier and Welp.

LENGTHEN PRICE ON REDS; ODDS ON WHITE SOX DROP

New York, May 31 [Special].—When the season opened last month, Jack Doyle, baseball price maker, held the Cincinnati Reds at 6-5 favorites to repeat in the National league and thought the Chicago White Sox were worth no more than 12-1 to win in the American league.

Now things have changed. The Reds have been dropped to 6-1, with the St. Louis Cardinals favored to win at 6-5, and the Brooklyn Dodgers second choice at even money. Odds on the White Sox have dropped to 6-1, with Cleveland still the favorite at 6-5, and the Yankees second at 9-5, the White Sox being third. The Champion Tigers are rated fifth at 15-1, behind the Red Sox, 8-1.

ARTHUR PASSARELLA is one of the American league's two freshmen. . . . A Christmas present to his parents in 1909 in Rochester, N. Y., who 10 years later heard California calling. . . . Did his best to become a ball player but failed to click. . . . Pitched semipro ball around Los Angeles and in 1931 the Pacific Coast league club of his adopted city treated him to a trial. . . . By that time he had turned to outfielding. . . . Subsequent trial with the Decatur, Ill., team was similarly futile. . . . Took to umpiring semipro and amateur games. . . . Had to wait until 1937 to get his first bid from organized baseball. . . . Was taken on by the Evangeline league, but remained in it only 10 days before being moved into the better known Cotton States circuit. . . . By the finish of that season he had established himself so solidly that he was hired by President Alvin Gardner of the Texas league. . . . Spent three seasons in that circuit getting his final prepping for big league duty. . . . KLEMMER TIES 440 YD. RECORD IN COAST MEET

Berkeley, Cal., May 31 (AP).—Grover Klemmer, University of California, equaled the world 440 yard record today in the Pacific Coast conference track meet by winning the event in :46.4. The record was set in 1932 by Ben Eastman of Stanford.

University of Southern California won the meet for the sixth consecutive year, scoring 73 points. California took second with 48½ and Stanford and Washington State tied for third place with 24, followed by Idaho, 14; U. C. L. A., 12½; Washington, 9; Oregon, 8; Montana, 6, and Oregon State, 6.

MacMitchell Leads N. Y. U. to I. C. 4-A Title

I. C. 4-A Champions

NEW YORK, May 31 (AP).—Champions crowned today in the I. C. 4-A track meet follow:

*100-Yard dash—Norwood H. Ewell, Penn State.
*220-Yard dash—Norwood H. Ewell, Penn State.
440-Yard run—John Campbell, Fordham.
880-Yard run—Leslie MacMitchell, N. Y. U.
*One mile run—Leslie MacMitchell, N. Y. U.
Two mile run—Robert Nichols, Rhode Island State.
*High hurdles—Edward Dugger, Tufts.
Low hurdles—Harold Stickel, Pittsburgh.
*One mile relay—N. Y. U.
*Shot put—Alfred C. Blozis, Georgetown.
*Discus throw—Alfred C. Blozis, Georgetown.
Javelin throw—Don Vosberg, Marquette.
Hammer throw—Matthew J. Flaherty, New Hampshire.
Pole vault—Warren Broemel, Columbia.
High jump—Gilbert A. Peters, Colby.
*Broad jump—Norwood H. Ewell, Penn State.
Team—N. Y. U.
*Retained title.

New York, May 31 (AP).—Leslie MacMitchell gave a courageous performance today to lead New York university's track forces to an impressive victory over 40 other colleges in the 65th I. C. 4-A meet in Triborough stadium.

After giving the Violets 10 points with smashing victories in the mile and 880 yard runs, MacMitchell came back to run a vital second lap that enabled his team to capture the mile relay and clinch the title with 31 points.

Pittsburgh's well-balanced team took second honors with 21 19-28 points, despite the fact the Panthers won only one first place. Needing a victory in the relay to remain in the running, the Pitt entries put up a strong showing for two laps and then fell back to fifth place. Penn State took third with 20 3-7 points, with Rhode Island fourth at 18¾.

Ewell Matches Showing.

Great as was MacMitchell's individual showing, it was at least matched by that of Norwood Ewell, a fleet, springy little Negro running for Penn State. For the second straight year Ewell won the 100 and 220 yard dashes and the broad jump, smashing a long standing intercollegiate record of 20.8 seconds for the 220 when he turned the distance in 20.7 to beat his field by four yards. He tied the I. C. 4-A record of 9.6 seconds for the century.

Ewell's succession of victories kept Penn State in the running, but he didn't have the balanced strength back of him that made MacMitchell's feats decisive. Ewell became the first athlete ever to win three championships two years in succession, while MacMitchell's three long, winning runs gave N. Y. U. the first outdoor track title it ever has won.

Blozis Joins List of Stars.

Still another star crowded his way into the battle for individual honors, tho not in as spectacular fashion. Al Blozis of Georgetown won both the shotput and the discus for the second straight year and established a new meet record of 54 feet 3 inches for the shot. His own former mark of 53 feet 9½ inches was set in last year's meet.

Ed Dugger, Negro star of Tufts, failed to repeat his double victory of last year in the hurdles. He won over the high sticks, establishing a new I. C. 4-A. record of 14.1 seconds. The previous record was 14.3. But when it came to the 220 yard lows, Harold Stickel of Pittsburgh swept ahead at about the third jump and never let Dugger get close to him as he won in the fast time of 23.1.

Don Vosberg of Marquette won the javelin throw with a toss of 200 feet 7 inches which gave him a wide margin over Jim Elliott of Pittsburgh, who was second. Elliott's throw traveled 193 feet 1½ inches.

Rice Demonstrates Stride.

An added attraction in which Greg Rice displayed his famous stride for two miles against Ralph Swarzkopf, former Michigan captain, and Mel Trutt, formerly of Indiana, didn't produce much excitement or particularly fast running.

Rice won it in 9 minutes, 5 6-10 seconds, with Schwarzkopf second about 10 yards back. As for Trutt, he resigned after five laps. About 150 yards from the finish, with Rice jogging along in front, Schwarzkopf put on a mild sprint and started to go around. Rice, startled, finished like a sprinter as his rival dropped back dejectedly.

TRUCKS PITCHES NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME; LOSES, 1-0

Buffalo, N. Y., May 31 (AP).—Virgil Trucks, International league strikeout king, pitched no hit, no run ball for nine and two-thirds innings today, but was charged with the loss as the league leading Montreal Royals nipped the Buffalo Bisons, 1 to 0, in 10 innings.

The Royals seized on a wild throw by Third Baseman Bob Boken to break up the game. Alex Kampouris singled with two out in the 10th, and Paul Campbell followed with a slow roller to Boken, who threw wild to first, allowing Kampouris to race home with the winning run.

PREP CREWS TO DECIDE TITLES NEXT SUNDAY

Seek Berths in Central States Regatta.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

A week from today, Chicago's two entries in the first annual Central States Schoolboy Rowing association regatta will be determined. That is the afternoon the senior and junior crews, manned by sturdy youngsters from Lane Tech, Schurz, and Waller High schools will meet for the city championship on the Lincoln park lagoon.

Chicago schoolboys have been rowing for four seasons now, and the Lane lads show no signs of weakening their grip. In 1938 prep rowing became a part of the Lincoln Park Boat club's program, and the Lane crews asserted their superiority in both the senior and junior division.

Gain Two Legs on Trophies.

In 1939, when THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in coöperation with the Lincoln Park Boat club, and the Chicago park district, sponsored the first Chicago Interscholastic regatta, the Lane boys again were triumphant. And last year it was the same story. Both of the Lane crews won, and thereby gained two legs on THE TRIBUNE's trophies. There will be two more beautiful cups for Lane Tech to display if the youngsters do it again next Sunday, as a third victory means permanent possession of the awards.

So steady has been the growth of schoolboy rowing in Chicago and the central states, that the Chicago Interscholastic is only a semi-final event this year. The two championship Chicago crews will qualify for the Central States regatta to be held on the lagoon on June 15, which will be sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and its two affiliates. It is in this regatta that spectators, for the first time, will see university crews in action on a Chicago course.

Washington Sends Two Crews.

From the far west will come the varsity and junior varsity crews of the University of Washington. Their opponents will be the University of Wisconsin varsity and freshman eights. Each of the two races will be over a one mile course on the Lincoln park lagoon. Washington's two crews will defend their national championships on June 25 in the Poughkeepsie regatta on the Hudson river. Wisconsin also will compete at Poughkeepsie.

Charles R. Miner, president of the Central States Schoolboy Rowing association, and director of the June 15 regatta, will return from Camden, N. J. tomorrow, where the Lane varsity and Paul Murdock of Schurz High, singles sculler, competed in the national prep regatta yesterday. Murdock was third in a strong field over a three-quarter mile route.

Miner is lining up two of the east's outstanding prep crews to compete in the Central States regatta against the Chicago champion, Culver Military academy, and Ecorse, Mich., and Wyandotte, Mich. High schools. There possibly may be other schoolboy entries.

Arrange Cutter Events.

While the university and high school races will be the principal part of the program, a number of Sea Scout cutter and canoe events are being arranged to round out a two and a half hour show beginning at 2 p. m. The university races will take place in the middle of the program. There will be no admission charge and there are many vantage points from which to watch the action.

Dave Zimmerman, veteran of water events, will be at the public address system to keep the crowd informed and entertained from start to finish. John Covington of the Lincoln Park Boat club, who was called to service by the navy shortly after being named referee, will make a special trip from Detroit to act in that capacity.

In Midst of Busiest Season.

The six Chicago schoolboy crews, three senior and three junior, are in the midst of their busiest season. The boys from Waller and Schurz gained valuable experience Friday rowing against Wisconsin freshman crews. Yesterday, the Waller seniors met St. John's Military academy in Delafield, Wis. Next Saturday the Lane seniors will go to Aurora for a meeting with Marmion Military academy, and the Waller and Schurz seniors will row two Culver crews at Culver.

MURDOCK 3D AT CAMDEN

Camden, N. J., May 31 [Special].—Paul Murdock of Schurz High school, representing the Lincoln Park Boat club of Chicago, took third place in a driving finish today in the junior single sculls of the seventh annual national schoolboy regatta on the Cooper river course.

Murdock led in the early stages of the three quarter mile race, but John Ryan of Philadelphia won and Bob Leonard of Shrewsbury, Mass., was second. Less than a boat length separated the three youngsters at the finish.

The Lane Tech eight, also entered by the Chicago Boat club, finished sixth in the junior mile race. The Chicagoans were in No. 5 lane, and soon were pocketed behind several crews and could not extricate themselves. Shrewsbury won first place for the second straight year, and Northeast Catholic of Philadelphia was second.

Charles R. Miner of Chicago was one of the regatta judges.

BALABAN AND GOULD ENTER TENNIS FINALS

Henry Balaban and Sol Gould, teammates at the Fullerton club, will meet today in the finals of the annual Lawchester open tennis tournament at Sheridan road and Addison street. Balaban entered the final yesterday by defeating K. H. Dirks, 9-7, 8-6, and Gould eliminated Dr. Lars Lundgoot of Kelvyn Park, 6-4, 6-3.

Lane Juniors Out to Keep Title

The junior varsity oarsmen from Lane Tech High school, who will defend their city schoolboy title a week from today against the crews from Waller and Schurz, work out in Lincoln park. Winner on that day will represent Chicago in the Central States Schoolboy Rowing association regatta June 15, sponsored by The Chicago Tribune, on Lincoln park lagoon. Left to right: Ted Damz, bow; Lenny Nystrom, No. 2; Paul Zurr, No. 3; William Johnson, No. 4; Bob Sheridan, No. 5; Ted Faber, No. 6; Eugene Anderson, No. 7; Robert Meyers, stroke and captain, and Eddie Fendler, coxswain. Time, :25 1-5, :50 1-5, 1:16, 1:42 4-5, 1:57 2-5. Raining. Two dollar mutuels paid: Distillation, $9.80 straight, $4.80 place, $4.40 show; Pick Out, $6.60 place, $4.20 show; Copper Tube, $6.00 show. Winner trained by S. B. Ott. Went to post at 6:15. At post 1 minute. Start good from gate. Won easily, place driving.

DISTILLATION took command quickly, was rated along to the stretch turn, increased her advantage easily under light urging and was in hand the final eighth. PICK OUT, taken back early, started upon the inside on the last turn and continued on the inside thru the stretch, where she closed in resolute style. COPPER TUBE moved up on the inside in the stretch and went evenly the final eighth.

LEVEL BEST IS VICTORIOUS BY NECK IN OAKS

King Cole Is Beaten by Harvard Square.

New York, May 31 (AP).—Level Best, owned by Crispin Oglebay and generally regarded as Equipoise's best offspring when she won the 2 year old filly championship last year, scored her second triumph in five days with a driving victory in the 25th running of the Coaching Club of America Oaks at Belmont today. King Cole, public choice in the Roseben handicap, lost a stretch duel to Arnold Hanger's Harvard Square.

By her victory in the 1⅜ miles test for 3 year old fillies, Level Best earned $10,275. She ran the 11 furlongs in 2:17 3-5, making every pole a winning one, but, after leading at one point by five lengths, she had to go all out to take a neck decision from J. A. Bell Jr.'s fast closing Dark Discovery. Breckinridge Long's Nasca was third in the three horse field. Alfred Robertson rode Level Best. She paid $2.90.

King Cole Tires.

King Cole, from Ogden Phipps' barn and highly regarded since running second to Whirlaway in the Preakness, couldn't carry top weight of 119 pounds far enough in the 6 furlong Roseben. After hooking up with Joseph E. Widener's Roman in a speed duel for a quarter of a mile, he couldn't withstand Harvard Square's closing spurt, and was beaten by three quarters of a length. W. H. Laboyteaux's Springwood was third. These three, the only 3 year olds in the field of seven, were trailed home by such older campaigners as Parasang, Roman, Dr. Whinny and The Chief.

Harvard Square was clocked in 1:11 over a fast track and returned $7.50. The victory was worth $5,300.

THIRD COVEY WINS.

Boston, Mass., May 31 (AP).—Hal Price Headley's Third Covey won the $5,000 Paul Revere handicap today at Suffolk Downs before 28,000. Gustave Ring's Ringie, the 3 to 2 favorite, ran second by a half length. A length back in third place was J. Y. Christmas' Rough Pass.

MADIGAMA WINS.

Stanton, Del., May 31 (AP).—Brandywine stable's fleet 3 year old Madigama led thruout to win the fourth renewal of the $5,000 added Wilmington handicap at Delaware Park today.

Benefited by a long rest, Madigama was razor sharp for the six furlong Wilmington and never was in danger. E. K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson, which came fast thru the last sixteenth, was second, a length and a half back. Greentree stable's Cherry Jam was third. George D. Widener's Overdrawn, the favorite, stopped badly and finished eighth in the nine horse field.

WISE MOSS WINS.

Detroit, Mich., May 31 (AP).—Splashing thru fetlock-deep mud, Mrs. Ed McCuan's Wise Moss won the $4,000 Belle Isle handicap, the six furlong feature at Fair Grounds Park today.

The black daughter of Wise Counsellor never was seriously extended by eight other sprinters, winning by three lengths in 1:13; considered extremely good time for the condition of the track.

DELAWARE PARK RESULTS.

Truck Lobby Recalls Opinion on Restricting Weights, Sizes

BY HAL FOUST.

Springfield, Ill., May 29 [By mail].—Truck line operators are sponsoring a bill pending in the senate here to increase legal maximum weights and lengths of their vehicles. This lobbying recalls an opinion handed down by Judges Evan A. Evans, John P. Barnes, and William H. Holly in 1937 in the United States District court at Chicago holding, in a test case, that the state has a right to restrict weights and sizes of vehicles and that the present restrictions are reasonable and proper.

The truck lobby is using a currently popular argument for almost any advocacy. It is averred that larger and heavier vehicles are needed as an aid to highway transportation in the armament industry in national defense activities.

Would Raise Maximum Load.

The pending bill would raise from 16,000 pounds to 18,000 pounds the maximum load on any axle. The maximum length would be increased from 35 to 40 feet.

The three judges, sitting en banc, found from elaborate briefs prepared by the Illinois highway department that the weight and bulk of the large vehicles permitted under the present statute were responsible for many accidents and for much of the construction and maintenance cost of the roads. They held that larger and heavier vehicles would increase the accidents and would increase the road costs.

The joint opinion cited highway department figures to show that pavements were short lived.

Many Accidents Not Reportable.

In regard to accidents, the joint opinion cited statistics showing that trucks and buses were involved in 20.3 per cent of the fatal accidents, altho they accounted for only 12½ per cent of the registered vehicles and 14.7 per cent of the highway traffic.

"These figures . . ." read the opinion, "fail to disclose the accidents indirectly caused by trucks, occasioned by passenger cars passing trucks on hills or long lines of traffic or overturning on deep shoulder ruts made by trucks, which are not reportable accidents as far as trucks are concerned. There are many such accidents."

Cites State Department Data.

The opinion cited traffic figures and construction and maintenance data furnished by the state department for various typical routes in Illinois.

"In the case of the pavements carrying little truck travel," the judges wrote, "the pavements are enjoying comparatively normal lives with low maintenance cost. In the case of pavements bearing excessive truck travel, they are rapidly disintegrating. Whenever a particular piece of pavement begins to carry heavy truck travel, immediately the life of the pavement begins to go down and the cost of the maintenance begins to go up."

NEWS AND VIEWS

James F. Goodwin, Dodge-Plymouth dealer, last week was elected president of the Broadway New Car Dealers association. Curtis M. Betts, manager of the north side Cadillac branch, was elected secretary-treasurer. Goodwin succeeds Charles R. Hearn, Pontiac dealer, who held the post for three terms.

William J. O'Neil, president of the Dodge division of the Chrysler corporation, and other executives of the company recently held a celebration when the 5,000,000th Dodge came off the assembly line at the Detroit plant. Ed T. Perry, chief body inspector at the plant, recalled that the factory's original production line was started in the year the Lusitania was sunk, when the possibility of war was being discussed.

D. E. Ahrens, general sales manager, Cadillac division of General Motors, reports one of four of the 1941 Cadillac cars will be equipped with hydra-matic drive, which eliminates gear shifting by the driver. He adds that in his opinion if the device had been brought out earlier in the season that 50 per cent of the Cadillacs sold this year would have been equipped with the mechanism.

A booklet entitled "Modern Used Car Management" has just been brought out by the Buick division of the General Motors corporation. W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager, in a foreword comments: "The fact that there exists a huge potential market of used car buyers is fortunate for the automobile industry. It has permitted used cars to be traded in as partial payment on new car sales, contributing importantly to new car volume and resulting economies of manufacture. Only about 26 per cent of the 30,000,000 cars on our roads today are in the hands of the original owner."

Wheel Away to Vacation Land

Loaded with fishing equipment, including the boat, this Chevrolet has made it easy for this couple to get to a lake many miles from their home in the city. The boat, lashed to the top of the car, is held securely with a new vacuum grip device actuated by vacuum power from the motor. A tube may be seen connecting the rack with motor vacuum.

FIRST CONCRETE PAVEMENT NEARS GOLDEN JUBILE

Bellefontaine, O., to Pla Marker June 13.

Bellefontaine, O., May 31 [Specia —The 50th anniversary of America first concrete pavement will be celebrated here on June 13. The golden jubilee will include the unveiling and dedication of an historic marker, the crowning of a "queen of concrete," and a pageant dramatizing advancements in a half century of road building and of highway transportation.

The venerable slab, still in service, is on all four sides of the Logan county courthouse square here. The surface has a cross hatch of grooves designed for the benefit of iron shod horses.

Here Started Better Roads Movement

"This is the first Portland cement concrete street built in the United States," reads the historical marker. "Here started the better roads movement which has given our citizens from coast to coast swift and sure transportation.

"Dedicated by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Bellefontaine, O."

Walter A. Jones of Pittsburgh, chairman of the Pennsylvania turnpike commission, who directed construction of America's first extended superhighway, 160 miles between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, is scheduled for the program honoring the granddaddy of cement highways.

Bartholomew Given Chief Credit.

By nearly all accounte the late George W. Bartholomew, from Bristol, Conn., is given chief credit for this first cement pavement. He discovered that marl pits of almost pure limestone near here, purchased them, and started the company that furnished the binding material for this old pavement.

The name of Portland cement was attached to the material because it resembled stone quarried at Portland, England, from which Joseph Aspdin, a century ago, invented the mixture of stone, sand, and water.

In building the pavement around the courthouse square the council required Bartholomew to post a $5,000 bond as guarantee that it would last five years. He lived almost long enough to see it serve traffic for 50 years.

VOICE OF TRAFFIC

"EXPECT THE UNEXPECTED."

Chicago, May 25.—Having visited the fracture ward of one of our larger hospitals and seen the broken bodies of victims of automobile accidents, I couldn't resist the impulse to write to your column and get some opinions off my chest.

In many thousands of miles of driving with a no-accident record behind me I have taken an especial interest in the various types of accidents with particular reference to their causes and how they might have been avoided. I have long held the belief that there is no such thing as an unavoidable accident and the more accidents I see the deeper are my convictions in that belief.

My own pet theory which I have followed ever since I first started to drive is that a driver who "expects the unexpected" cannot help but have a no-accident record. It works whether your fellow motorist cuts you off, stops short in front of your car, goes thru a stop sign, or commits any one of the innumerable sins which generally result in accidents. If another car cuts you off, you're ready for him; if he stops short in front of you, you're ready for him; if he sails thru a stop sign like a breeze thru the trees, you're ready for him—but you can only be ready if you "expect the unexpected." H. C. JENSEN.

HELP WANTED.

Chicago, May 26.—Gov. Green's state police, insofar as is noticeable, have done nothing to relieve Sunday congestion due to heavy trucks on highways used by Chicagoans for week-end outings. Wisconsin for years has kept heavy freighters from the main recreational routes. This week-end traffic from Chicago is entitled to special consideration from the state highway department because those city residents pay for country roads with the gasoline they burn in the city and they use the country roads seldom except on summer week-ends. WILLIAM T.

RELATIVE RISKS.

Chicago, May 27.—While there is so much hullabaloo about national defense, let's not forget our job of defending Illinois highways from the accidents that kill 2,000 annually. This risk of death on our obsolete and dangerous streets and highways to me is much more actual than that of being bombed by a foreigner. AMERICA FIRST.

ON PACIFIC COAST.

Spokane, Wash., May 21.—On a vacation tour here we found a four lane divided highway for the 20 miles from here to the Idaho line of the type that Illinois needs for U. S. 66 from St. Louis to Chicago. California also has modern pavements that Gov. Green could well copy. PONTIAC [ILL.] READER.

LITTLE DEFENDS NATIONAL OPEN TITLE THURSDAY

Chicago District Sends 23 to Fort Worth.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The 45th open championship of the United States Golf association, which is first cousin to baseball's world series and horse racing's Kentucky Derby, will take over the American sports spotlight this week, when it is held over the Colonial club's course in Fort Worth, Tex. Eighteen holes will be played Thursday, 18 more on Friday and the final 36 on Saturday. A field of 135 professionals and 37 amateurs will compete for the title regarded as the most valuable in golf.

Listing the program for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday may not embrace the ultimate story of this 1941 tournament, for extra innings have become the rule of the Open, rather than the exception. Certainly, this has been the case in the last two transactions of the big show. Two years ago, in Philadelphia, Byron Nelson and Craig Wood went two unscheduled days and an unexpected 36 holes before Nelson finally won the crown.

Play-off Motif Colors Tourney.

Last year, the play-off motif colored the tournament in Cleveland, for an extra Sunday eighteen were required by Lawson Little of San Francisco before he won the championship from Gene Sarazen, 70 strokes to 73, in a battle that never really was decided until Little sank a vital putt on the 14th green. Missing from the play-off was one Ed Oliver, the same portly gent who was disqualified for having beat the gun off the first tee of the final round, even tho he finished with the same regulation total as Little and Sarazen—287.

Mr. Oliver, or rather, Acting Corporal Oliver, will not be among those present in Fort Worth this week, due to official government business at Fort Dix, N. J., where he is a working draftee, but Little and Sarazen are expected to be around more than somewhat. Little, who added the Open title to the two British and two American amateurs that made him king of the world's simon pure swingers in 1934 and 1935, will be a hard man to beat, but he will be the first to admit that the Open is a hard one to keep.

First Open for Southwest.

The most interesting feature of this 1941 struggle is the fact that it will be the first time golf's main event has been decided on a southwestern battleground. It is meet that Texas should be the site, too, for the Lone Star state has been the incubator for more stars than any other state in the last 10 years. For example, there are two lads who once caddied together at the Glen Garden club in Fort Worth, long before the Colonial club project ever was devised by Marvin Leonard, the man who has brought Texas its first USGA tournament. That twosome consists of John Byron Nelson and Benjamin Hogan. Nelson, of course, has come a bit farther than his old friend, what with winning the Open in 1939 and the national professional title last year. But Hogan currently is rating more attention than any other man in the field, for last year he won the Vardon trophy for competitive excellence and led all cash takers in the money shows. What is more, Hogan is leading the 1941 races for each of these honors.

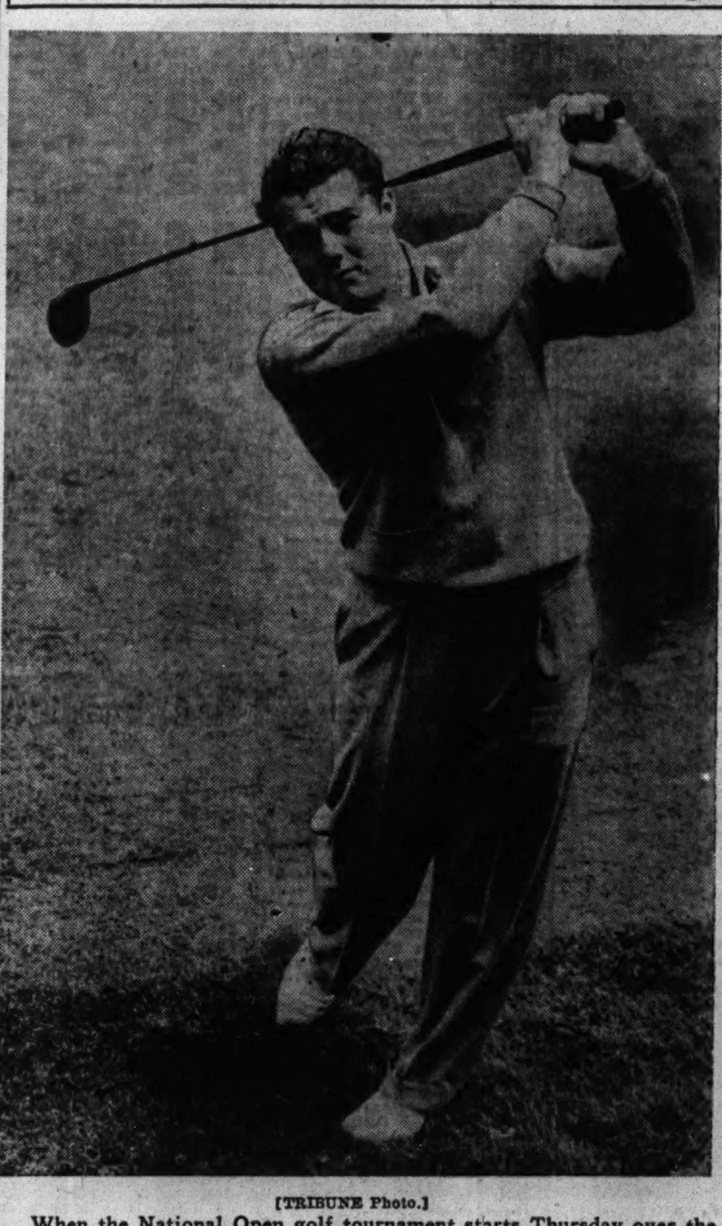
Little Faces a Fight to Keep Open Title

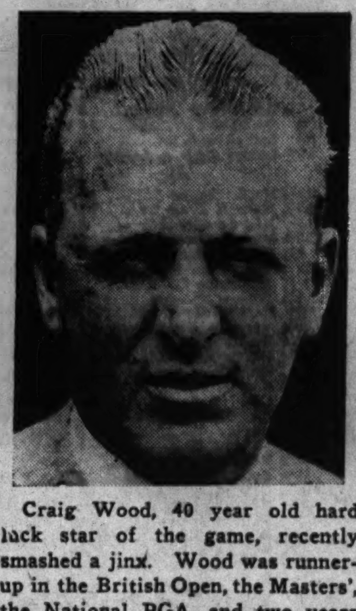


[TRIBUNE Photo.]

When the National Open golf tournament starts Thursday over the Colonial club course in Fort Worth, Tex., Lawson Little of San Francisco is cast as defending champion. Little, a double winner of the British and American amateur championships in 1934 and 1935 won the open in Cleveland last year, 70 to 73, after an 18 hole play-off against Gene Sarazen. They were tied after the regular 72 holes.

[Associated Press Photo.]

Johnny Bulla, who registers from Chicago, led the Chicago district's 12 qualifiers for the Open at Medinah last week with 147. Bulla was runner-up for the 1939 British Open and led the field in the National Open that year in Philadelphia thru the first 54 holes.



Craig Wood, 40 year old hard luck star of the game, recently smashed a jinx. Wood was runner-up in the British Open, the Masters', the National PGA, and two years ago lost a double play-off in the National Open to Byron Nelson. He won the Master's this year and is out to take the Open.

TONY MARTIN TO MEET M'BRIDE ON OUTDOOR CARD

Tony [Cianciola] Martin, Wisconsin middleweight champion, will make his first Chicago appearance in three years in an eight round bout against Frank McBride, 1940 Golden Gloves sectional 160 pound winner, in Marigold Gardens tomorrow. The match will top the first outdoor show of the season in the popular north side club. It will be the seventh consecutive year Irving Schoenwald has promoted open air programs there.

Dubs Faces Ackerman.

An eight round secondary feature brings together Harvey Dubs, Windsor, Ont., junior welterweight, and Jess Ackerman of Des Moines. There also will be an additional eight round match involving Buddy Rose, Sarasota, Fla., middleweight, and Speedy Schaefer, aggressive, hard fighting Chicagoan.

Mickey Grod, west side 138 pounder, will make his debut in this city as a professional in a four round event against Frank Pintero of Milwaukee.

Sign Aron and Secreet.

Three bouts of 10 rounds and two of eight yesterday were closed for the Marigold outdoor arena June 16. Milt Aron, Chicago welterweight, is paired with Sammy Secreet, promising Newcastle, Pa. prospect, in one of the 10 rounders. Other matches at this distance will bring together Quentin [Babe] Breese, Milwaukee lightweight, and Billy Marquart of Winnipeg, Man., and Johnny Colan, New York middleweight, and Solly Stark of Minneapolis. Eight round events match Billy Seward, Ingomar, Mont., 135 pounder, and Floyd Hagen of St. Paul, and Willie Joyce, Gary, also a lightweight, and Nick Castiglione of the west side.

Bronko Nagurski, one of the most competent wrestlers in the business, encounters Fritz von Schacht in the windup bout of a mat card tomorrow in White City. . . At the next meeting of the Illinois Athletic commission June 9 the board is to determine whether Willie Joyce's management contract with Izzy Kline has been violated, as claimed by the Gary lightweight. . . . Ancil Hoffman, manager of Buddy Baer, and Mike Jacobs, promoter of the recent heavyweight title fight between Baer and Joe Louis, will split the proceeds from the movies of the battle. The films cost Jacobs and Hoffman $4,500 to make.

CHICAGO DRIVERS, MILWAUKEEANS CLASH TONIGHT

Chicago drivers will oppose leading pilots from Milwaukee in a contest topping the card of midget auto races tonight at Riverview speedway, Addison street near Western avenue. Ted Duncan has been chosen captain of the Chicago group and Myron Fohr, Wisconsin champion, will head the Milwaukee team. The combined individual points scored by members of the teams in eight races will determine the winner.

Duncan's team will be composed of Ray Richards, Jimmy Caris, Bob Muhlke, Harry Lewis, and Pete Romcevich. Fohr's squad will include Johnny Kieweg, Pete Nielsen, Gus Klingbiel, Rod Backy, and George Schneeberg.

Time trials are set for 7:30 p. m. and the first race for 8:30.

Name Makes No Difference to Pickerel

BY BOB BECKER.

Some fishermen call old Esox lucius, the pickerel, a snake and many others refer to him as the northern pike. But no matter what you call this widely distributed and common species which has about 30 different aliases, including pickerel, northern pike, jackfish, and pike, it's one of the most popular game fish in the northern vacation states. Thousands of bait casters enjoy catching the long, slim northern pike or pickerel which is a close relative of the muskalunge, altho not nearly as fashionable as the latter.

Fishermen may argue about the game qualities of the small and large mouthed black bass, but let the subject of the northern pike or pickerel come up and the argument quickly goes into a hot debate because many rod and reel enthusiasts consider it either the worst game fish while others rate it one of the best. Without doubt the fact that old Esox is so abundant in many lake areas is one thing that works against this fish as far as its popularity is concerned.

Not Much Difference.

In the final analysis we doubt if there is a great deal of difference between the fighting qualities of a 15 pound northern pike or pickerel and a 15 pound muskalunge. Both are slender and lack the resisting surface of black bass. Both have to put up a fight by sheer muscular force. Both are slim, snakelike fish when they are small. And the fact that heavier tackle usually is put to work against the pickerel than is used for bass fishing doesn't help the case of old Esox.

We have caught big northerns or pickerel in big swift rivers like the Nipigon which were regular tackle busters. The fight these rough and tumble fish put up was all that many with a bait rod could ask for. With the current to help them they made things as interesting as any muskie could.

Pickerel Isn't Finicky.

Spoon and pork rind lures, plugs and other fish foolers will bring the northerns on the run. In fact, we've caught quite a few of them on a fly rod when we have been casting shorelines with an abundance of vegetation. On one trip in the Superior National forest we found silver and copper spoons and pork chunk lures very deadly.

We were after bass at the time, but the pickerel struck so freely that they just about ruined us before the evening was over. On a trip to the Lake of the Woods we hooked scores of them [and turned them back] when we were casting for small mouthed black bass. That's one thing about the pickerel. He isn't nearly as finicky about the business of swatting lures as his more respected relative, the muskie.

Handy Booklet on Sale.

Fisherman will get many suggestions on spoon and other flashy metal lures for northerns from THE TRIBUNE'S angling handbook entitled "Which Lures and Where." This profusely illustrated, 90 page guide on all kinds of fishing discusses and illustrates not only many kinds of handy spoon lures but also various types of plugs for muskie and bass fishing, flies for panfish, and wet and dry fly lures for bass fishing. "Which Lures and Where" also contains many tips for the beginner on where to use many different types of lures on lake and stream. The book is sold by the public service office of THE TRIBUNE, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago. The price is 30 cents by mail.

The only soccer match scheduled today is the sixth annual Mayor Kelly cup final, sponsored by the International league in Winnemac park stadium, Foster avenue and Leavitt street, in which the Swedish American All-Stars will meet the Jewish All-Stars.

Thure Gustafson.

In the semi-finals played last fall the Swedish-Americans beat the German All-Stars, 6 to 2, and the Jewish All-Stars defeated the All-Americans in an upset, 6 to 5.

The Jewish team has been strengthened by several refugees from Germany and is the strongest ever to represent the club. Kurt Kubic, goalie, Edward Klaber, at center, and Henry Kuhn, at inside left are three of the leading amateur Jewish players in the United States.

Picked by Vote of Fans.

The Swedish-Americans, who will be seeking their third victory in the series, were picked by the vote of fans. In their lineup, are such amateur stars as Freddie Swanson and Nels Brostrom from the Vikings; Orner Flodin and Stan Kellin from the Swedes and Enid Johnson and Thura Hallquist from the Linneas.

Thure Gustafson, president of the International league, yesterday canceled all other games. Proceeds will go to the medal fund of the league.

Workers Play Schwabens.

The Workers, who won the North section title, and the Schwabens, South Side champions, will meet in the junior finals for the Jackson trophy in an opening game at 12:30 o'clock. Lineups:

MRS. MANN WINS OVER MISS WALL, 1 UP IN 36 HOLES

Houston, Tex., May 31 (AP).—Ten years of striving for the women's trans-Mississippi golf championship finally was rewarded for Mrs. Russell Mann of Omaha today when she defeated her good friend and roommate, 22 year old Mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich., one up in 36 holes.

Putting told the story. Miss Wall dolefully watched a 12 inch effort roll by the 35th hole of River Oaks to leave her one down.

A bold brassie shot put her on the 36th green in 2. Mrs. Mann was to the right of the carpet in 2, shot over a trap, and calmly drove in a 15 foot putt for a half and the match.

Miss Wall never had played in a 36 hole tilt before and was weary from the tension and soaring heat of the afternoon round.

THE LOCKER ROOM

Round-of-the-Week
Johnny Bulla's 147 to lead U. S. Open qualifiers at Medinah Country club.

Shot-of-the-Week
Abe Espinosa's No. 2 iron into wind for a deuce on 387 yard 8th hole in Open test at Medinah.

S-S-S-H-H-H! The Locker Room is about to tee off on its second round. . . . Those first 18 Sundays last year were quite heartening for a beginner, thanks to the cooperation of presidents, managers, sports and pastimes chairmen, and professionals thruout the Chicago area. . . . With that same willingness to contribute interesting items, we hope to make this 1941 Locker Room as successful as the inaugural session last year. . . . It's easy to become a member of the Locker Room. . . . There are no restrictions. . . . It doesn't matter whether you are a member of the best private clubs in the district, or just a boy or gal who takes his golf where he or she finds it. . . . Yes, we said, boy or gal . . . The Locker Room is co-educational. . . . All you have to do to join is to forward any ideas you have on your own golf or that of your friends to this department by Friday night, if you will. . . . Sure, we all know about those low gross and low net blind bogey and flag tournaments at every club in the district, but the Locker Room gives you double fairway length to hit interesting shots about you and your neighbors' games. . . . So here we go, until Sunday, Sept. 7. . . . FORE!

And Don't Forget There Are Aces in Golf, too, Joe!

Pot Platlak, seven time national handball champion from the Lake Shore club, has taken up golf. The powerful southpaw is a natural athlete, as indicated by his complete domination of one of the most strenuous sports in American athletic endeavor. . . . Julian Strud, Lake Shore golf pro who is giving Platak daily lessons in the Lake Shore nets, predicts that Joseph will be a fine golfer also. . . . Wally Newton, starting his third year as swimming professional at the Knollwood club, has just returned from the Bath club at Miami Beach, Fla., with a new idea. . . . It's the system of using wide, black rubber foot fins to instruct beginners and to increase the ability of those Knollwood mermen and mermaids who already know how to tee off from a pool's shores. . . . Dick Dickerson, the Jersey boy who did such a fine job of helping to run off the Western Junior tournament last summer at the elegant Mill Road Farm course, will play an encore on June 18 and 19, when the Big Ten golfers hold their annual tournament. . . . This is quite a show, as you folks who might be free those days should know. [Or do you remember the days when John Fischer and Chuck Kocsis of Michigan used to run it alone?]

Al Lesperance Opens 16th Season as Westmoreland Pro.

Westmoreland golfers will find several improvements in the course this season. . . . Professional Al Lesperance is beginning his 16th year there. . . . Entries for newspaper pairings in the 12th annual open tournament of the Women's Western Golf association, to be held at the Cincinnati Country club June 9-14, will close Thursday. . . . The fee is $5. . . . Entries and reservations should be sent to Mrs. S. B. Kent, 2628 Cleinview avenue, Cincinnati. . . . Joseph G. Davis and Ted Quinn, two of the citizens who go out on a limb in today's opening Inquiring Golfer of the Locker Room, are somewhat interester in the Illinois State Amateur tournament which the Chicago District Golf association will conduct at the Quincy Country club June 11, 12, 13, and 14. . . . Mr. Davis has coined a slogan for the tournament. . . . It's "On to Quincy with Quinn!" . . . Considering that Quincy was the scene of the first Illinois Amateur in 1931, Tournament Chairman Quinn should have quite an entourage heading down that way. . . . Among the veterans who will be trying to take away the title from Gus Moreland of Peoria are such former winners as Warren and George Dawson of Glen Oak, Don Armstrong of Aurora, and Larry Moeller of the home club. . . . And then there'll be Hank Bowbeer of Riverside and Wilf Wehrle of Tam o' Shanter. . . . Friday is the deadline for entries in this best of all state tourneys. . . . The fee is $5, and should be sent to the Chicago District Golf association, room 1806, La Salle hotel, Chicago. . . . It's open to any resident of Illinois. . . . And Quincy is famed for its golfing hospitality. . . . See Chink Weems, the town's former mayor, if you don't believe it.

Yes, sure, there are going to be a lot of junior tourneys around these parts this summer, and all good, too, but what about the old boys? . . . They are going to have their first big day on June 10, a week from Tuesday, when the Illinois Seniors' Golf association holds its 18th annual spring tourney at Bob o' Link . . . Michael J. O'Brien is president and Fred W. Hill secretary. . . . The tournament committee includes Ross H. Kidston, Constant C. Hopkins, and Elmer A. Eulass. . . . Watch out for those Bob o' Link traps, gents! . . . The Health and Accident Underwriters' conference will be held in our town this week, and the golfing members will assemble tomorrow at Medinah. . . . Jerry L'Estrange is chairman of the convention committee.

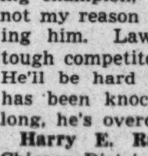
The Inquiring Golfer

THE QUESTION.

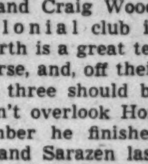
Who is your choice to win the 1941 National Open golf championship?

THE ANSWERS.

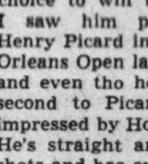
F. M. [Ted] Quinn, tournament chairman, Chicago District Golf association — I pick Lawson Little first, with Sam Snead as second choice. Yes, Little's the defending champion, but that's not my reason for selecting him. Lawson is a tough competitor in any tournament. He'll be hard to beat. And Snead has been knocking at the door so long, he's overdue.



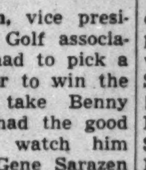
Harry E. Radix, past president, Chicago District Golf association—In my judgment, it's a toss up among three fellows—Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan, and Craig Wood. The Colonial club in Fort Worth is a great tee shot course, and, off their present form, these three should be dangerous. And don't overlook Horton Smith. Remember he finished just back of Little and Sarazen last year.



Matt Matteson, secretary, Illinois Professional Golfers' association — Benny Hogan is my top choice to win the Open. I saw him play with Henry Picard in the New Orleans Open last winter, and even tho he finished second to Picard I was impressed by Hogan's all around play. He's straight and long with his tee shots and has excellent control of his irons, going for the pin rather than the green.



Thomas G. McMahon, vice president, Chicago District Golf association—If I had to pick a single golfer to win the Open, I'd take Benny Hogan. I had the good fortune to watch him play with Gene Sarazen when they were winning the international four ball matches in Miami last March, and if he manipulates those tools at Fort Worth the way he did there, he will be a dangerous contender.



Joe G. Davis, secretary, the Chicago District Golf association—My choices would be Paul Runyan and Craig Wood. The latter, of course, has finished well the last two years, and the law of averages should begin to figure for him. I talked with Runyan this winter and like his theory of concentrating on condition and placing shots. If he's right at Fort Worth, watch out for him.

EVERY golfer's game in the United States, including those of the dub as well as the tournament golfer, eventually will be influenced by a series of researches currently being conducted by scientists of the Armour Research Foundation at the Illinois Institute of Technology, in conjunction with the United States Golf association. . . . Tomorrow morning, at 9:30 o'clock, the Armour gents will give a demonstration of the work they have been doing these last two years. . . . This includes tests to determine the carrying distance of golf balls, upon irons to determine their standards of loft, on golf ball covers to determine their thickness and cutting resistant qualities against iron play, and a number of other studies. . . . A live mallard duck was the main prize recently for low score during a tournament on the 140 yard water 12th at Hickory Hills. . . . Marvin [Bud] Ward, 1939 national amateur champion, who manages the Spokane Round Table, wires the Locker Room that he will defend the western amateur crown next month in Colorado Springs if—he doesn't find himself in the same league [United States army] as Porky Oliver and Tommy Tailer. . . . Bud will be one of the chief hosts when the National Public links tourney is decided over Spokane's Indian Canyon course July 14-19. . . . Edgewater, one of the town's oldest in-the-city-limits courses, is celebrating its 45th anniversary this season. . . . The Hy-Jinx, the club's invitational, will be held June 18.

Pa Schqeffer's New Service Fills a Long Felt Want.

Pa Schaeffer of Tom o' Shanter is conducting a unique service—telephonic and sympathetic — for golfers with things on their minds. . . . Mr. Schaeffer's rates include the following [if you care to ring him up at home]: Long drives, $0.25; long putts sunk, $0.75; four putt greens, $1.50; How I Made an Eagle, $3.00; How I Made a Hole in One, $7.50; How I Beat My Best Friend, $10.00; How I Beat My Worst Enemy, $1.50, and Blow by Blow story of 18 holes under 85, $2.00. . . . After spending a day recently with Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet, and Charley Yates at the Augusta National course, Tom Walsh, national P. G. A. president, decided that Jones is playing better golf than he has in six years. . . . Tom must be right, for only the other day Bobby shot a 29 for nine holes at Atlanta's Eastlake course, first time he ever has been in the 20s. . . . The White Sox celebrated their return from the east last Monday by playing Westgate Valley. . . . The party included Manager James Dykes, Mule Haas, Pete Appleton, Skeeter Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kuhel, Mr. and Mrs. Dario Lodigiani, and Mr. and Mrs. Buck Ross.

I. A. C. Bowling League Turns to Fairways Wednesday.

The Illinois Athletic Club Bowling league will shoot at different pins Wednesday when they hold their annual golf tournament at Tam o' Shanter. . . . William Vossell is league president. . . . Horton Smith, who has registered for tournament play from Oak Park Country club since he resigned from the club, has changed addresses. . . . Henceforth, Horton will register from Pinehurst, N. C. . . . He and Mrs. Smith will land at Pinehurst Nov. 1 to take up a permanent residence in the fall, winter and spring. . . . He will play in a limited number of tournaments and will be associated with Donald Ross, Pinehurst's great architect, in a promotional capacity. . . . Sunset Ridge is touching off a new departure Tuesday evening. . . . On every Tuesday night, between the hours of 5 and 8 o'clock, members and their guests may play a twilight round. . . . The only condition is that as long as the members and guests remain for dinner at the club there will be no greens fees charged.

BULLS AND BEARS AND BROKERS, TOO, ENJOY A HOLIDAY

It's Thumb Twiddling Time in Wall Street.

New York, May 31 (AP).—You could have put today's stock market in your right eye without bringing on even a slight case of astigmatism. Altho there was a semblance of dealings, Wall street was notably bare of customers as the majority extended yesterday's holiday over the week-end and permitted brokers to twiddle their thumbs in profitless ennui.

So far as prices were concerned, the list stepped out of the week and month with a moderately lower drift altho a few aircrafts and specialties managed to emerge with fractional gains.

Transfers for the two hours totaled 107,100 shares, the smallest since last Aug. 24, compared with 160,260 a week ago. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 39.6 and on the week was down .2.

Narrowest in Many Years.

It was one of the narrowest markets, in number of stocks traded, in 20 years or more. Of about 1,260 listed issues, only 345 changed hands. Of these, 127 were off, 93 up, and 125 unchanged.

Most analysts were of the opinion the market acted well in the face of bad news from Crete and growing imponderables at home. Items considered by speculative contingents included institution of sweeping governmental steel priorities and forecasts that rationing of copper, oil and gasoline was near.

In an apathetic curb where only about 20,000 shares turned over, against 22,000 last Saturday, Republic Aviation and Humble Oil eased while support was accorded preferred stocks of Puget Sound and Georgia Power.

The exchange reported that 9,661,230 shares of stock were traded in May, compared with 11,185,760 in April and 38,964,712 in May, 1940. Volume was the smallest since last February's 8,969,195 shares.

CHICAGO LIST UNEVEN.

Prices on the Chicago Stock exchange counterbalanced yesterday, with 11 issues advancing, 11 declining, and 11 remaining unchanged. Transfers totaled only 6,000 shares. Chicago corporation was the volume leader in turnover of 1,000 shares at ¾, unchanged.

Trading for the week amounted to 71,000 shares, compared with 100,000 in the preceding week and 100,000 a year ago. Volume for May totaled 391,000 shares, against 436,000 in April and 1,055,000 in May, 1940. Transfers for the first five months amounted to 2,222,000 shares, against 3,491,000 in the 1940 period.

THE PREMIUM ON MUNICIPALS.

The growing premium on the tax immunity enjoyed by municipal bonds has been the major source of their recent strength, according to market analysts. Prices have held at around the highest levels in history.

The tax exemption feature of the 21 billion dollars of outstanding municipal bonds is becoming more attractive to a widening circle of investors. Bonds issued by states, counties, cities, and other municipalities are exempt from federal income taxes under current laws and judicial interpretations.

The value of the tax exemption of the municipals has been enhanced in recent months by the federal treasury's declared policy to make all new government obligations fully taxable. The effect of this policy, implemented by the public debt act of 1941, is to place an ever increasing "scarcity value" on municipal bonds.

Besides the municipals, there are outstanding approximately 49 billion dollars of federal obligations, which are wholly or partially exempt from the federal income tax. About one-third of this total will be retired and replaced with fully taxable issues in the next five years under the treasury's program to eliminate tax exempts.

The available supply of federal tax exempts will thus diminish gradually, and will disappear entirely in twenty years if the treasury pursues its intention of eliminating them as fast as they mature or can be called.

The scarcity value of municipal bonds has been improved further by higher income tax rates and prospective increases this year, according to bond experts. Imposition of the proposed surtax on corporate incomes, it is said, would make municipals more attractive to banks, insurance companies, and other corporate and institutional investors, because partially exempt government bonds would be subject to the surtax.

The bond trade expects an expanded demand for municipals from individual investors with annual incomes of $20,000 or more, if congress enacts stiffly higher individual income taxes this summer. Some analysts assert that whereas the tax exempts previously were of little benefit to persons with yearly incomes of less than $40,000, higher tax rates will make them valuable to those in the $20,000 income bracket, or even lower.

Altho buying of municipals by individual investors has not gained materially, bond traders expect this demand to become more active, especially for medium grade bonds which yield a better return than the high grade issues taken by banks. The advantage of using tax exempts to reduce income tax liabilities will become more widespread after the expected increased income tax rates are enacted.

[Reports on individual issues of municipal bonds may be obtained by sending a stamped, addressed envelope with the name and description of the issues to the Investors' Guide.]

FUTURES PRICES OF COMMODITIES TURN DOWNWARD

Influenced by Federal Grip on Markets.

Commodities for future delivery took a generally downward path last week as federal authorities extended their grip on exchanges to halt excessive speculation in important staples. Traders operated cautiously, waiting the government's next move, and markets idled over the extended holiday.

Wool tops touched new 1941 high prices, but finished the week with net losses. Cottonseed oil, rubber, hides, Santos coffee, silk, and cocoa closed lower. Small gains were posted by copper, lead, tin, and domestic sugar. In the cash markets wool tops and silk dropped a cent a pound and rubber ¾ cent, but others showed little changes.

Set Minimum Margins.

Acceding to federal demands, the New York Commodity exchange imposed uniform minimum margin requirements on rubber, hides, silk, copper, lead, and tin. This followed recent similar action for Santos coffee, cottonseed oil, and black pepper. In addition, a ceiling of 15 cents a pound was fixed for the basic grade of hides.

Wool tops reached a peak of $1.29 8-10 a pound in the July delivery before closing, with a net decline of 0.7 cent at $1.27 7-10. Hides, unsettled by heavy speculative liquidation, ended 0.49 cent a pound lower at 14.51 cents for June futures.

The various commodity exchanges yesterday began their Saturday closing schedules for the summer.

INDUSTRIAL RISE BRINGS INDEX TO HISTORIC LEVEL

Plants Labor Under Heavy Arms Load.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

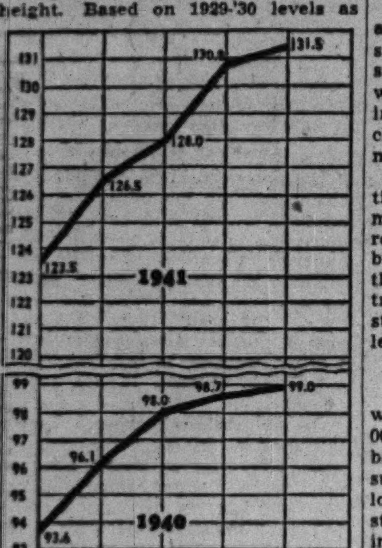
Two major manufacturing industries—automobile and steel—curtailed operations last week because of the Memorial day holiday, but the all around showing of business indices was better than in the preceding week.

Retail trade was reported livelier under the influence of warm weather, wholesale orders were in heavy volume in a sellers' market, railroad freight movement was the biggest in 11 years, and production of electricity established an all time weekly record as factories labored under the growing load of armament orders.

Bank loans to business in Chicago and New York City increased, cotton textile mills raised output, and the dollar volume of contracts awarded for engineering construction work expanded.

Index at New Peak.

The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity burst thru the ceiling to reach an unparalleled height. Based on 1929-'30 levels as



The course of industrial activity in recent weeks, as measured by the Associated Press seasonally adjusted composite index, which is based on 1929-'30 activity as 100.

*New 1941 high. †New 1941 low.

The railroad freight total for the week ended May 24, latest period for which figures were available, was 866,017 cars, 4,740 more than in the preceding week. The steel mill operating rate averaged 98.6 per cent of theoretical capacity nationally last week, compared with 99.9 per cent in the preceding week. The number of cars and trucks assembled dipped to 106,395, from 133,360, but the setback was not as severe as usual for a Memorial day week.

As America rounded out the first year of the armament program, business news was dominated by the swirl of efforts on the part of government authorities and business leaders to increase production.

Harness Small Plants.

Robert L. Mehornay, chief of the defense contract service, forecast the harnessing of small plant capacity on a scale never before attempted anywhere in the world. Beginning in July, he said, the government probably will release a flood of orders of less than $100,000 each.

A war goods production rate of more than 35 billion dollars a year will have to be achieved if the United States is to "be a match for Hitler," Donald M. Nelson, director of purchases for the Office of Production Management, warned. William S. Knudsen, director general of the OPM, called for more speed in factories, saying groundwork for the four war essentials—planes, tanks, ships, and guns—has been laid.

The OPM announced that in the last year commitments for new plant construction, expansion and equipment costing nearly 3 billion dollars have been made on about 1,700 projects for American rearming and aid to Britain.

More Steel Required.

President Roosevelt, reflecting the increasing concern over supplies of metals, said the nation will need more steel than it can make this year and next. The OPM later moved to give military requirements and essential civilian needs first call on steel supplies.

The Tennessee Valley authority, unable to meet armament demands for electric power, proposed to congress that 250 million dollars be spent to expand its facilities.

With the eastern states facing the possibility of gasoline rationing and industrial plants needing more gas as output rises, government sponsored efforts to speed up construction of pipe lines gained headway. Two lines thru the center of the industrial south, reached the contract stage.

Meantime reports were issued which revealed the extent to which strikes have impeded the armament program. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said 400 new strikes last month affected 500,000 workers and caused the loss of 7,800,000 man days of work. The war department reported that in plants handling army orders 2,023,316 man days were lost thru strikes from Jan. 1 to May 26.

London Studies New Economic Order in World

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 31.—The British government's conception of the postwar world order outlined by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden this week gave economists and financiers much food for thought. Altho Eden's description was studiously barren of detail, it is generally accepted that the government's goal is world control of manufacturing, production, and distribution, governed by Anglo-American raw material supplies.

The tremendous problems involved in such an economic system were ignored by Eden. Some commentators, however, see in an accelerated flow of commerce after the war and removal of obstacles to this country's foreign trade—gradually shrinking for several years—the only method whereby Britain would be able to settle its war debt to the United States.

Speculation is rife, also, as to whether the proposed system of international exchange, in which the trading of goods and services would be the central feature, means a further discard of the gold standard in favor of barter.

Strong Criticism Forecast.

Any system of this sort, it is admitted here, would arouse strong criticism, but the commentators are cautious, pending further clarification of the government's plans.

Caution already has been urged against Britain returning to the gold standard without completely understanding the price which America will exact for putting back into the international game the vast bulk of chips on which she has a practical monopoly.

Eden's speech came during a hectic week for London's financial community. Despite earlier improvement reflected in the increased volume of business, rather than higher prices, this week-end found a reactionary trend setting in with gilt-edged stocks leading the drift to lower levels.

500 Millions to Treasury.

The final result of the London war weapons week showed that 120,041,000 pounds [about $500,160,000] had been transferred to the treasury in subscriptions to various types of war loans. An analysis of the treasury statistics, however, indicates, according to the Financial News, that roughly two-thirds of the total was subscribed by banks, insurance companies, and other financial institutions.

Despite the fact that the total is more than 20 million pounds [about 80 million dollars] above the figure set by Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood as the target for the 62 municipalities in the Greater London area, it will barely pay for 11 days at war at the present rate of expenditure.

According to official figures, Britain during the present financial year is spending 77 million pounds [about 308 million dollars weekly on the fighting services.

CHICAGO BANKS' MAY CLEARINGS NEAR 2 BILLIONS

Chicago banks cleared checks totaling $1,933,400,000 in May, compared with $1,519,300,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday.

Volume for last week, affected by the Memorial Day holiday, declined to $337,400,000 from $383,200,000 in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1940 period clearings were $304,000,000. The association's report follows:

Experts Give Britain an Edge in Battle for Diamond Trade

New York, May 31 [Special].—The Anglo-German struggle for control of the world diamond industry, which is being waged as a sideline of the European war, is a battle which neither side can win completely, New York authorities in the trade believe. Restoration of a carefully balanced system of international coöperation with the return of peace is considered the only cure for the sick industry.

A recent department of commerce report concerned with the diamond battle said Germany has taken measures to prevent migration of skilled workers from Belgium and the Netherlands, where the world's diamond cutting industry was centered before the war.

This means Germany keeps a tight hold on most of the men who know how to cut and polish the stones—but they have few stones to cut. Britain, mainly thru her South African mines, controls about 95 per cent of the world's output.

Training Requires Years.

Trade experts give Britain the edge in the battle. They assert, however, that Britain and the United States cannot hope to develop enough skilled workers in the present emergency because their training requires years.

The "diamond capital" of Antwerp alone had 20,000 diamond workers before the war, out of a total of 40,000 to 50,000 in the Low Countries. Few left before the German invasion. Altho New York is considered the new world's diamond cutting center, it has fewer than 600 skilled craftsmen.

Development of a large British cutting industry is considered equally difficult, but authorities believe that American, British, and South African cutters will be able to meet comparatively modest current demands for larger gems.

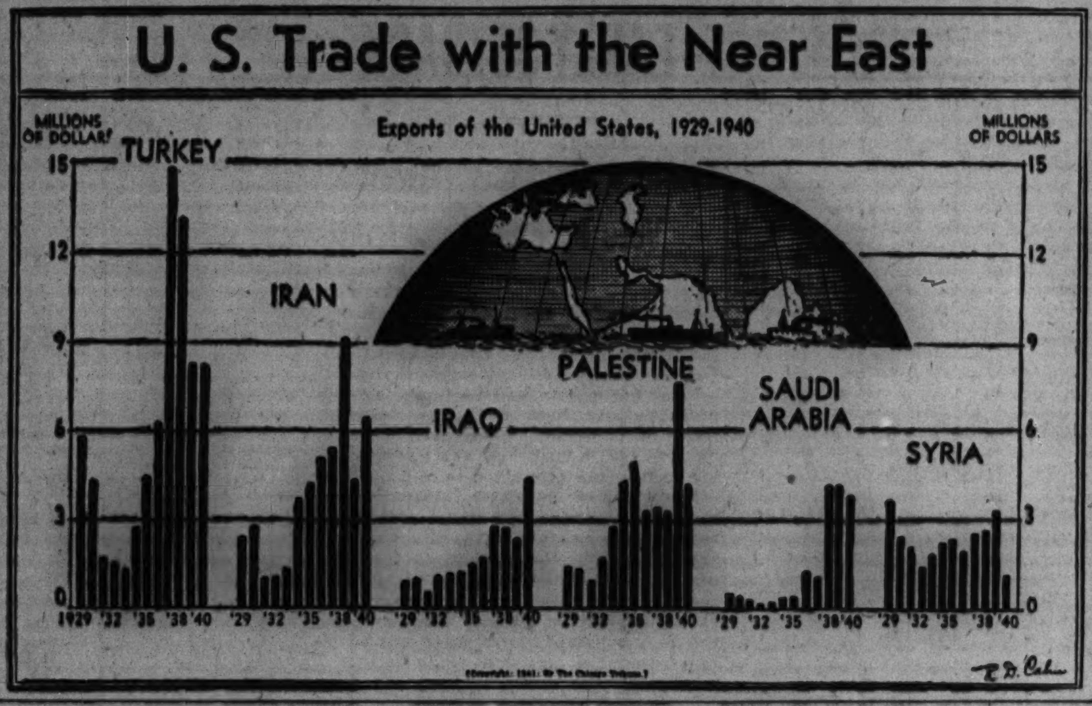
The real shortages so far are in small diamonds used for wedding rings, mountings, watches, and incidental jewelry purposes. The few skilled men available are not trained to cut these stones weighing 1-6th to 1-200th of a carat.

Needed in Arms Plants.

The shortage of cutters does not play any large part in supplies of industrial diamonds, essential for machine tools and production of airplanes and arms. Work required in preparing industrial diamonds is small compared with the other types.

Germany's supplies are not believed to be large. This is reported particularly true of industrial diamonds, tho their hardness permits a long, useful life. Belgium and Holland were officially reported to have transferred most of their supplies abroad before the German forces took over.

Thus, the stated German object of "destruction of the world monopoly hitherto held by British interests over unpolished diamonds and the development of an independent raw material basis for the [Belgian and Dutch] diamond cutting centers" appears to experts here to be as impossible of attainment as Anglo-American development of an adequate number of skilled cutters.



Charges Arms Making Lacks Real Leaders

Cleveland, O., May 31 (AP).—A recent executive in the Office of Production Management declared today that President Roosevelt "seems unable to delegate any major responsibility for defense planning and coördination."

"Every headline proclaims our profound confusion concerning the war and our future course of action," said Dr. William E. Wickenden, president of Cleveland's Case School of Applied Science and former chairman of the general production group of OPM's priorities division. He disclosed that he had resigned a month ago.

In an address to Case alumni he declared that there are nearly 130,000 persons in 18 civilian armament agencies, apart from the army and navy and regular departments of government, "which have no other coördinating head short of the President himself."

Supports Willkie for Post.

"As an aside, I should like to second the nomination that has been made of Wendell Willkie for that post," he remarked.

Asserting "the nation is not so much being led as being pushed into decision by force of circumstances," the educator observed. "We are still trying to grow a defense head on a New Deal body and tail."

"Scarcely a year after we began to plan in earnest for the defense of the home base and to put on paper an army, a navy, and an air force sufficient for that purpose, we announce ourselves as the arsenal of democracy for three or possibly five continents," he said. "Political Washington, it seems, is far better equipped to make ringing pronouncements to the world than to make a blueprint of this gigantic task, the dimensions of which it can scarcely guess.

Leaders in "Tough Spot."

"Our leaders are in a tough spot, with an unfinished social revolution on their hands, with the isolationist policies of two decades to reverse almost overnight, with government credit already burdened by an unprecedented debt, and with most of the key posts filled by men unfriendly to industry and committed to the principle that labor can do no wrong. It is not easy to convert this organization into one for out-producing the world. We are still trying to grow a defense head on a New Deal body and tail. The tail seems at times to be wagging the dog.

"The President seems unable to delegate any major responsibility for defense planning and coördination to others of proved administrative capacity, in whose political and economic views he has confidence.

"Engineers are not only alarmingly scarce, they are only slightly replaceable. Others can be trained quickly in particular skills, but some of the most acute bottlenecks are in the realm of efficient management."

COPPER PLACED UNDER PRIORITY CONTROL TO ASSURE ARMS NEEDS

Washington, D. C., May 31 (AP).—The Office of Production Management today placed copper under a system of mandatory, industry-wide control. E. R. Stettinius Jr., defense director of priorities, said the action was made necessary by "shortage of copper which is expected to become worse during 1941."

The plan was worked out by Stettinius and Leon Henderson, price administrator, and included a civilian allocation program for copper. Officials gave this explanation of how the plan was designed to work:

Priority, or preference, ratings will be issued for copper needed in arms industries. The remainder of the available supply will be allocated for civilian purposes by the priorities division in accordance with recommendations of Henderson's office.

Beginning June 1, refiners will be required to set aside an amount of copper equal to 20 per cent of April production which will be allocated specifically by the OPM to meet emergency needs, along with copper owned by the government's Metals Reserve company.

Officials estimated this year's supply of refined copper at 1,340,000 to 1,470,000 short tons, against military and normal civilian requirements of 1,810,000 tons.

Lumber Strike Heads Called to Washington

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Philip Murray, CIO president, and Clarence A. Dykstra, chairman of the defense mediation board, signed a telegram yesterday summoning leaders of striking Pacific coast CIO lumber workers to Washington next Tuesday after board officials said they had "received no evidence" that their appeal for settlement of the strike had been presented to the membership. This strike is the first in which the mediation board has cited President Roosevelt's proclamation of an unlimited national emergency.

Ralph T. Seward, executive secretary of the board, said that "there is no chance in the world that the board will back down. It is standing on its telegram of May 28. There will be no compromise." The telegram of May 28, signed by Dykstra, cited Mr. Roosevelt's proclamation.

Proposal Is Rejected.

After the union had rejected the proposed agreement, Dykstra wired O. M. Orton, president of the union, asking him whether he had called the appeal to the attention of the union membership as requested. Today Orton responded:

"Recommendations of the national defense mediation board as agreed in Washington by our committee have been submitted to a delegated conference of all local unions and from there submitted to the entire membership of locals with the right to vote and has been overwhelmingly rejected."

Morton declared the strike would end only if the union's original demands were met. He said a committee would go to Washington Tuesday.

Seek Wage Increase.

The strike involves some 12,000 members of the CIO International Woodworkers union who are employed in 52 Puget Sound lumber camps and mills. The union seeks a wage increase of 7½ cents an hour over the reported present rate of 67½ cents an hour for common labor and other concessions.

The board has recommended that work be resumed while a fact-finding commission makes a survey of labor conditions in the Pacific coast lumber industry.

Senators Fight Money Control by Roosevelt

Washington, D. C., May 31 (AP).—A bipartisan movement to scrap President Roosevelt's monetary powers developed in the senate banking committee today, and its leaders planned to call on Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board for testimony in their support.

The board and the presidents of the federal reserve banks recently recommended that the emergency powers be discontinued. These include authority to devalue the dollar, to purchase foreign silver, and to issue certificates against the seniorage "profit" on silver purchases.

A house approved bill continuing for two years the President's powers to devalue the dollar and to maintain the two billion dollar stabilization fund is pending before the banking committee.

Taft to Fight Bill.

Senator Robert A. Taft [R., O.], committee member, told reporters he not only would oppose continuance of the power to devalue the dollar, but would press for action on legislation to wipe out the other special monetary powers. He added that he would not object, however, to continuing the stabilization fund, but believed congress should write some restrictions regarding its use.

Senator Alva B. Adams [D., Colo.], another committee member, asserted in an interview that he was "very much opposed to leaving this devaluation authority hanging up in the air.

"That power makes the whole economic setup uncertain," he said.

It was reported by friends that Acting Chairman Carter Glass [D., Va.] of the committee was "not very enthusiastic" about continuing the devaluation and stabilization fund authority, which will expire June 30 unless renewed.

Board Opposes Control.

Members reported that Glass recently told the banking committee in a closed session that the federal reserve board had "not changed its mind" regarding its recommendation for discontinuance of the emergency powers. Taft and others were expected to question Eccles closely regarding the reasons for the original recommendation.

Administration supporters have argued that continuation of the powers is especially necessary in the present world crisis. Opponents have contended that their very existence tends to delay the arms program by creating uncertainty and making manufacturers reluctant to make future commitments.

FARM BALLOTS 2 TO 1 IN FAVOR OF WHEAT RULE

Growers of Nation Vote on Quotas.

Washington, May 31 (AP).—Early returns from a nation-wide farmer referendum today gave a favorable margin for an agriculture department proposal to establish rigid marketing quotas on this year's wheat crop.

Incomplete returns from 18 of the 37 states in which polls were established gave 39,069 votes for and 18,573 against quotas. This was a favorable margin of 68 per cent. Approval by two-thirds of the farmers voting was required.

Proposed to Meet Surplus.

The rigid marketing control measure was proposed as one means of dealing with a surplus wheat problem that threatens to overtax storage facilities and interfere with transportation of armament materials. Under quotas, the department could tell farmers how much they might sell.

The voting took place in wheat producing states under provisions of the 1938 AAA farm law in the first grower test of federal farm marketing control measures for a major crop produced principally outside the south.

AAA confidence in the outcome—a 75 per cent favorable vote was forecast—was pinned largely upon the fact that a government price supporting loan program for wheat could be continued only if quotas were approved. Legislation enacted recently authorizes a wheat loan rate of 85 per cent of parity—or about 97 cents a bushel—compared with last year's rate of 56 per cent or 72 cents a bushel.

Loan Prospects Boost Prices.

Largely because of prospects for such a loan rate, wheat has been selling close to a dollar a bushel at Chicago. Officials declared defeat of the quotas and the consequent discontinuance of the loan program would result in a sharp drop in prices.

If approved, quotas would limit farmers to the sale of wheat produced under 1941 AAA planting allotments, plus any wheat from previous crops.

Quotas would be coupled with another measure designed to reduce this country's wheat surplus. Next year's national planting allotment for the bread grain has been set at 55 million acres or 7 million less than this year's allotment. Officials said much of the acreage diverted from wheat could be used in producing dairy, poultry, and meat products needed for Great Britain.

THE VOTE IN ILLINOIS.

Returns from half of Illinois' 102 counties in the AAA referendum showed the state's wheat farmers voting more than four to one in favor of marketing quotas on this year's crop. Lee M. Gentry, chairman of the Illinois agricultural conservation committee, said returns from 51 northern and eastern counties showed 4,892 farmers in favor of quotas and 1,079 against. Approximately 35,000 Illinois farmers were eligible to vote. The balloting was conducted in 39 county agricultural conservation districts.

SET UP U. S. UNIT TO OPPOSE RISE IN FREIGHT COST

Washington, D. C., May 31 [Special].—Leon Henderson, administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, announced today creation of a transportation unit within his organization to appear before the Interstate Commerce commission and Maritime commission in opposition to "unjustified increases in transportation costs."

Dr. Lloyd Wilson, University of Pennsylvania economist, heads the new unit and will be assisted by John H. Eisenhart, attorney, and John Simpson, economist. Both Eisenhart and Simpson formerly were with the Interstate Commerce and Maritime commissions.

Census Expert Lists Shifts in Buying Habits

The American public is consuming more fruit and tomato juices, potato chips, peanut butter, cheese, sausage products, and rayon than 20 years ago, but is using less wheat flour, silk fabrics, gingham, and harness.

Dr. Vergil D. Reed.

These were among the changes important for marketing programs outlined in the Palmer House last night for advertising and industrial executives by Dr. Vergil D. Reed, assistant director of the federal bureau of census. He spoke at the convention of the National Council of Ellis Plan Associates organized to study industrial and merchandising problems.

"In the last 20 years," he said, "consumption of canned fruits, fruit juices, and tomato juice have skyrocketed threefold. Production of wheat flour has declined in the face of increasing population."

Soft Drinks More Popular.

Soft drinks, he said, have grown more popular notwithstanding repeal of prohibition.

"While all silk fabrics showed a decline from 47 million to 7 million pounds in 10 years, rayon fabrics increased from 13 million to 290 million pounds," Dr. Reed said. "Expansion of the hosiery industry has been one of the sensations of recent years."

Consumption of cigarets nearly doubled in 12 years, he said.

Nationally, farm population stood still while the population of cities expanded 8 per cent and villages increased by more than 14 per cent between 1930 and 1940," he said. "No wise marketing man will fail to see the importance of contrasting population movements, combined with the knowledge of changing retail outlets as shown by our census of business.

Gasoline Sales Soar.

"The importance that transportation has reached in the affairs of the average American family may be measuring from the fact that expenditures for automobiles and gasoline come within 4 per cent of the expenditures for food. The proportion of each $100 of retail sales which went to filling stations increased from $3.70 in 1929 to $6.70 in 1939."

Anthony Neher, Century Electric company, St. Louis, was elected general chairman of the national council, and George C. McNutt of R. G. Letourneau, Inc., Peoria, was named vice chairman.

HOME ALUMINUM MAY BE TAKEN UP TO AID REARMING

Pots, pans, automobile castings, and other odd bits of aluminum may be gathered from residents of Chicago in the next two or three weeks to augment the supply of that metal for armament purposes, Thomas S. McEwan, district manager of the defense contract service of the Office of Production Management, said yesterday.

He explained that the collection is under consideration, but that details have not been drawn up. He issued a call, however, for all civic organizations which wish to coöperate in gathering the aluminum scraps to signify their intent with his office, Federal Reserve bank building [Harrison 2320].

The OPM conducted "trial balloon" collections Memorial day in Madison, Wis., and Richmond, Va., to determine whether a nation-wide drive would be of value. The campaign in Chicago, McEwan indicated, would be on the volition of the local OPM office and not necessarily a part of a national effort.

Lumber Output, Shipments Dip, but New Orders Gain

Washington, D. C., May 31 (AP).—The National Lumber Manufacturers' association reported today that lumber production in the week ended May 24 totaled 250,500,000 feet, 3 per cent less than the preceding week and 3 per cent above a year ago. Shipments aggregated 246,938,000 feet, or 9 per cent less than the preceding week. Orders booked were 295,389,000 feet, or 1 per cent larger.

ICKES TO RULE GASOLINE UNDER ARMS PROGRAM

Curb on Public's Supply Indicated.

Washington, D. C., May 31 (AP).—The job of solving gasoline and oil problems arising from the armament program was given to Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes today. The justice department immediately placed in his hands a potent weapon—the veto power over negotiations in anti-trust suits against 22 major oil companies.

Attorney General Jackson said in a statement that the suits would not be permitted to impede regulation of the oil industry by Ickes, and mentioned that negotiations were underway to reach an agreement with the oil companies on the anti-trust actions. Then he added:

"To avoid any conflict with the administrative program which may be established by the secretary of the interior further negotiations in the pending proceedings will be submitted to him, to the end that national defense objectives of the new oil control shall be in no way impeded."

Confers with Oil Men.

Altho Ickes' appointment to "petroleum coördinator for national defense," was announced only today in Hyde Park, N. Y., by President Roosevelt, it was learned that the secretary already had conferred with representatives of the oil industry. Aids said he was arranging for conferences soon in Washington of all federal agencies dealing with oil—industry representatives, rail and water carriers, and officials of oil producing states.

It was not clear how extensive Ickes' powers were. President Roosevelt directed him to make "specific recommendations" for "action which is necessary or desirable" and cited these as problems for immediate action:

1. Development, production, and utilization of reserves of crude oils and natural gas that are of "strategic importance both in quality and location."

Seeks Better Transportation.

2. Elimination or reduction of cross hauling of oil products, expansion of transportation facilities, and more efficient use of existing transportation and storage facilities.

3. Balancing of refining operations to obtain maximum yields of specific products, most economical use of raw materials, and efficient production and distribution.

4. Elimination of the drilling of unnecessary wells in proven fields and of "other unnecessary activities and equipment."

Ickes' recommendations are to be submitted to federal agencies—particularly the Office of Production Management and the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, to state officials, and to "any appropriate industry or part thereof."

Predicts Curb on Public.

The appointment gave extra, if belated, weight to Ickes' press conference prediction Thursday that civilians may have to give up Sunday drives and return to "gasolineless Sundays" of the world war days. He said transportation difficulties were impeding deliveries of oil to the east.

Whether his words foreshadowed a specific recommendation could not be determined.

INDUSTRY DISAPPOINTED

Tulsa, Okla., May 31 (AP).—News of the appointment of Secretary Ickes as petroleum coördinator was received with widespread expressions of disappointment today in Tulsa. Oil leaders expressed belief that the appointment means the establishment of a virtual federal dictatorship over the 10 billion dollar oil industry.

"Ickes now is captain of our souls and master of our destiny," said one oil man. I am speechless."

OUTPUT OF MEAT RISES, REVERSING U.S. FORECASTERS

Sets Peak Spring Level for Last Seven Years.

Production of meat since the start of the spring season has been the largest for the period in seven years, Chicago packing interests noted yesterday in recalling the concern expressed by department of agriculture officials early this year over meat supplies. The department's bulletin at that time expressed particular concern over the "dangerously" low level to which hog breeding on farms was said to have dropped as a result of last year's unsatisfactory prices.

In sharp contrast to that government forecast, packers under federal inspection at the 27 points that handle most of the nation's meat butchered 625,966 cattle during the last four weeks, an increase of 18 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Slaughter of calves reached 331,558, up 2 per cent; hogs, 2,810,589, an increase of 8 per cent, and sheep and lambs, 1,199,650, or 11 per cent more than in the 1940 period.

Drastic Miscalculation.

Some market experts assert the department made the worst miscalculation in its history in reporting pig crops when it placed the 1940 spring crop 4,818,000 under the 1939 crop.

Most of the time since the 1940 spring pigs started to market, the volume of slaughter has been heavier than a year earlier. Some private crop experts calculate the department's figure was several million head too low. Since 1940 spring pigs began arriving on the market last August, to the end of April, packers under federal inspection butchered 38,132,082 head, against 36,119,479 in the parallel months a year earlier.

The increase of 5.5 per cent was made in the face of the department's forecast that farmers raised 9 per cent fewer pigs during the spring of 1940.

Average Reaches $9.35.

Packers paid an average of $9.35 a hundred pounds for last week's hog supply, a peak since March, 1938, and the highest May price in four years. This average showed a gain of $4 or 74 per cent, compared with the $5.35 price a year ago.

Consumer resistance to pork prices, and the tapering off of government buying checked the market's rise after a substantial gain early in the week. Since the average price of hogs on the Chicago market reached the $9 level, the goal toward which the government had been working, federal buying has been almost negligible.

The week's steer average remained unchanged at $10, equaling the lowest since last August. The lamb average dropped 25 cents to $9.50.

BOARD OF TRADE GRAIN FUTURES

GRAIN FUTURES RECOVER AFTER EARLY SETBACK

Traders Cautious; Await Vote by Farmers.

Grain traders operated cautiously yesterday, awaiting the outcome of the wheat farmer vote on marketing quotas. Prices declined early in the session but a late rally brought all grain futures back near the final levels of Thursday. Wheat advanced ½ to ¾ cent a bushel on short covering and buying attributed to mills.

Many holders of wheat futures indicated a willingness to accept profits rather than risk the possibility of a sharp break in the market, as forecast by government officials, should the quotas be defeated. The advance of the harvest in the southwest and the accuteness of the storage situation accounted for part of the early weakness.

Provide Canadian Storage.

Altho some of the grain is being moved out of the producing sections for storage in eastern terminal elevators, the department of agriculture has agreed to leave sufficient space for storage of Canadian wheat moving thru United States ports to Great Britain.

Traders disclosed that at Philadelphia, only 25 per cent will be available for storage of United States grains. The other 75 per cent will be reserved for Canadian grain. Trade reports said similar rulings probably would be made for other Atlantic coast ports.

Fixing of Prices Asked.

The request of the American Farm Bureau Federation that legislation be passed to fix the prices at which the Commodity Credit corporation could buy or sell grains, attracted much interest on the part of traders.

Announcement that the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation bought 4,260,000 pounds of lard and 1,400,632 pounds of pork in its latest efforts to provision England, added strength to lard futures.

Nine Million Cans of Field Ration Ordered for Army

The Chicago quartermaster depot yesterday placed orders with several companies for a total of nine million cans of type C field ration for the army, Col. Henry B. Barry, commanding officer of the depot, announced. Type C ration is for emergency use in the field when soldiers are separated from the field kitchen.

ELEVATOR GRAIN CONGESTION CUT BY LAKE TRAFFIC

Indicates Big Supplies Went to Britain.

Cleveland, O., May 37 [Special].—Grain shipments to lower lake ports will begin to taper off about the middle of next month, vessel men reported today, but the brisk movement since the opening of the season has relieved congestion in upper lake elevators and provided space for the new crop.

It is estimated that an average of 1,500,000 bushels a day was shipped from Fort Williams and Port Arthur elevators this year. Wheat shipments of 70 million bushels, a near record, have been brought down by American and Canadian freighters for export, particularly to Great Britain.

The heavy movement and reports that seaboard terminals now have ample storage space indicates that British ships have been taking large supplies in the last four months.

Hold 65 Million Bushels.

Altho shipments have been far above normal, elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur still are holding approximately 65 million bushels of grain, and supplies that were held at points in the interior now are moving to the lake ports. The Canadian elevators have storage space for 92 million bushels of grain, but railroads had .o declare an embargo on shipments last fall when the elevators became congested.

A building program under way is expected to prevent a repetition of last season's congestion. Temporary frame storage bins are being constructed at a cost of $5,000,000 to add 50 million bushels of elevator capacity at the Canadian head of the lakes.

American Grain Moved.

The American grain movement also has speeded up, but most of it is government owned and sent to lower lake ports to provide space in Duluth-Superior elevators. Because of a scarcity of tonnage, some package freight boats and barges are operating in the grain trade. The shortage of capacity also has resulted in a slight increase in the freight rate, which has climbed to 5¼ cents a bushel.

Ore shipments this month have established a new all time record for May, according to vessel men, and may be the largest shipped in any one month in the history of the Great Lakes. The present monthly record of 10,811,000 tons was established in August, 1937.

BUSINESS GROUPS SEEK TO COUNTER EFFECTS OF WAR

Conventions and Markets Attract Thousands.

How the war affects business will be discussed this week at two conventions, a mid-season market, and a shoe fair which will attract thousands of vistors to Chicago.

Frank M. Mayfield.

Topics scheduled for discussion at the mid-year convention of the National Retail Dry Goods association opening in the Stevens hotel tomorrow include problems arising from the unlimited national emergency proclaimed by President Roosevelt, government priorities, advancing prices and price controls, merchandise shortages, the draft, and the shifting of personnel to industrial fields.

Speakers will include Walter D. Fuller of Philadelphia, president of the National Association of Manufacturers; Frank M. Mayfield of St. Louis, president of the dry goods association, and Senator Scott W. Lucas [D., Ill.].

First in 10 Years.

Chicago manufacturers and wholesalers will conduct the first June mid-season market in more than 10 years, starting tomorrow and continuing until June 14.

Sponsored by the domestic commerce committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, it has been planned to meet accelerated retail demands for fall merchandise and to fill other needs of buyers who are seeking to make fall commitments before more restrictions result from priority limitations.

Candy manufacturers and their technical staffs from all parts of the United States will meet at the 58th annual convention of the National Confectioners' association in the Palmer House tomorrow to Thursday.

Townsend to Speak.

Their speakers will include Clifford Townsend, former governor of Indiana, who is now with the Office of Production Management; Col. George M. Moffett, president of the Corn Products Refining company, and W. J. Cameron of the Ford Motor company.

Military styles, with chevrons, stars, and buckles, will be dominant in the new women's shoes to be shown at the Central States Shoe fair beginning today in the Morrison hotel.

AMERICAN CAR'S EARNINGS PLACED AT FIVE MILLIONS

A profit of about 5 million dollars was made in the fiscal year ended April 30 by American Car and Foundry company, which had a $10,777 net loss in the preceding year, stockholders were informed yesterday.

Charles J. Hardy, president, disclosed the company's improved results in a letter accompanying a proxy statement for the annual meeting to be held July 10. He said the earnings would equal $4.80 or more a common share after allowance for a full year's dividends on two classes of preferred stock. Dividends were resumed this year on the noncumulative preferred, but no payment has been made on the cumulative shares since June 4, 1937.

Hardy said the management intends to put the common and preferred stocks on a dividend paying basis when it can be done "safely," and indicated this would be soon.

NATION'S RADIO BROADCASTING SALES INCREASE

Operating Profits Up Despite Cost Rise.

Washington, D. C., May 31 [Special.]—The radio broadcast industry received $154,823,787 in 1940 from the sale of time, the Federal Communications commission announced today. This was a 19 per cent increase over 1939, and resulted in a gain in the operating profit of more than $9,000,000, or about 39 per cent. The figures were reported by three major networks, five regional networks, and 765 stations.

In addition to time sales the industry derived $13,181,948 from the sale of talent and other services during 1940, or $1,871,696 above the figure of the preceding year.

The gain in operating profit was made despite the fact that the industry's expenses increased $13,806,089, of which $994,573 was for 62 new stations.

Three Big Systems Gain.

Mutual, National, and Columbia Broadcasting systems had combined time sales of $71,919,428 for the year, an increase of about 15 per cent over 1939. They paid out $22,123,760 to stations and regional networks, against $18,023,195 in 1939.

The three networks recorded an operating profit of $13,705,043. This came from operation of their own stations as well as their networks and constituted 41 per cent of the broadcast income of the entire industry compared with 46 per cent in 1939.

Net income of the three systems, after taxes and other payments, amounted to $8,885,694, about $500,000 lower than in 1939. They paid $2,500,000 more in federal income taxes for 1940 than for 1939.

NBC Nets $37,137,823.

National Broadcasting thru its dual network, accounted for $37,137,823 of the total major network time sales and had a net profit of fi3,918,772, including operation of its own stations. Columbia Broadcasting's total was $'1,137,823, with a net profit of $5,006,634, including its own stations. Mutual Broadcasting system's share of the business was $3,600,161. It recorded a loss of $39,712.

The nonnetwork business of the industry—time sold to local and national advertisers by the 765 stations—was $81,897,236, bettering 1939 by $14,109,409.

Spend $900,000 in Modernizing Congress Hotel

FAMOUS ROOMS TO RETAIN THEIR FAMILIAR NAMES

Completion Expected by End of Year.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Details of what is said to be the largest hotel modernization program in Chicago history—the $900,000 job of rebuilding the Congress—were outlined for the first time yesterday by John J. Mack, president of Michigan-Congress corporation, which acquired the property on Jan 1. The rejuvenation project, in charge of Edward G. Novak, Chicago architect, was started during the middle of January and is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Edward G. Novak.

Altho the program calls for a sweeping structural rebuilding of the entire hotel from basement to roof, all of the famous old dining rooms, banquet halls, and cafés will retain their long familiar names.

Loses Fountain but Not Name.

The Pompeian room, one of the best known refreshment and entertainment centers of any hotel in the world, will be remodeled and will lose its famous fountain [into which many a celebrity and otherwise has taken an unintentional plunge] and also its row of statues—but not its name.

The Glass Hat [originally known as the Louis Fourteenth room, and then one of the city's most luxurious and decorative rooms, and later called the Eastman room] will be entirely rebuilt but not rechristened.

The Gold room, the Florentine room, and the Congress Casino all will continue under those long familiar names but decked out in completely new habiliments.

Brighten Peacock Alley.

Peacock Alley, for many years one of hoteldom's best known fashion promenades, but which in later years lost some of its glamor, will be brightened with the installation of glass window display cases on both sides, extending the full length.

According to Architect Novak, 500 of the hotel's 936 rooms are being completely modernized—new decorations, new bathrooms, and complete new furnishings and furniture. The others are being redecorated and equipped with the best furniture from the rebuilt suites.

Special Design Bedrooms.

A hotel novelty will be the building of a large number of specially planned bedrooms, with furniture and fittings to harmonize with the architectural design. There will be ranch style rooms, with furniture of worm eaten chestnut; pioneer rooms, with wagon wheels at the head of the beds and that motif worked into other articles of furniture; a nautical room, with a marine design; a Monterey room, in Spanish style; an eighteenth century room, in Regency design, and a tropical room, with reed furniture and suggestions of the tropics.

There will be 40 studio rooms, with concealed beds and no hint of the regulation hotel bedroom atmosphere. Modern design will be shown in five different style rooms.

New Kitchen—Larger Lobby.

Among the big individual changes will be a new kitchen in a new location to serve the entire hotel; an enlarged and modernized lobby, with all of the famous old ornate decorative marble, mosaic, and stone work replaced by lighter materials and colors.

The big hotel laundry in the basement will be rebuilt into an exhibition hall containing 8,000 square feet. The hotel will have its laundry work done outside, and will buy its electricity from Commonwealth Edison, using its big power plant for other purposes.

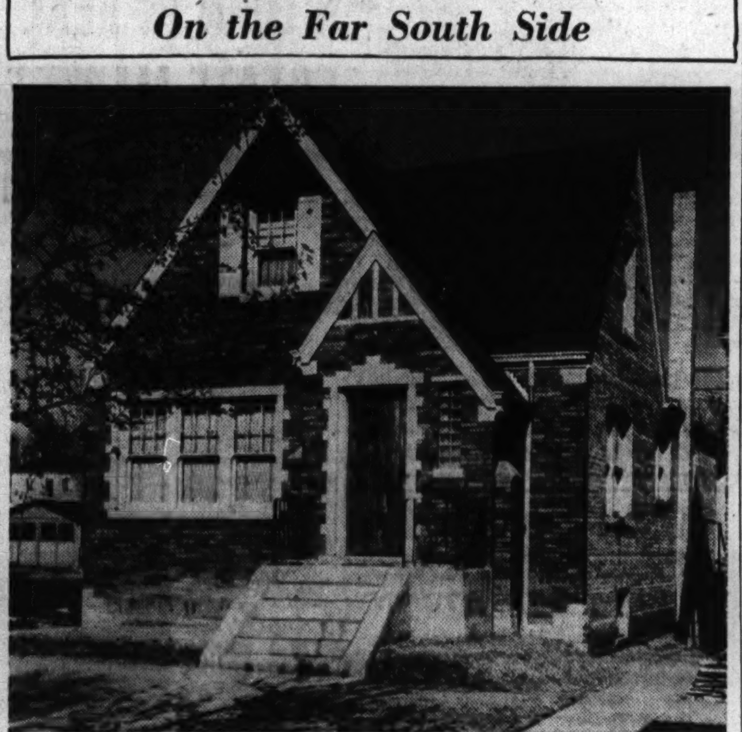
All of the public rooms will be air conditioned and all guest rooms will have fluorescent lighting.

The Michigan-Congress corporation, composed of Mack, Harry Prince, and Charles O. Wallace, leased the Congress hotel from the Reconstruction Finance corporation for 20 years with option to buy at $2,075,000. This group operates 14 hotels, among which are the Chicagoan, Croydon, Cass, and other smaller units in Chicago and the Wolverine in Detroit. It employs 2,300 persons, 600 of which are on the Congress pay roll.

Mack said that he was intrigued by the Congress hotel because nearly every one told him it was a hopeless situation and no one could bring it back. At one time in its younger years [the hotel is nearly half a century old] it earned $2,000,000 net in one year, he said. During some of the time it was operated by the federal government it lost at the rate of $25,000 monthly.

According to Mack, the hotel is now losing considerably less than that and he expects by the end of the year to have it out of the red.

On the Far South Side



Five room brick residence of Elmer H. Keller, recently completed at 10037 Prairie avenue by Elmer G. Olson & Co. It cost $6,500 and was financed by a $5,400 15-year FHA loan thru Republic Realty Mortgage corporation, with $42 monthly payments. The lot is 30 by 125 feet.

New Construction Used in Chicago

For the first time in the middle west precast slabs of architectural concrete are used for the entire exterior of a building now being built at the southwest corner of 79th street and South Park avenue. The above is a photograph of a model. (Story in adjoining column.)

Rebuild Noted Hostelry

Congress hotel is in the midst of a record breaking beauty treatment—to cost $900,000. The new owners expect it to be done by the end of the year.

Leases Cocktail Lounge Space on Randolph St.

Daniel Goldberg, manager of the Chicago office of Variety magazine, has leased space at 64 West Randolph street for use as a bar and cocktail lounge for a term of years at an annual rental of $9,600, according to Charles L. Schrager company, broker for all parties. The firm of Loewenberg & Loewenberg drew the plans for the $25,000 remodeling program.

Two Firms Lease Stores at Madison and Dearborn

The Stark Radio and Phonograph company leased a store in the building nearing completion at the northwest corner of Madison and Dearborn streets, for 10 years at a minimum guaranteed rental in excess of $70,000 for the term, according to Charles L. Schrager company, agent for the property. The Lelewer Hat company also leased a store in the same building for 12 years on a minimum guarantee and percentage basis.

TELEPHONE OUTLETS BELONG IN THE PLANS FOR YOUR NEW HOME

TO MAKE sure that telephone outlets are included in the plans for your home, provide for built-in telephone conduit to carry telephone wires through the walls. Merely a simple, inexpensive piece of pipe is all that's needed.

CONDUIT eliminates exposed wiring. It helps to preserve the beauty of walls and woodwork. And it enables you to have built-in telephone outlets, which are neat little plates that assure preferred telephone locations for present or future use.

LET your telephone company consult with you regarding the convenience and economy of built-in telephone conduit. In Chicago, call OFFicial 9300, Extension 3722. Outside Chicago, call the Business Office.

• Architects and builders are invited to call upon us for assistance in planning telephone conduit.

ILLINOIS BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

We wrote this letter to a Tenant Farmer

"Dear John:

You've asked me just how easy is it to own an Opportunity Farm by means of our special tenant purchase plan.

Well, you'd be surprised! For example if you can make a 20% down payment, 6% annually on the balance takes care of both principal and interest payments. As for the length of the contract, that can be arranged to suit you—up to twenty-five or twenty-six years if you like.

Of course, you may feel that 20% down is more than you can swing without selling off more of your livestock than you would like. In that case, smaller down payments can be arranged for fellows who are good reliable farmers, and I think you are that kind of chap.

Let me tell you more about them—because I feel certain you will be surprised at the deal you can actually work out.

Sincerely, Sam."

Why don't you come have a talk with us about owning your own farm? Write or call—

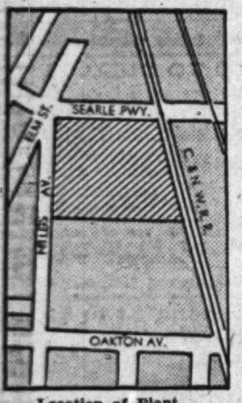
Work Will Start Tomorrow on Million Dollar Drug Manufacturing Plant in Skokie

HALF CENTURY OLD FIRM WILL TRIPLE ITS AREA

Searle & Company Will Move from Chicago.

What is described as one of the largest and most modern drug manufacturing plants in the United States, costing one million dollars, will be built in Skokie by G. D. Searle & Co. Work will be started tomorrow with the expectation of having it in operation by Dec. 1. Designed by Architect Herbert Banse, the big pharmaceutical establishment will be built by the George A. Fuller company.



Location of Plant.

It will stand on a five acre tract owned by the Searle company for several years, bounded on the north by Searle parkway [formerly School street], on the west by Niles avenue, on the east by the Chicago and North Western railroad, and on the south by a private street dedicated but not cut thru. The land not used for building purposes will be lanscaped with lawns, flowers, trees, and shrubs, and will contain a recreation field.

To Be Fully Air Conditioned.

The entire building, to contain 1,500,000 cubic feet, will be air conditioned. The exterior will be of white face brick, with Indiana limestone trim. All window frames will be of steel, with glass bricks used in some places instead of ordinary glazing. Generally the building will have a windowless manufacturing space.

The new plant will be provided with a recreational center, with lounges, restrooms, meeting rooms, and dining rooms for all members of the organization.

The floor area of the building will be nearly three times as large as the present plant at 4741 Ravenswood avenue, according to John G. Searle, president, who is third of his family to manage the business founded by his grandfather in 1888.

Soundproof Laboratories.

All research laboratory walls will be of tile, with floors and ceilings constructed to deaden sound. There will be laboratory units for organic chemistry, biochemistry, bacteriology, pharmacology, and the newer science, microanalysis. Adjacent to the laboratories will be the scientific library—one of the most extensive in the country, with walls paneled in white oak.

There will be glass partitions in the passageways so that visitors to the plant can inspect the processes without entering the laboratories or production units.

The company's business is devoted exclusively to providing drug preparations for use by the medical profession. It employs about 350 persons and will add to these when the new plant opens. Newly designed machinery will be installed.

OPEN 102 ACRE HOME PROJECT NEAR LOMBARD

Ten homes will be built at once in a new 102 acre subdivision just north of Lombard, on the north side of North avenue, extending from state route 53 west to Swift road. Known as Glen Ellyn acres, the development has 102 home sites ranging in size from one to approximately 2½ acres.

H. M. Cornell, the developer, said there will be no speculative building, with homes built only to order. Twenty-six home sites already have been sold.

At the Realty Boards

Henry W. Jansen, recently elected president of the North Side Real Estate board, will be installed in office during the board's eighth annual convention, on Thursday, June 5, at the Belden-Stratford hotel. Other new officers are: vice president, Arthur S. Whiston; secretary, Joseph F. Pagano, and treasurer, Louis G. Franke. The following are new directors: Harold V. Glos [former president], Felix Visk, Lloyd O. Gilbert, George H. Sweet, and Milton M. Worsek. Glos also is chairman of the appraisal committee, assisted by Burt R. Keily, a former president, and Raymond M. Hayes.

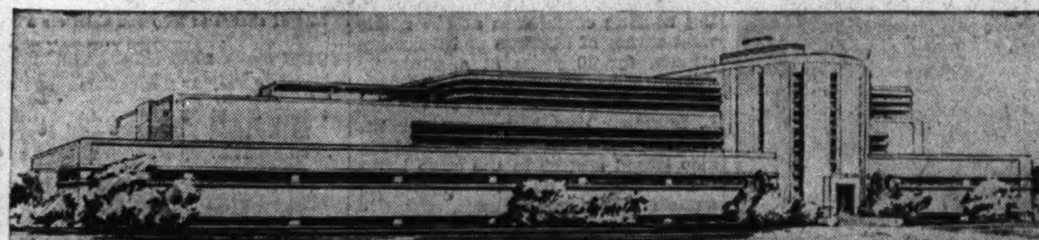
Suburban Streamliner



Streamlined thruout its exterior design, this million dollar drug manufacturing plant will be built in Skokie by G. D. Searle & Co. Herbert Banse is architect, Carl A. Metz, structural engineer, and A. C. King mechanical engineer. Work will be started tomorrow. The George A. Fuller company has the general contract. (Story in adjoining column.)

Recalling Colonial Days

Harold Johnson of the Hoover Ball and Bearing company is owner of this Georgian residence under construction at 200 Sheridan road, Glencoe. John Harold Melstrom, Chicago, is architect, and the Walter Norris company, Winnetka, builder. It has 11 rooms and 3 baths. The doorway is styled after one in the famous Morris house in Philadelphia, built in 1787 and still being used. The living room fireplace has an antique carved pine mantel brought over from England. The library has paneled knotty pine walls and a carved pine fireplace. The exterior walls are of brick veneer painted white. According to Jess S. Raban, attorney in the purchase of the 115 by 200 foot site, the house will cost approximately $40,000. Completion is set for early in July.

Concrete Wall Slabs Used in City First Time

Precast slabs of architectural concrete are being used for the first time in Chicago on a $40,000 auto service building under construction at the southwest corner of East 79th street and South Park avenue. Some of the slabs are about 6 by 8 feet in size and only 2½ inches thick.

The exterior surfaces have a rough texture of pure white materials. This texture is secured by brushing the surface of the concrete while it is still slightly soft, so as to expose the particles of gleaming white stone of which it is composed [together with white sand and white Portland cement].

The slabs are held in position on the building by steel anchor loops which are fastened into the backing masonry.

Alexander K. Eugene and Ernest K. Eugene, architects and engineers, designed the Chicago structure for Gust Rouhas, owner. Rouhas operates another service station at South Park avenue and 67th street.

The structural details of the new building are conventional masonry, steel, and frame, but the exterior will be entirely of architectural concrete, precast at the plant of the Architectural Cast Stone company and hauled to the job ready to set in place.

Farr & Co., one of Chicago's oldest real estate firms, has moved after 47 years in the Marquette building to the 16th floor of the Chicago Title and Trust building, 69 West Washington street. Founded by Marvin A. Farr in 1872, the company has been in the Marquette building since 1894. Newton C. Farr, present senior partner, entered the real estate business in 1912. He recently was president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Marvin A. Farr was president of the Chicago Real Estate board in 1897 and his son held the same office in 1930.

UPTURN IN REAL ESTATE MARKET SEEN BY OLCOTT

Home Building a Factor, Editor Asserts.

The long looked for revival in the real estate business apparently is at hand, according to Ralph A. Olcott, who, with his father, George C. Olcott, publishes Olcott's Land Values Blue Book of Chicago, the 1941 edition of which was issued yesterday. The increased number of transfers and trust deeds filed in 1940 as compared with 1939, and the issue of twice as many residential building permits in Chicago during 1940 as in 1939 would indicate that this assumption is warranted, he said yesterday.

Ralph A. Olcott.

Construction activity of this character always precedes a demand for lots and if there is no premature advance in the price of building sites the future prosperity of city and suburbs seems assured, Olcott said.

Suburban Values Rise.

According to Olcott residential land values in the older sections of Chicago declined during the last year, while homesites in the newer sections of suburbs were up 5 to 10 per cent. On city business streets prices remained firm at previous valuations.

Reported improvement in blighted areas was due largely to expenditures by individual owners in many cases with borrowed money. The federal housing projects, Olcott said, have not affected either tenant occupancy of private holdings or increased land values in their vicinity.

"If they don't cause new blighted areas to arise by the settlement of those dispossessed they'll have justified their erection," he said. "But, given employment at fair wages, the citizens of the blighted districts will improve their surroundings without subventions of government or outside aid of any kind."

In Chicago's downtown district the wrecking of buildings has proceeded faster than their erection, Olcott said. This was due partly to taxes, but in most cases to obsolescence. The tax bills of 1940, he asserted, caused many holders of vacant properties to throw them on the market, in many cases as much as 30 per cent below previous asking prices.

The 1941 Blue Book contains 32 more pages than the 1940 edition, with many new features and maps of several suburban areas never before covered.

A GEM OF A
HOME
In Nature's Playground

Bohner's Lake is the meeting place of wilderness and civilization, where the comforts and luxuries of modern living are set in a background of forest beauty and delight. Relaxation and a new viewpoint of life come with the crisp, bracing, fragrant air of the pine forest. The city is as close as your telephone, yet it will seem hundreds of miles away. Actually, it is only 59 miles—an easy drive on well paved highways.

BOHNER'S LAKE
ONLY 59 MILES FROM CHICAGO.

Away from the crowded "resort" sections. Bohner's Lake is different from anything you have ever seen. Fed by perpetual springs of crystal-clear water, this big lake is a thing of beauty. You'll enjoy fishing in its weed-free, gravel bottom or swimming along the gently sloped, sandy beach. Bohner's Lake is truly a Fisherman's Paradise. The Wisc. Dept. of Conservation maintains a State Hatchery right on the shore. That means plenty of game fish—Northern pike, pikerel, and bass. All summer long you can play golf or tennis. Sailing, rowing, hiking [along winding trails and picturesque hills], horseback riding, hunting in season—all sports are here for your health and pleasure.

ONLY $740 COMPLETE
SMALL DOWN PAYMENT
$12 Monthly

It's easy to own a well constructed home on Bohner's Lake. For only $740 you can buy a carpenter-built cottage with 4 large rooms, screened porch. All modern improvements, including electricity and inside toilet. Even the screens are included at this price.

DRIVE OUT TODAY.

See this Nature's Paradise today. It's only 59 miles! Follow Milwaukee-av. through Antioch to Brass Ball Corner [which is Highway 50] or follow Superhighway 41 [Cicero-av.] to Highway 50 and turn left on 50 to Bohner's Lake.

DAY by DAY on the FARM
by BOB BECKER

A Vagabond Goose.

May 31, 1941.

A lonely wild goose that seems to be footloose and free and possessed of a decided vagabonding complex is giving the Wheaton farm workers no end of worry these days. When we were talking to some of the boys this week they said they were inclined to start each day with this question: "Where is our wandering goose today?" because this bird is roving all over the countryside.

This goose doesn't pal with any of the other geese around the ponds. A few days ago one of the men saw the winged hobo leisurely walking thru an oat field about half a mile from its home territory. The bird was getting a meal and seemed quite contented. A few days later one of the farm youngsters who caddies at a nearby golf course saw the same bird nibbling on the tender grass of a fairway. This week the bird was reported swimming around in Herrick lake, which is in a forest preserve south of Wheaton.

A Carefree Bachelor?

Evidently this carefree goose is a bachelor with no family worries this season. If he does have family responsibilities he isn't being a very good protector and provider for his mate and her nest. Most of the geese are carefully guarding their nests around the farm ponds these days to insure a good hatch of goslings. This roving goose is the only one that has become a feathered hobo. It confines its wandering to the daylight hours, however. The men say it returns to the farm every evening regardless of how far it roams during the day.

The Muscovy ducks in the barnyard continue to be backward and mysterious this season. They started nesting later than usual this spring for no apparent reason. At this time last year there were several families of fuzzy yellow ducklings in the barnyard, but so far this season none has been hatched. We walked thru the nesting yard the other morning and found several sedate white hens which have well-feathered nests, and before many more days they should start acting as drum majors for the annual duckling parade.

Mallards Doing Fine.

Altho the Muscovys have been slow this season the Mallards have done well. There are 28 mallard ducklings in the barnyard now, 14 in the electric brooder and 14 being carefully watched by a proud White Rock hen. The flockmaster is justly proud of this mallard hatch, because the 28 ducklings came from 30 eggs.

The two peacocks which were transferred to the barnyard as a penalty for poor behavior are getting along well with the turkeys and chickens. When we went to see them the other morning one was resting calmly in the shade of a big apple tree and the other was trailing after a group of White Rock chickens. Altho they were antagonistic toward some of the four-legged farm residents in their previous location, it looks now as if they have calmed down in the barnyard.

Hollywood.

By JOHN CHAPMAN

ONE IS playing a half-breed who loves a bandit; another is playing a wealthy lass who loves a tourists' guide. The first is brand new to the screen—hasn't even been seen by the paying customers yet—but she's already something of a national figure. The second has made only two pictures, but wins stardom in the third, in which she is now working. The third girl, having warbled gaily to the top in one career, only to have it broken up, is now just as gaily clambering up in a second career. They are, in order, Jane Russell, Joan Leslie, and Jane Frazee.

Miss Russell, who'll be 20 on the 21st of this month, is the ripe and sultry brunette whom Howard Hughes picked out of a photograph gallery to play the feminine lead in "The Outlaw," which is his version of the life of Billy the Kid.

Three girls who are on the way up in Hollywood

Hughes, shy and distant and a bit deaf from so much flying, is a yearner. He yearns for months on end for the ideal woman. There's nothing personal in it; he just wants the ideal woman for the screen. And this ideal woman, in his eyes, must have a figure.

His first discovery, the late Jean Harlow, had one, and so has his newest find, Miss Russell.

Jane is taking her movie career and the fuss that's being made over her quite calmly. Unlike Joan Leslie, who is still aflutter with delight and wonderment at what has befallen her, she doesn't twitter worth a darn and she has not yet gone Hollywood. She hates night clubs, has gone steady for two years with a U. C. L. A. football player named Bob Waterfield, and plans to marry him in three more years.

Miss Russell's full name is Ernestine Jane Geraldine Russell. The Jane was stuck in by Mrs. Russell in honor of Jane Cowl, a fine actress. Mrs. Russell was an actress herself, name of Geraldine Jacobi, and in 1919 she was doing postwar entertainment work in Canada. When it came time for her first child to arrive she moved across the border to Bemidji, Minn., so the child would arrive on American soil.

Three months later the Russells moved to Burbank, Cal. Jane's father, the late Roy W. Russell, was an executive with a cosmetic firm, and he came out here to be western branch manager. Her mother, who had been with George Arliss' company, hoped that her daughter, too, might become an actress. When her family grew to include four sons she formed a home acting company and a home orchestra. Every Friday night the Russell orchestra, augmented by other youngsters in the neighborhood, would play at schools, clubs, and parties in the San Fernando valley. Jane played piano; Tom, now 17, the trombone; Kenneth, 16, the trumpet; James, 14, the clarinet, and Wallace, 12, the violin.

the senior class play the spring of 1939. After graduation she went job hunting, for her father, a good bread winner, had died two years before and the family income was small. She had posed occasionally for Tom Kelly, a commercial photographer, but she felt that the income wasn't steady or predictable enough, so she signed on at $10 a week as the receptionist in the office of one Dr. Creamer.

From February to June last year, at the behest of her mother, Jane studied dramatics with Maria Ouspenskaya, but she never got around to looking for work as an actress. The work came looking for her. Howard Hughes had begun to yearn. He wanted a new personality for a new movie, "The Outlaw," and naturally all the agents in town wanted to find him one and get a commission. One of these percentage-minded gentlemen happened into the studio of Photographer Kelly, saw a picture of Miss Russell on the wall, and asked for it. Kelly didn't want to give it, because he was tired of movies snatching his models, but the agent persuaded him not to stand in the way of a girl's—and an agent's—career, the picture was dispatched to Hughes, and Hughes, who had been mooning over hundreds of portraits, liked it, too.

Jane certainly hadn't acted like a film queen around home. Her wardrobe consisted of her leftover high school clothes and some slacks. But, now that she was signed up, she'd have to dress the part of a film personality, so the studio gave her $1,000 (charged to production) and told her to go shopping. She had a whale of a time for three days, getting everything she could think of—and then turned back $300.

She went to work in "The Outlaw," playing opposite young Jack Beutel, another Hughes discovery. She went to court, being a minor, to have her seven-year personal contract with Hughes O.K.'d. She went between shots, in makeup, and the judge told her to go and wash her face. She finished "The Outlaw," and Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox master mind, figured she'd had buildup enough to warrant his offering $35,000 for her services as the siren in "Blood and Sand." All but maybe a couple of hundred a week would have gone, of course, to Master Mind Hughes, who owns her contract, but Hughes wouldn't loan her out. So, since the finish of her one and only picture, Jane has been a lady of leisure. What happens to her from now on depends a great deal on how good "The Outlaw" is.

Joan Leslie is quite a contrast. Miss Russell, new to any kind of show business, has taken it all without batting an eye. Miss Leslie, who has been a trouper since childhood and is really theater-wise, is all aquiver. Now that she's going to get a star's billing with Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, and maybe others in "Sergeant York," she will have a celebrative dinner with Mrs. Vaughn Paul—and she will get, as the local phrase goes, a terrific bang out of it.

On July 3, 1936, she and Mrs. Paul (née Deanna Durbin) both went to court as minors to have their respective contracts approved. Joan was signing with Metro, Deanna with Universal. The two girls had their pictures taken together, and they made a compact to have a dinner reunion when both had become stars. Mrs. Paul made stardom quicker. Joan languished at Metro and didn't start going places until the Warners took her in hand.

You may remember—but you don't have to—that last November I wrote in these pages about Joan Leslie being on the brink of a buildup. At that time she was working in "High Sierra," the Humphrey Bogart gangster picture, and had not yet been caught by the public. But she's been caught by the Warner executives in the daily rushes, and she looked good enough for special attention. They put her in "The Wagons Roll at Night," another Bogart number, and she looked even better. So they gave her the rôle opposite Gary Cooper in "Sergeant York"—and what 18-year-old girl could ask for more?

Joan was in a girlish dither. She had never seen the great Cooper in the flesh. The first day Coop worked Joan sneaked onto the stage just to have a look at him. She didn't have to report for another week. A week later she met Coop when they rehearsed their first scenes—as young lovers. She was too greatly awed to talk. After the first camera take Cooper made some amiable jest and got her started talking, and from then on she was at her ease. It was the first case on record when the proverbially silent Gary Cooper deliberately engaged somebody in conversation.

Later, when Joan made her first closeup for "Sergeant York," Cooper really got in and pitched. Instead of just standing outside camera range and merely reading his lines, he played as intently as tho the camera were shooting him, too. This clinched things for Miss Leslie. From then on he was tops.

Because of shooting schedules, Joan found herself one time with an extra long week-end—from Thursday to Monday. With her mother and father she set out, in the car the studio had given her for her 16th birthday, on her first overnight trip away from Hollywood and on the first pure vacation jaunt of her life. There was no definite destination. The first stop was at an open-air roller skating rink by the highway. Joan skated for a couple of hours, and not a youngster on the floor had any notion there was a movie star in the crowd. Next stop was Palm Springs, week-end haunt of film folk, which Joan didn't like. So the trio went on to Big Bear and spent the night in a motel (a glorified auto camp).

When Joan finished "Sergeant York" a couple of weeks ago she went on her first solo shopping spree. Heretofore her mother had always gone along and controled the purse strings. This time Joan spent $171.75 all by herself, and it was the first time in her life she had spent a big sum like that. Her purchases included dresses for her mother and two sisters.

All of which sounds as tho Miss Leslie were a starry-eyed, naïve little babe, which she is; yet she knows more about show business than the calm, collected Jane Russell or the pert Jane Frazee. She made her debut in vaudeville when she was 2, in a musical act with her elder sisters, Mary and Betty. Before she reached her teens she was regularly playing theaters and night clubs in this sister act and had hit two such worldly spots as Ben Marden's Riviera and New York's Cotton club. She had also become a John Robert Powers model—but not the glamor type. She demonstrated little girls' dresses.

A Metro talent scout caught her in a new York night club and signed her up. She played brief bits in a couple of pictures, and in a couple more for Columbia, but nothing really important happened until the Warners took her in hand.

In "Moonlight in Hawaii," over at Universal, Jane Frazee is playing the daughter of rich Leon Errol, and she falls in love with Johnny Downs, an ex-radio singer who now is piloting tourists around Honolulu. Like Miss Leslie, Miss Frazee was caught in a night club. "Moonlight," is her fifth picture, and all of her rôles have been pretty good.

Jane, whose real last name is Frehse, used to be part of another night club and vaudeville singing sister act. With her sister Ruth she played the hotel-and-jernt circuit for six years, hitting the good spots in Chicago, New York, and other centers of civilization. The team broke up when Ruth Frazee retired to become the wife of Norman Krasna, screen writer, and Jane had to carry on alone. Last year she arrived in Hollywood for a night club engagement and after her first performance was given three film offers. She took the one from Republic and went into "Melody and Moonlight." Then Universal sought and got her for its surprise hit, "Buck Privates"—and now the two studios own her jointly and keep her very busy.

Jane Frazee was born Jane Frehse 23 years ago in Duluth, Minn. She's of Norwegian-French stock. Her father, Walter Frehse, is a civil engineer working in South America, and she lives with her mother in a small Hollywood apartment. Jane hade her singing debut at the age of 8—which gives Joan Leslie a six-year bulge on her—in Duluth's Lyceum theater, and she got $7.50 for the performance and enough rave notices to keep her in show business. A couple of years ago she and Ruth made some musical shorts for the Warners—but they were just musical shorts, and nobody, not even the Warners, thought of either of the girls as an actress.

Jane's movie score to date includes "Melody and Moonlight," "Buck Privates," "Maid in Manhattan," "Angels with Broken Wings," and the current "Moonlight in Hawaii." Johnny Downs has been her boy friend in three of these. Offstage her boy friend is Eddie Buzzell, the director—but she denies that any engagement is forthcoming.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Millions of fascinating people to see in Chicago streets—all races, all colors, all kinds of doings—all free. And there are people who sit in movie shows instead. Some dopes! Your truly,

CARL PETERSON.

Editor's note: Why, Carl Peterson!

Dear Miss Tinée: I would like to know if Sonja Henie is finished with the movies since her marriage to Dan Topping. If not, what is her next picture to be and when will it start production? If you have room in your column would you please print a picture of her? Thank you and best of luck to your column! Yours truly,

Sonja Henie

BETTY CHRISTIANSEN.

Dear Betty: Miss Henie's next film is titled "Sun Valley Serenade," in which John Payne will play the male lead. Its release date has not been set. Glad to print the picture. You're welcome, and thank you!

Dear Miss Tinée: For many, many months I have been reading your column, hoping that some day I, too, would be able to contribute something. Now that day has come. I saw Desi Arnaz in "Too Many Girls" and was so overwhelmed by his looks, acting ability, and accent that I wrote a little poem about him. I hope you like it.

Desi, your're handsome; Desi, you're great;
Your looks are just perfect, your acting's first rate.
You're not of the everyday type you see,
You're one of the best, every one will agree.
Your hair is so black, your skin is so tan,
I look upon you as a dashing young man.
You're tall and you're dark, you're romantic and gay;
How I feel when I see you I just cannot say,
So, Desi, I dedicate this poem to you,
And to you and you only I'll always be true.

BEVERLY BROSSEIT.

P. S.—Isn't Lucille Ball lucky, tho?

Dear Beverly: I guess she must be!

The Best Dive Bomber

By WAYNE THOMIS

THE BEST German bombing plane yet to be produced is the Junkers Ju88 bimotored monoplane. It was partially described in the Graphic Section when the first experimental model set world speed-with-load records for flights over 620 and 1,240 mile closed courses.

That secret ship first flew the shorter course at 321 mile-an-hour average speed with 4,000 pounds of bombs, and made 311 miles an hour over the longer course with the same load. Since then Ju88s in their production service form have been downed in England and completely analyzed.

That term "best German bomber" comes from the British. The Ju88 is a machine which has no counterpart in their air force nor in our own, because it combines two types of flying that hitherto at least have been considered at opposite poles.

Its maximum loaded weight in the latest versions is 30,000 pounds. Its wing span is 59 feet and it is 46½ feet long. The cockpit is 15 feet off the ground when it is at rest. These figures mean that the plane is nearly as large as the Douglas DC-3 air liners that carry 21 passengers over our commercial air line routes. Actually the Ju88 has a higher loaded weight by some 5,000 pounds.

Motors in the first Ju88s were Junkers 211s—V-12 liquid-cooled types delivering up to 1,300 horsepower for takeoff. The latest models of this bomber, however, have been fitted with 1,700-horsepower BMW-801 two-row radial engines. These are German-built Pratt & Whitney double Wasp engines.

Top speed of the first production Ju88s was said to be 296 miles an hour—a reduction due to such military necessities as external bomb racks, externally fitted diving brakes, and certain machine gun blisters on the top of the cabin and under the belly. The added power of the latest motors, however, has increased the top speed of the Ju88-B, the latest model, to approximately that of the experimental machine.

The British, from examinations of Ju88s they brought down virtually intact, believe that the airplane was first conceived as a fast long-range horizontal bomber. Then the Stuka dive bombers were so successful in Poland, in France, and earlier in Spain that just as the airplane was going into production authorities asked that it be fitted for dive bombing also.

The result was that the wing spars were greatly strengthened by "patching" with more metal. Further, the dive brakes were fitted so that they lay flat against the bottom surface of the wing when retracted. These certainly would have been arranged to fit flush within the wing if they had not been an afterthought. Furthermore, it was necessary to add external bomb racks. These racks—two beneath each wing just at the root—each will carry a 550-pound bomb, making the total load for dive bombing 2,200 pounds.

Inside the fuselage just behind the cockpit is a compartment that can carry 16 bombs of 110 pounds each, another total of 1,760 pounds.

The plane is notable because of its single vertical fin and rudder—probably to increase the field of defensive fire backward—and the use of normal type ailerons (wing tip control surfaces) and flaps. All other Junkers planes have used the Junkers type of auxiliary airfoil surface that hangs slightly below the trailing edge of the wing.

British experts study a Ju88 forced down in England. It has been dismantled in part during examination.

The small cockpit is at the extreme nose of the fuselage. The crew of four literally work back to back. German theory on this point is that the morale of the group is better when the men are close together. The cockpit is almost entirely surrounded by glass, providing an extraordinarily good view up, down, and to both sides.

When dive bombing the pilot is the bomb aimer also, and a diving sight is fitted between the rudder pedals. The pilot looks down between his legs and sees his target thru the glass inclosures and the sight. For horizontal bombing a horizontal sight is fitted for a bomb aimer who lies prone out in the transparent nose as in the larger British and American machines.

The diving brakes and an automatic pilot assister to remind the pilot and help him to pull out of dives were described here recently in a story of dive bombing tactics. The Ju88 is armored and has the German self-sealing fuel tanks, made of alternate layers of rubber, fiber, and leather. The tanks have a total capacity of 770 gallons, altho only the 2,200 pounds of external bombs may be carried with this fuel load aboard.

Defense originally consisted of one .312-caliber machine gun firing backward over the fuselage. Later versions have a belly gun and four guns firing backward and sideward from the cockpit inclosure.

THE FIRST 'UNION NOW' MAN—

BENEDICT ARNOLD

How Traitor Tried to Hand America Back to British

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

HIS MAJESTY'S sloop Vulture was idly swinging at anchor in the current of the Hudson near King's Ferry when the traitor came aboard. It was Monday morning, Sept. 25, 1780.

The traitor, a bold and fiery little man of swarthy appearance, rose from his seat in a barge and climbed slowly over the Vulture's side, his crippled leg making his progress difficult. He vanished immediately, but soon was back at the vessel's rail, shouting down to the oarsmen of his barge:

"My lads, I have quitted the rebel army and joined the standard of his Britannic majesty. If you join me I will make sergeants and corporals of you all, and for you, James, I will do something more."

The man addressed as James was Larvey, coxswain of the barge, who bellowed back:

Two of the oarsmen threw their lots with the traitor; the rest departed upstream in the barge after a brief detention.

The Vulture, with an evening breeze bellying its sails, reached New York that night, and the next morning the traitor landed and was escorted to British army headquarters in the city, where, it is said, he was not without friends among the British officers.

• • •

His nefarious conduct must have preyed heavily upon his mind, even tho he kept up a bold front. About the first thing that a rascal does after performing a rascally deed is to manufacture excuses that will sound plausible. The traitor in this respect was no different from other rascals. He laboriously prepared a written vindication of his actions. This was printed as a broadside in New York on Oct. 7 under the title "To the Inhabitants of America" and given wide circulation. The text of this strange document follows:

"I should forfeit even in my own opinion, the place I have so long held in yours, if I could be indifferent to your approbation, and silent on the motives which have induced me to join the King's arms.

"A very few words however shall suffice upon a subject so personal, for the thousands who suffer under the Tyranny of the Usurpers in the revolted provinces as well as to the great multitude, who have long wished for its subversion, this instance of my conduct can want no vindication, and as to that class of men who are criminally protracting the war from sinister views at the expense of the public interest, I prefer their enmity to their applause. I am therefore only concerned in this address to explain myself to such of my countrymen, as want abilities or opportunities to detect the artifices by which they are duped.

"Having fought by your side when the love of our country animated our arms, I shall expect from your justice and candor, what your deceivers with more art and less honesty will find it inconsistent with their own views to admit.

"When I quitted domestic happiness for the perils of the field, I conceived the rights of my country in danger, and that duty and honour called me to her defense. A redress of grievances was my only object and aim, however I acquiesced in a step which I thought precipitate, the declaration of independence: To justify this measure many plausible reasons were urged, which could no longer exist, when Great-Britain with the open arms of a parent offered to embrace us as children, and grant the wished for redress.

"And now that her worst enemies are in her own bosom I should change my principles; if I conspired with their designs: yourselves being judges, was the war the less just, because fellow subjects were considered as our foes? You have felt the torture in which we raised our arms against a brother. God incline the guilty protractors of these unnatural dissentions, to resign their ambitions, and cease from their delusions, in compassion to kindred blood.

"I anticipate your question, was not the war a defensive one until the French joined in the combination? I answer, that I thought so. You will add was it not afterwards necessary, till the separation of the British empire was compleat? By no means, in contending for the welfare of my country I am free to declare my opinion, that this end attained, all strife should have ceased.

"I lamented therefore the impolicy, tyranny and injustice, which with a sovereign contempt of the people of America, studiously neglected to take their collective sentiments of the British proposals of peace, and to negociate under a suspension of arms, for an adjustment of differences, as a dangerous sacrifice of the great interests of this country to the partial views of a proud, ancient and crafty foe. I had my suspicions of some imperfections in our councils, on proposals prior to the Parliamentary Commission of 1778; but having then less to do in the cabinet than the field, (I will not pronounce peremptorily as some may, and perhaps justly, that Congress have veiled them from the public eye:) I continued to be guided in the negligent confidence of a soldier. But the whole world saw, and all America confessed that the overtures of the second commission exceeded our wishes and expectations, and if there was any suspicion of the national liberality, it arose from its excess.

"Do any believe we were at that time really entangled by an alliance with France, unfortunate deception! and thus they have been duped, by a virtuous credulity in the incautious moments of intemperate passion to give up their felicity to serve a nation wanting both the will and the power to protect us, and aiming at the destruction both of the mother country and the provinces. In the plainness of common sense, for I pretend to no casuistry, did the pretended treaty with the Court of Versailles, amount to more than an overture to America? Certainly not, because no authority had been given by the people to conclude it, not to this very hour have they authorized its ratification. The Articles of Confederation remain still unsigned.

Sir Henry Clinton

"In the firm persuasion therefore, that the private judgement of any individual citizen of this country is as free from all conventional restraints, since as before the insidious offers of France, I preferred those from Great-Britain thinking it infinitely wiser and safer, to cast my confidence upon her justice and generosity, than to trust a monarchy too feeble to establish your Independency, so perilous to her distant dominions; the enemy of the Protestant Faith, and fraudulently avowing an affection for the liberties of mankind, while she holds her native sons in vassalage and chains.

"I affect no disguise, and therefore frankly declare that in these principles, I had determined to retain my arms and command for an opportunity to surrender them to Great Britain, and in concerting the measures for a purpose in my opinion, as grateful as it would have been beneficial to my country: I was only solicitous to accomplish an event of decisive importance, and to prevent as much as possible in the execution of it, the effusion of blood.

"With the highest satisfaction I bear testimony to my old fellow soldiers, and citizens, that I find solid ground to rely upon the Clemency of our Sovereign, and abundant conviction that it is the generous intention of Great-Britain, not only to leave the rights and privileges of the Colonies unimpaired, together with their perpetual exemption from taxation, but to superadd such further benefits as may consist with the common prosperity of the empire. In short, I fought for much less than the Parent Country is as willing to grant to her Colonies as they can be to receive or enjoy.

• • •

"Some may think I continued in the struggle of these unhappy days too long, and others that I quitted it too soon—To the first I reply, that I did not see with their eyes, nor perhaps had so favourable a situation to look from, and that to our common Master I am willing to stand or fall. In behalf of the candid among the latter, some of whom I believe serve blindly but honestly—in the bands I have left, I pray God to give them all the lights requisite to their own safety before it is too late, and with respect to that herd of censurers, whose enmity to me originates in their hatred to the principles, by which I am now led to devote my life to the reunion of the British empire, as the best, and only means to dry up the streams of misery that have deluged this country, they may be assured that conscious of the rectitude of my intentions I shall treat their malice and calumnies with contempt and neglect. B. ARNOLD."

B. ARNOLD.

NEW-YORK, October 7, 1780.

Printed by JAMES RIVINGTON, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

It was in this manner that Benedict Arnold tried to explain why he, a much-admired American soldier with an enviable record for leadership and valor, had attempted to betray his country and deliver the fortress of West Point, which was under his command, to the enemy for £10,000 and a major general's commission. There are few papers written by public men that are so weak as this so-called vindication by Arnold.

Trying to draw attention away from his treachery, he attempted to make out that he had been inspired by noble impulses to end a war after its main object, as he alleged, had been attained. What patriotic Americans saw in his words was something quite to the contrary—an eagerness on his part to hand America, after more than four years of independence, back to the British.

There was no movement then in America known specifically as the "Union Now" movement, but today people in this country may well accept Benedict Arnold as the first "Union Now" man.

• • •

If Arnold could have died before he took his first treacherous step, or could have managed to remain an honest man, he would have gone down in history as one of America's outstanding heroes. As it was, his infamy erased all the fine achievements of his earlier career. His name became just another term for traitor.

In confining our story to the conspiracy that led to Arnold's downfall we can begin with June, 1778, when the British abandoned Philadelphia, and Arnold, as a major general in the American army, was placed in command of the city with the title of military governor. Philadelphia at this time, altho its population was only about 25,000, was the wealthiest city of the land. A number of its inhabitants entertained Tory sympathies. It was the custom then, as it still is today, among a small part of the aristocratically inclined, well-to-do Americans to ape British ways and to look upon things British as superior to things American.

Great Britain made every possible effort to take advantage of this situation. It had countless spies on its pay roll in America, the country being infested with "fifth columnists." The official papers of Sir Henry Clinton, commander in chief of the British forces in America, now are being studied by Carl Van Doren, the biographer, who is preparing a book based upon them. They provide a record of the British secret service in America, the most important weapon of which was bribery. It is to the everlasting credit of all men with real power in this country that the only one of them to succumb was Arnold. The Tory sympathizers in Philadelphia entertained the British officers during the British occupation, and when the American officers moved in the whirl of social gayeties continued. Arnold was relatively poor in worldly goods, even tho he contrived to live on an extravagant scale. Besides being brave and resourceful, he was vain and sensitive and extremely susceptible to flattery.

It was while Arnold was in command in Philadelphia, coddled to no small degree by the city's society folk, that one Joseph Reed, president of the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania and former secretary to General Washington, presented to congress eight charges of misconduct against him. The charges in themselves were not particularly grave ones, among them being the accusation that Arnold had employed government wagons for private purposes. The accused demanded an immediate court martial, but did not get it.

In the meantime, in April, 1779, he took as his second wife Margaret Shippen, called Peggy by her friends, the daughter of Edward Shippen, chief justice of Pennsylvania. Altho Shippen held the highest judicial post in the state, he could not be classed as an out-and-out patriot. He has been described by historians as a half Tory. Margaret, his daughter, was 18 or 19 years old when Arnold married her, and he, a widower with several children, was 38. Moreover, he was badly battered. Crippled in one of his legs from wounds received just before Burgoyne's surrender at Saratoga, he had to support himself by leaning against a soldier when he stood up at his wedding.

Congress threw out four of the eight charges against Arnold, but it was December of 1779 before the court martial finally

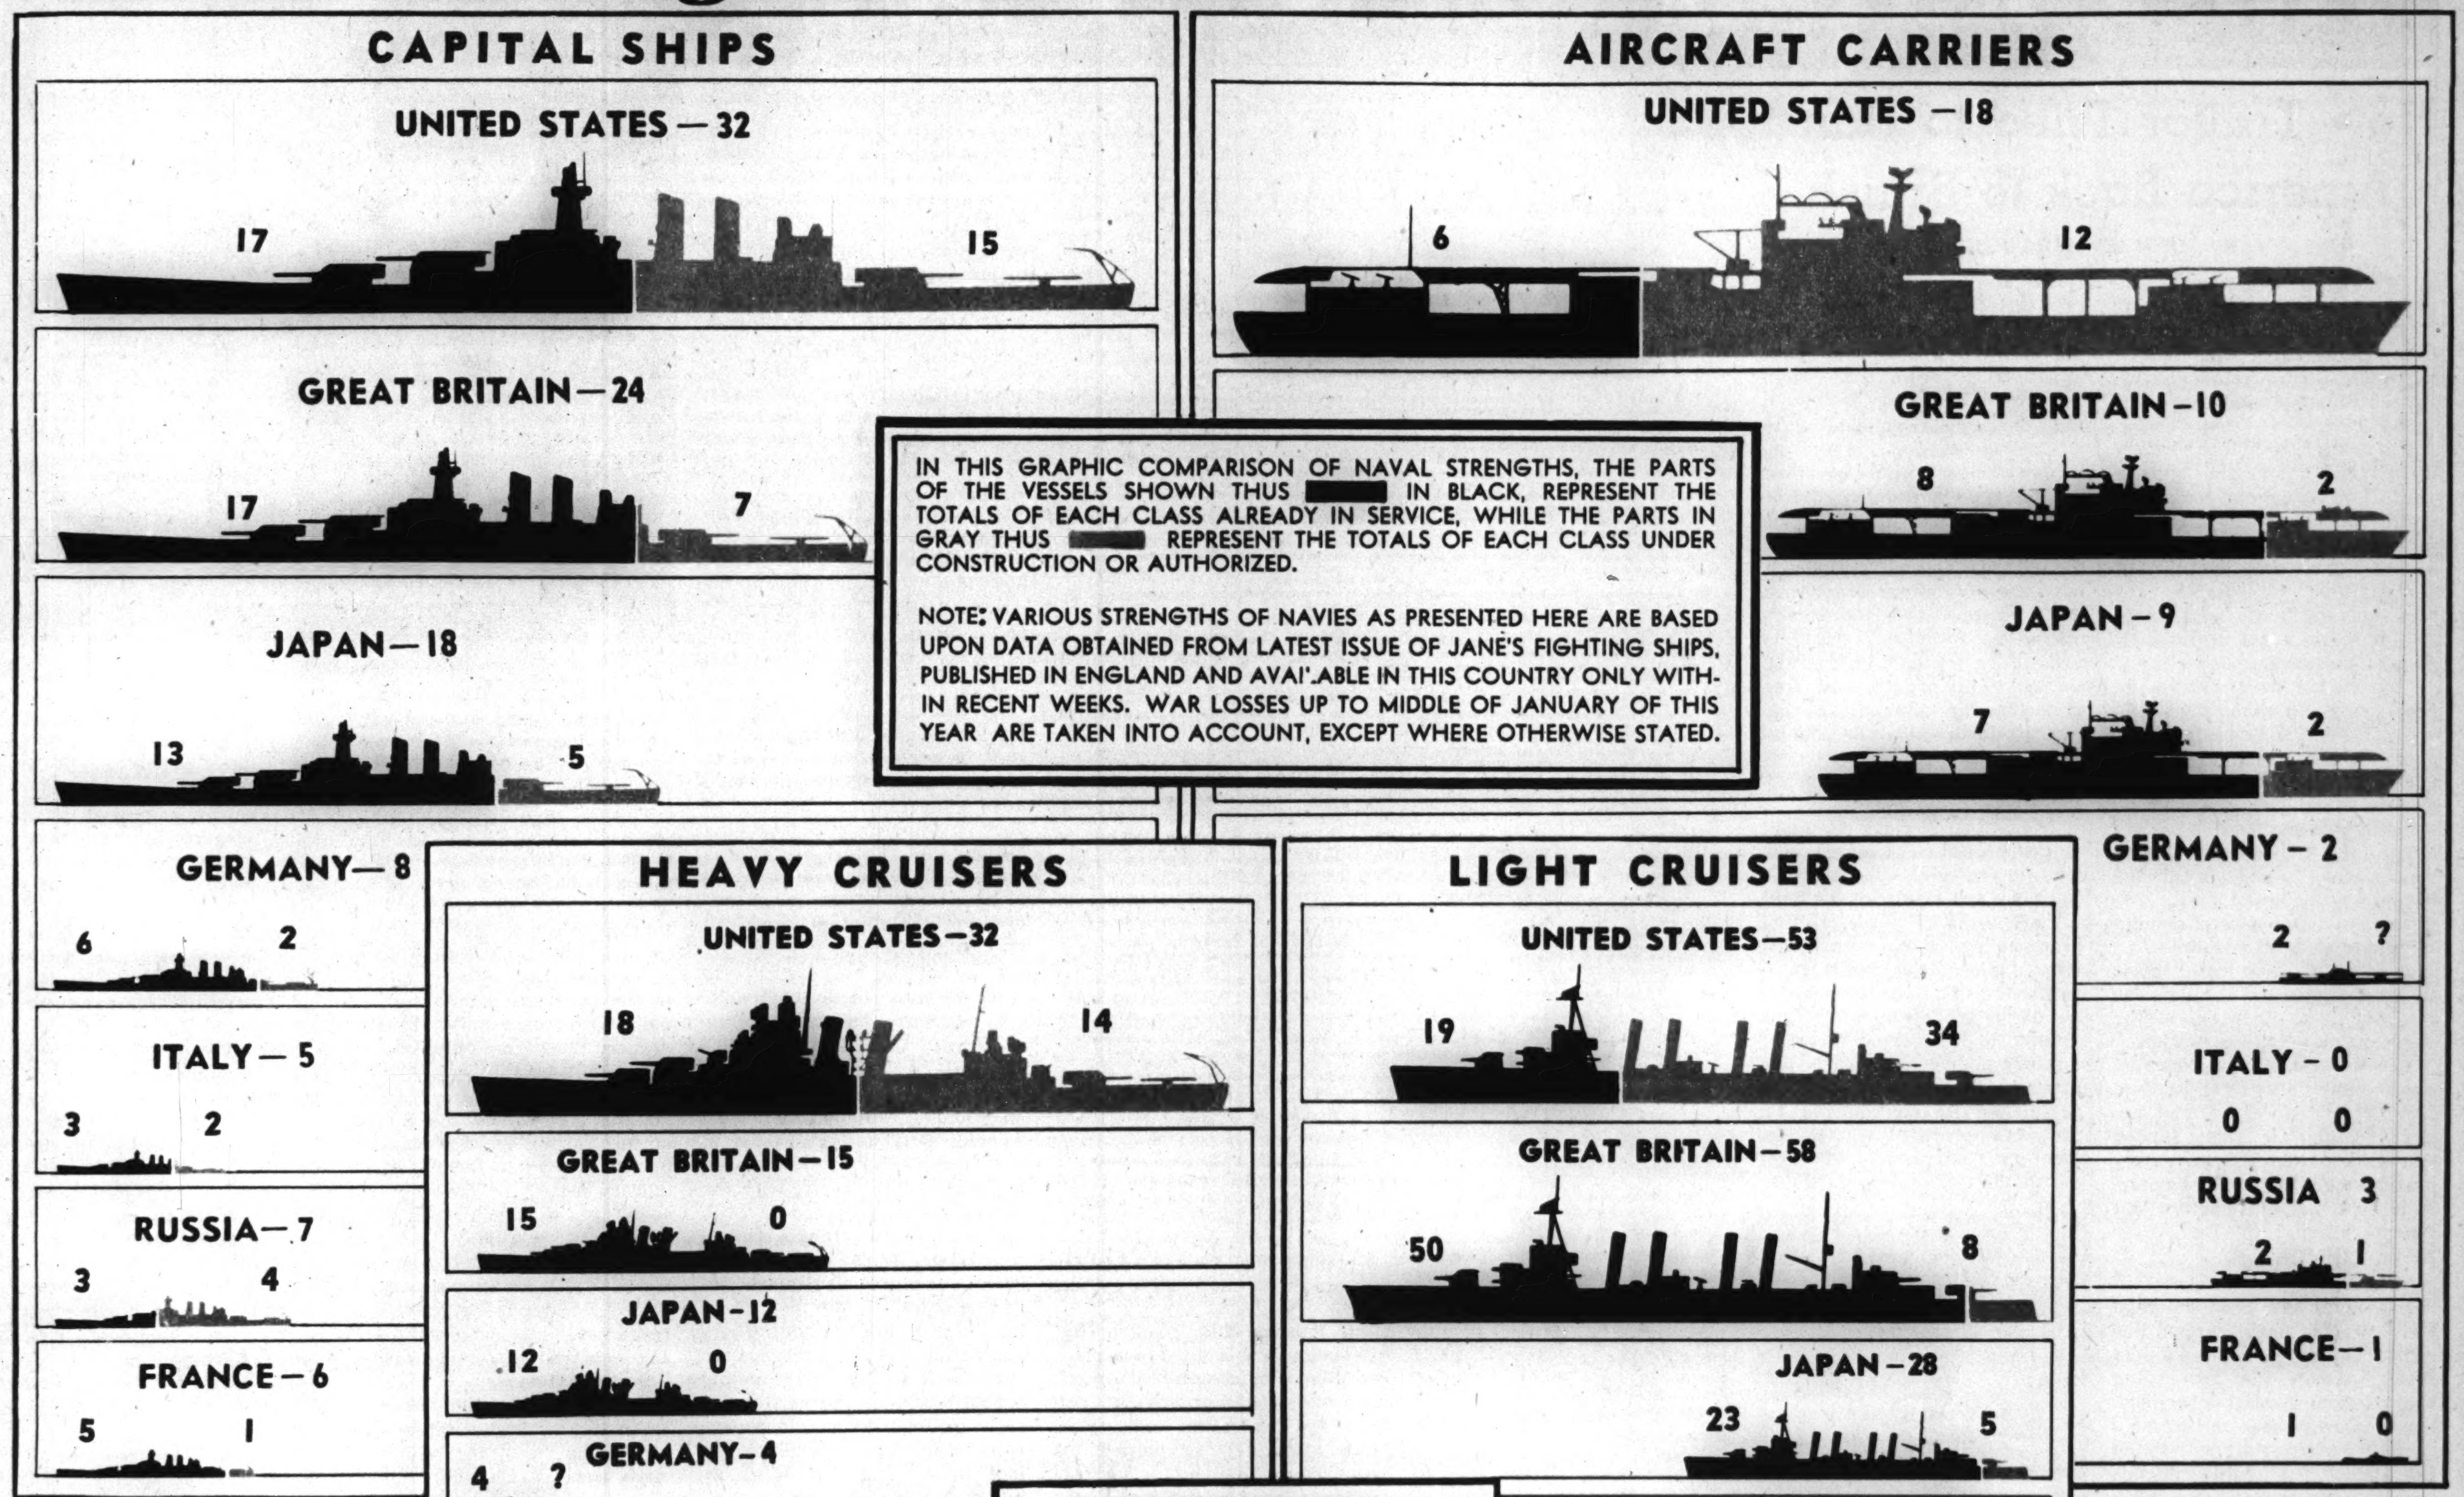
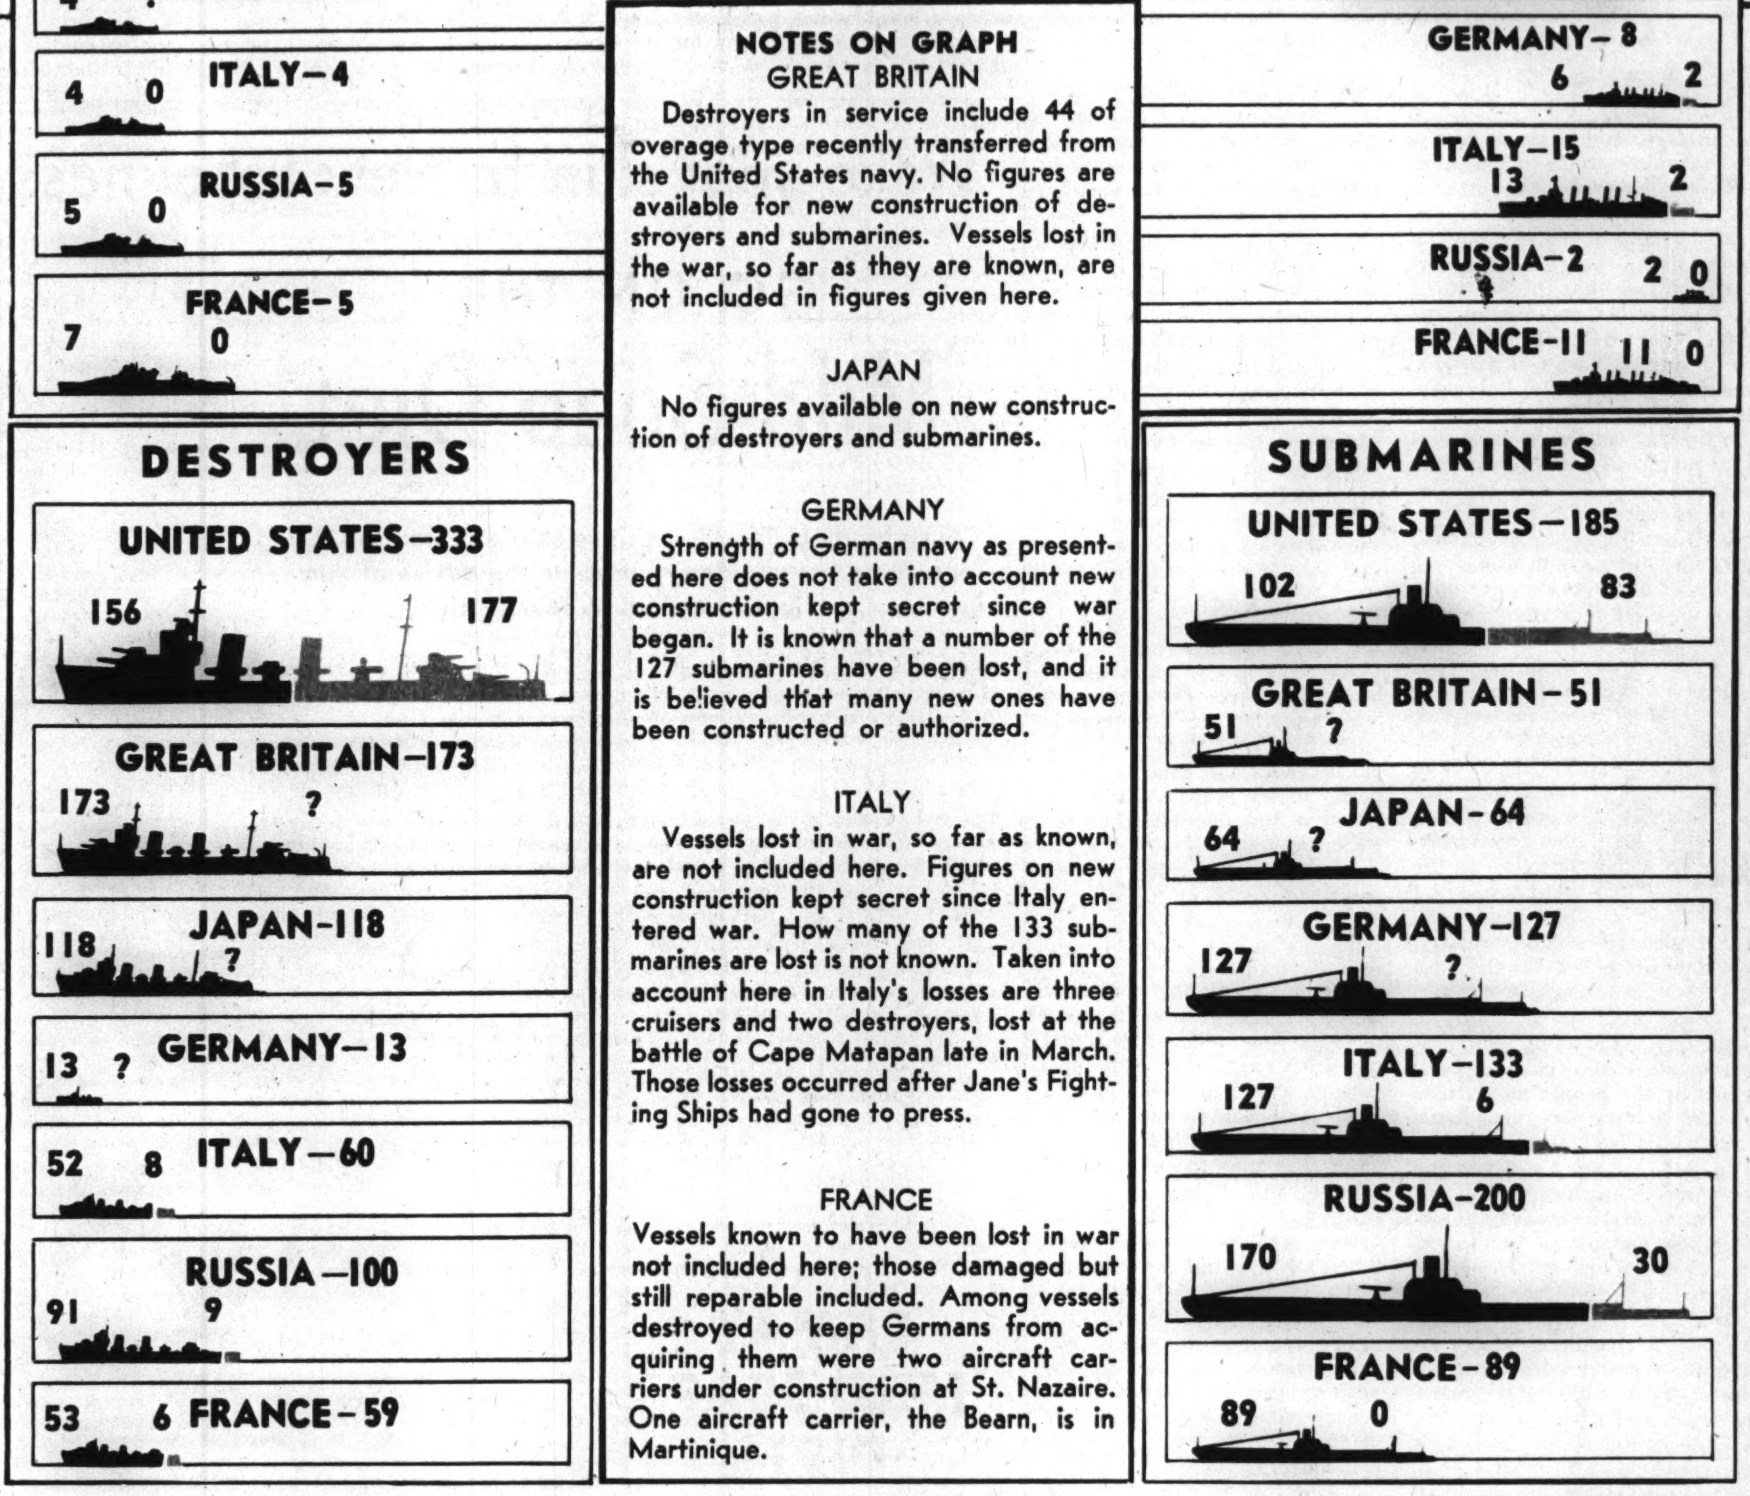
Naval Strengths of the World's Sea Powers





America and Britain in Top Places

THE ACCOMPANYING graph provides a ready summarization of the comparative strengths of the world's principal sea powers. The comparisons are as accurate as can be determined in wartime, when, as is obvious, much secrecy surrounds the subject of navies.

Statistics obtained from the latest issue of "Jane's Fighting Ships," supplemented by data dealing with recent naval losses in the war and recent commissioning of vessels, such as America's two newest battleships, show that the seven major sea powers are far from being on a par with each other. The United States ranks as an equal with Great Britain in capital ships in service, but outranks it when all vessels of this class under construction or authorized are taken into consideration.

• • •

Capital ships, it should be explained, are those vessels armed with big guns. In this class Great Britain possesses both battleships and battle cruisers, while the United States has only battleships. The huge American aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga originally were laid down as battle cruisers, but before completion they were converted into carriers when our government signed an arms limitation agreement with other naval powers. In capital ships Japan stands third, so far as the outside world knows.

Naval warfare of the type developed in the present conflict, according to the British theory, places emphasis on vessels less heavily armed than capital ships—on light cruisers, destroyers, and even the small motor torpedo boats that make up the mosquito fleets. This is owing to the fact that neither Germany nor Italy is particularly strong in capital ships, and thus the British are not required to employ heavy gun craft in many of their operations.

In the event that the United States should become involved in a war with Japan, however, the great battleships of the American fleet undoubtedly would be employed to determine the final results. Sent into action against like vessels of the Japanese fleet, they could deliver a superiority of fire that ought to settle the Pacific issue for a long time to come.

Despite the amazing development of aircraft as war weapons and the progress made in mechanizing armies, sea power may yet be the deciding factor in the European war. The British navy still controls the sea. The Italian navy, penned up in the Mediterranean, has been driven to the protection of its harbors and land batteries. The German navy's operations have been restricted to furtive raids by surface craft and the stealthy comings and goings of submarines. It is conceivable that what is left of the French navy might be employed to take an important part in final conclusions at sea, but there are reasons to believe that this navy has lost its striking power. The morale in the French navy is low, and French sailors could not be counted on as having their hearts and souls in the business of fighting for either Germany or Great Britain. If German crews were placed on the French vessels they would be confronted with the problem of operating ships totally unfamiliar to them.

Crews Just as Important as Vessels

It does not seem likely that the British Isles can be invaded and the government forced to capitulate so long as the British fleet rules the sea.

The combined fleets of Germany, Italy, and Japan appear formidable indeed on paper. In the opinion of naval men, however, they may lack in quality what they possess in quantity. This applies particularly to Italy. A fleet, it has been pointed out time and again, is more than ships. Fully as important as the vessels of the fleet are the crews, and it is a recognized fact that in no other navies of the world are efficiency and morale so high as in those of the United States and Great Britain. Big guns on big ships are of little avail in battle if the gunnery is poor. Torpedoes that do not strike their targets are just a waste of time and money. The gunnery of the American navy is superb, as countless tests at target practice have shown.

When the United States navy fought its most recent sea battles, more than 40 years ago, its excellent gunnery was the sensation of time. Since the Spanish-American war the American navy has been improved immeasurably. Even tho other navies have improved also, it is believed that American gunnery still ranks first.

There are still other factors to be considered in comparisons of navies that cannot be shown on any graph. These are the traditions of victories, the pride of achievement, and the background of maritime successes over long periods of time. The British have been seafaring people for hundreds of years. Their fleets rarely have been defeated. They fight best when the odds are against them. America's naval history, altho not reaching back so far as England's, is equally glorious. One cannot forget the showing that a handful of Yankee frigates made against the capable British in the War of 1812. That spirit still lives on.

At left is a good example of a bad getup—a long, careless bob, throat fussiness, and an overtrimmed hat. At right, the same girl, with the accent on neatness.

Altho it seems exaggerated, the outfit on the left has many a counterpart in life. At right the model has acquired a more sculptured hair-do to fit the bird-laden hat.

Whether with her hat perched back on her head or without a hat at all, the girl has a neat appearance.

NEAT—NOT GAUDY

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY
(Copyright: 1941: News Syndicate, Inc.)

NOW WHAT do you think the order is? No, not to be glamorous! Not to be too, too divine! Not to be too, too chic and charming! O, you can be all these things, naturally, but it is the new command that's gone out that we're talking about, and it is simply this:

Be neat. Be neater than you ever appeared before.

It covers a lot of territory in the feminine world, that order does. But today we're just going to give you one angle, the rest to be taken up later from time to time. It's the neat headline and neckline to which we'll confine our remarks today.

Keep in mind the old slogan, "Neat as a pin," and aim to be neater even than that! That means a sculptured head contour and uncluttered neckline. The well mannered, well behaved look, if you know what we mean, which we are sure you do, as it isn't very complicated.

The young people probably will call it, in their own descriptive way, "smoothie." And that's what it is, true enough!

We are seeing around town already what looks to us like a competitive race for sleek, smooth neatness. The other day a beautiful girl, made beautiful really by her extraordinary neatness of head, had her hair so arranged that it looked like a smooth-fitting cap all around except for the soft front bangs. She was a long-throated blonde in a trig spring suit, and every one looked at her.

The pictures give you shining examples of what is demanded in the 1941 spring and summer order.

SHE WAS A PHANTOM OF DELIGHT

BY WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

She was a phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight;
A lovely apparition, sent
To be a moment's ornament:
Her eyes as stars of twilight fair;
Like twilight's, too, her dusky hair,
But all things else about her drawn
From Maytime and the cheerful dawn—
A dancing shape, an image gay,
To haunt, to startle, and waylay.

I saw her upon nearer view,
A spirit, yet a woman too:
Her household motions light and free,
And steps of virgin liberty;
A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet;
A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food—
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles.

And now I see with eye serene
The very pulse of the machine;
A being breathing thoughtful breath,
A traveler between life and death;
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill:
A perfect woman, nobly planned
To warn, to comfort, and command;
And yet a spirit still, and bright
With something of an angel light.

COFFEE RING IS CULINARY JEWEL

By MARY MEADE

WHAT IS SO RARE as a day in June, unless it's a yeast coffee cake which can be made in a hurry? I think I have a little jewel in this Viennese coffee ring which rises only once, for an hour, before being baked.

The exquisite fineness and delicacy of texture depend upon a thoro beating of the batter. It's necessary to beat until the batter looks and feels a bit stretchy and clings to the spoon.

Make this Sunday breakfast favorite with some of the new enriched flour if you want it to be full of minerals and vitamins.

Rarer than a day in June is this yeast coffee cake, which may be made in a short time.

This is a jellied salmon salad, chilled in three layers. Middle layer consists of chili sauce and celery.

VIENNESE COFFEE RING

2 cakes yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
1 egg
3¼ cups sifted flour
Sugar and cinnamon

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Scald milk, add sugar, salt, and shortening. Cool to lukewarm. Add egg, 1 cup flour, and yeast and beat thoroly. Add more flour to make a stiff batter. Beat for three minutess. Pour into greased angel food or spring pan, sprinkle generously with sugar and cinnamon (and chopped nuts if desired). Let rise one hour, or until doubled in bulk. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes.

Raisins and nuts may be put right into the batter of the coffee cake if desired. Chopped candied fruit might be another variation.

This coffee ring makes a wonderful luncheon bread. You'll like it with this salmon salad mold, I think:

SALMON SALAD MOLD

1 pound canned salmon
2 packages lemon gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
½ cup cold water
¼ cup lemon juice
3 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup chili sauce
1 cup chopped celery

Arrange half the flaked salmon in the bottom of a loaf pan. Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add half the gelatin mixture to the chili sauce. Add cold water, lemon juice, vinegar, and salt to remaining gelatin mixture. Pour half mixture over salmon flakes and chill until firm. Add celery to chili sauce and pour over jellied salmon. Chill. Then add remaining salmon and rest of gelatin mixture. Chill again. Turn out on salad greens and slice to serve. Serve with mayonnaise.

The chili sauce layer gives this jellied salad a little more zip than it might otherwise have.

A rather fussy (but not hard to make) dessert for a Sunday night supper is fresh strawberry blitz torte. Serve it after a simple first course, perhaps nothing more than sandwiches and a tossed crisp vegetable salad.

STRAWBERRY BLITZ TORTE
(Two nine-inch layers)

1⅓ cups sifted cake flour
1⅓ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup butter
½ cup sugar
4 egg yolks, unbeaten
5 tablespoons milk
4 egg whites
1 cup sugar
1 quart strawberries, sweetened

Sift flour several times with baking powder. Cream butter and add sugar gradually, beating thoroly so that mixture is light and fluffy. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating thoroly after each addition. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat well and spread batter in two greased nine-inch layer pans. Beat egg whites until foamy thruout. Add sugar 2 tablespoons at a time. Beat after each addition until sugar is thoroly blended. Continue beating until mixture will stand in peaks. Spread over the cake batter, half the meringue on each. Bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees, for 25 minutes. Increase to 350 degrees and bake 30 minutes longer. Put sweetened strawberries between layers and top with whipped cream to serve.

1 "Boy, O, boy!" sighs Millionaire Playboy Randy Bradford as he sees Gloria Winters (Joan Bennett) in the floor show of the Club Caliban. And Randy's delight is sincere.

2 He stages a cyclonic courtship. It culminates in a rickety ride to a country parson's establishment, but before Randy (John Hubbard) can arrange the ceremony he gets a call from his guardian.

3 "It's Mark, darling—the old slave driver! Says he'll disinherit me if I go thru with this. Come on. We'll go to work on him!"

4 Mark Willows (Franchot Tone) turns out to be young, personable. Concealing her identity, Gloria starts out to alter his ideas about altars.

5 She isn't successful. Finally she turns on the tears. "For heaven's sake, Miss Winters, don't cry," says the harried Willows. "I'll give you a job and you'll be able to take care of your dear mother."

6 So Gloria takes the job, a Gloria's roommate, Sal Long (Eve Arden), takes ov the job of consoling Rand

7 But Gloria makes a blunder. She permits a nut inventor (Luis Alberni) to see Mark Willows, and Mark nearly loses a hand in the perfect mousetrap.

8 Her second blunder, however, is really serious. It causes a market upheaval. Willows storms out: "You are thru, Miss Winters, thru! Dear old mother or no, get out!"

9 Now it is Sally's job to console Gloria. "Don't take it hard, honey," she says. "If Mark is broke, Randy will be, too; then you can marry him and live on love." But, unknown to them, Gloria's blunder has turned into a colossal coup. Willows' office makes millions.

10 Elated, Willows relents and arranges a gala wedding, with himself as best man. But suddenly at the church Gloria has a great awakening. Her campaign to win over Mark was a left-handed success, for HE had won HER!

THE END

11 Later Mrs. Mark Willows explains the whole bewildering climax at the church. "You see, darling, all of a sudden I realised that Randy had fallen for Sally. And that made me realise that you were not only the best man at that wedding, but for me the better man."

Showing how the American type uniflow engine operates on noncondensing principle. Legends below are keyed by number to pictures above.

FIG. 1—Head end: Admission is taking place on dead center. Frame end: Exhaust thru central exhaust ports is being accomplished. Auxiliary exhaust valve still closed.

FIG. 2—Head end: Poppet admission valve fully open. Frame end: Central exhaust ports about to be closed by piston. (It is important to note that at this point auxiliary exhaust valve at frame end is about to open. This opening is thus accomplished when steam has exhausted from cylinder, and when there is exhaust pressure on both sides of valve. Valve opens under no difference in pressure.)

FIG. 3—Head end: Closing of admission valve, beginning of expansion. Frame end: Auxiliary exhaust valve open; trapped vapor between piston and auxiliary exhaust port escapes thru this port.

FIG. 4—Head end: Continuation of expansion. Frame end: Piston has crossed auxiliary exhaust port and compression has commenced. Compression, instead of starting as soon as piston has crossed central exhaust port, has been delayed, which allows engine to operate noncondensing with small clearances. Auxiliary exhaust valve still open, but compression has nevertheless begun, because piston itself now controls this port. Auxiliary exhaust valve does not close until piston has nearly reached end of stroke. Hence valve closes with exhaust pressure on both sides of it.

FIG. 5—Head end: Beginning of exhaust thru central exhaust ports. Frame end: Continuation of compression. (Note that frame end auxiliary exhaust valve is about to close. It will remain closed during entire expansion stroke and will open only when expanded steam has been exhausted thru central exhaust ports.)

New Type Reciprocating Steam Engine—Uniflow

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

MANY and varied are the types of reciprocating steam engines, but what is contended by its makers to be the one incorporating the greatest number of original and advanced features is the uniflow poppet valve type perfected in America principally for operation on the noncondensing principle.

The term uniflow, or unaflow, is a descriptive one. It means that steam in the engine's cylinder flows in one direction only, and does not reverse, as is the case in counterflow operation. The uniflow principle has for its object the elimination of one of the greatest losses in reciprocating engines—initial condensation.

With the uniflow engine the steam enters the cylinder at the ends, and, after it is cut off and its expansion has taken place, it is exhausted thru ports arranged around the center of the cylinder, which are uncovered by the piston at the end of its stroke. The steam consequently flows in only one way. Engineers call this unidirectional flow.

In the counterflow, or earlier type of engine, which now is said to have been supplanted almost entirely by the uniflow, the steam returns on its path at the end of the stroke, and is exhausted at the same end of the cylinder at which it entered. By this method the cold expanded steam of considerable volume washes the cylinder walls and cylinder head during from 50 to 75 per cent of the return stroke, thus cooling these parts to such an extent that the boiler steam, when it is readmitted, is cooled or condensed by coming in contact with the head and clearance spaces of the cylinder, which have been cooled by the expanded exhaust steam.

Initial condensation occurs as the result of this cooling effect. In the uniflow engine initial condensation is almost entirely eliminated, since the ends of the cylinder remain hot while the center or exhaust belt stays cool.

• • •

This uneconomical heat exchange is found in any single valve counterflow engine. To overcome this defect successive expansion stages have been resorted to, as in the compound, the triple expansion, and the quadruple expansion engines. Superheating also has been employed to lessen the uneconomical heat exchange. To obtain greatest economy steam should be released from the cylinder at the instant it reaches its limit of expansion, but in the conventional type of counterflow engine it is held in the cylinder for the longest time possible, by reversing its flow from the direction it had on entering and sweeping it back across the length of the cylinder.

The cold expanded steam in the uniflow engine exhausts immediately thru ports located around the center of the cylinder, which are uncovered by the piston at the end of its working stroke. Thus, by avoiding the cooling of all clearance surfaces, in the design of the cylinder itself, it is possible to obtain in a single cylinder as many expansions, with equal or better economy obtained in any compound or triple expansion engine.

In Europe, where the uniflow idea originated, virtually all steam plants operate on the condensing principle, and in the typical European uniflow engine compression begins as soon as the piston covers the central exhaust ports on its return stroke. Compression takes place, therefore, during 90 per cent of the stroke, which, even with small clearances, does not mount above the initial pressure so long as the engine is operated on the condensing principle with a fairly good vacuum. If the vacuum should break, causing the engine to operate on the noncondensing principle, compression would be excessive. To guard against this, large additional clearances are provided at each end of the cylinder, controled by manually operated valves which relieve the pressure of excessive compression. The engine when operated on the noncondensing principle would not be economical because of the additional clearance. This, however, is not important from the European standpoint, as the uniflow engine developed in Europe is not expected to be used in noncondensing service.

To meet American needs, where at least 90 per cent of the steam engines installed are operated on the noncondensing principle, the European uniflow engine had to be modified considerably. It was realized in this country that if the uniflow engine was to duplicate here the quick and universal adoption which it had received abroad some means would have to be found for noncondensing operation without addition of clearance and without destroying the thermal advantages of the uniflow principle.

The result was the adoption of the expedient of delaying the compression by placing auxiliary exhaust valves at that point in the uniflow cylinder where it is usual to begin compression in a noncondensing counterflow engine. In this design of cylinder, which is shown in operation in five successive illustrations on this page, the uniflow principle is not destroyed, nor is its effect in any way vitiated, since the volume of expanded steam ready for exhaust is still emptied from the cylinder thru the central exhaust ports, and only the vapor at exhaust pressure remaining in the cylinder between the central exhaust ports and the auxiliary ports is removed thru the auxiliary ports.

Since the terms condensing and noncondensing have been used freely in this article, it might be well to briefly clarify them. Condensing engines, in the simplest of explanations, are those in which the steam, after exhausting from the cylinder, is condensed in a separate condenser, thus largely obviating back pressure due to atmospheric pressure, and incidentally saving most of the water. Noncondensing engines, on the other hand, are those in which the steam is exhausted directly into the air.

Poppet valves of the double beat type are employed in the American uniflow engine principally because, by experiments, it has been found that they can be made leakproof. Valves of this description, when care is taken, can be made absolutely steamtight for a certain pressure and temperature condition, but they will leak if this condition changes. The leakage, however, is said never to be as great as with piston valves, pressure plate valves, and other types.

The American design uniflow engine is adaptable to numerous purposes. In horizontal form it has been found especially suitable for electric power plants, collieries, laundries, newspaper plants, manufactories of various kinds, and public institutions. In the vertical type, designed for use where floor space is limited, it has been particularly suitable for cold storage plants, breweries, paper mills, and similar requirements. Adapted for marine use, it has proved highly successful in ferry boats and floating suction dredges.

• • •

The newly commissioned City of Midland, the streamlined car and automobile ferry which is the pride of the Pere Marquette railway's Lake Michigan ferry fleet, is equipped with two vertical type uniflow engines of 3,000 horsepower rating each, designed together to carry a combined overload rating of 7,000 shaft horsepower at 125 revolutions a minute. Each of these engines is a simple five-cylinder direct connected unit of 25 inch bore and 30 inch stroke, designed to operate on 325 pounds gauge pressure, 640 degrees Fahrenheit total steam temperature, and 26 inch vacuum.

"An unusually flat steam rate curve is characteristic of these engines," say their manufacturers, "from below half speed to above full speed. This is obtained by use of the simple uniflow cycle, combined with steam-tight poppet inlet valves and cutoff control. This permits running the engines at full speeds with the throttle wide open. The speed is reduced by shortening the cutoff, and increased by lengthening the cutoff, thus maintaining full throttle pressure in all the cylinders under all load conditions. The engines can be stopped, started, and reversed with the throttle wide open. With the short cutoff characteristic of the uniflow cycle, full expansion to a pressure only slightly above the condenser vacuum is obtained."

Why Scotty Is Highly Favored

SCOTLAND has provided us with four distinctive terrier breeds—the Cairn, Skye, West Highland White, and Scotty. Of this quartet the dour little Scotch terrier has won more friends in this country than any of the others. A compact, hardy little dog, full of courage, devoted, and an ideal playmate, the Scotty is today one of America's favorite breeds, one that fits well in the average home and adapts itself to modern life. It weighs around 18 or 20 pounds and is classified in that group of breeds known as handy sized.

In this same classification you find the cocker spaniel, Boston terrier, the wire-haired terrier, and others of medium size and weight. The little Scotty with his underslung chassis, well modeled head, and small ears offers plenty of competition to these popular breeds. He's a fashionable breed, and tribute is paid to his character and distinctive appearance in many ways. You see pictures of Scottish terriers on greeting cards. He adorns glassware, book ends, neckties, and other products.

To walk down any city street or stroll thru a park is to see other evidence of the popularity of this breed. And as a rule you see this low-slung little terrier trotting along, full of confidence and poise and apparently minding his own business. You have the feeling that he knows what it's all about. He gives you the impression of having plenty to think about.

The Scottish terrier comes by his courage honestly. For many decades he was bred as a rugged working terrier—a hard-fighting little vermin killer that didn't mind tackling his weight in anything that walked on four feet. As is the case with most of our working terriers, the Scotty doesn't get much of a chance these days to use these working qualities. This is especially true of the Scotties kept in cities. But give this sturdy terrier a chance and he can become a real ratter, eager to kill. Yet with his human family he's gentle and affectionate, a good guard, and as a rule not a tramp dog.

We like to glance over old dog books for their appraisals of some of our modern breeds, because in these volumes we find much space devoted to the working qualities of dogs like the Scottish terrier, Cairn, wire-haired terrier, and others. For example, here is the way Stonehenge paid tribute (in 1887) to the game qualities of the Scotty:

"As a dead-game animal the Scotch terrier is not to be surpassed by any animal except bulls or bull terriers. . . . Pound for pound there is no dog but a bull terrier that can beat the hard-haired Scotty, by far. His intelligence and love of home, his pluck and docility, and affection for his master, should make him a favorite with all who want a varmint dog; and nobody who once gets a good one, of the right style and stamp, will care to let him go."

• • •

After reading this tribute to the Scottish terrier it's apparent that the breed had a real reputation as a handy vermin killer on a farm or estate. The picture of a Scotty which accompanied this description of the breed shows a hard-coated terrier much like our modern Scotty, yet not nearly as symmetrical or good looking as the compact dog that we have today.

The only fault of the average Scottish terrier that you find being kept as a pet in homes today is one for which he isn't responsible. The point is that most owners of Scotties do not keep their dogs well groomed and their pets appear with only about 30 per cent of their good looks visible to the eye. These dogs are not trimmed regularly, so they're covered with a woolly coat that does the Scotty an injustice.

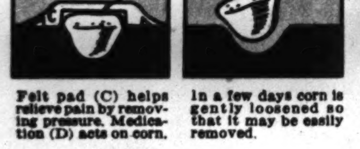
The breed needs to have its coat stripped occasionally if it is to make a pleasing appearance, an obligation of the owner that all too often is ignored. In giving a Scotty a hair trim the idea is to remove the hair from its head until it has a very close trim. But one must leave considerable eyebrows. A good stripping job also accentuates the whiskers of a Scotty. The front legs are not trimmed, only combed out.

This miniature poodle, Champion Blue Streak of Eathorpe Mansard, is owned by Mr. and Mrs. C. Cavanee. It was photographed just after it won best of breed in a recent dog show.

Walk away your CORNS!

Felt pad (C) helps relieve pain by removing pressure. Medication (D) acts on corn.

In a few days corn is gently loosened so that it may be easily removed.



OLD-FASHIONED home paring of corns just affects the top—usually leaves part of the corn still in your toe as a focal point for renewed development. But the sensible Blue-Jay treatment does more! It actually helps relieve pain—remove corns while you walk in comfort. Here's how: Felt pad (C) helps relieve pain by lifting off pressure. Blue-Jay medication (D) gently loosens the corn till in a few days it may be easily removed, including the pain-producing "core"! (Stubborn cases may require more than one application.)

Blue-Jay costs very little—only a few cents to treat each corn—at all drug counters.

Where to Go for Good Advice

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.
Managing Editor, Popular Photography Magazine

IF YOUR pictures are not all that you would like them to be you probably have been asking yourself what might be causing your troubles. But it is obviously insufficient to ask yourself, for if you knew all the answers you wouldn't be making mistakes. Ask those who know.

Plenty of sound and valuable advice can be given in articles such as this, but it doesn't always help solve some very individual problem. Foremost among sources of information for specific purposes is your photo dealer or photo finisher. Show him the negatives he developed and the prints he made for you and ask him to explain the probable causes of your failures.

You will not find this class of service everywhere, but most photo dealers and clerks in camera stores are well enough versed in photography to give you the information you want.

You must be reasonable of course in the kind and amount of advice you can expect from your dealer. Don't try to take up hours of his time especially when there are other customers waiting. And don't expect him to give you a complete course of instruction.

The type of information he can give you is usually limited to criticizing your pictures from a purely technical point of view. He can tell you whether they are overexposed or underexposed, whether you moved your camera, used too slow a shutter speed, made the mistake of shooting directly into the light, fogged your film when loading the camera, and the like. To the beginner in photography this type of information is invaluable.

But when it comes to analyzing your pictures from an artistic point of view you had better turn to other sources. Aside from asking good photographers whom you happen to know, you can avail yourself of established services in this field. These services are offered by two sources—the photographic magazines and camera clubs.

There are about half a dozen photographic magazines rendering print criticism service, either in print or by mail. While they will criticize your pictures free of charge, their time and space are limited, so that you may have to wait quite a while before obtaining their opinion on your picture.

For gaining all-around information and advice your best bet is to join a camera club. The purpose of these clubs is to aid their members in taking better pictures, and this purpose is accomplished by analyzing the pictures of members, by competitions among club members, and by outright courses of instruction which many clubs offer.

Membership dues in most camera clubs are modest. And they are usually worth it, especially if you are a beginner who does not want to invest considerable money in furnishing a darkroom of your own, buying enlargers, printers, and other equipment.

Before you sign up with a club take a good look at your prospective fellow members and the facilities offered. If the club seems to be merely a debating society dominated by a few members who love to hear themselves speak, don't waste your time and money on it. Instead find a club that offers real services and tries to be of actual aid to its members.

What you should do depends on just how strongly interested you are in photography. Mere snapshooting is simple enough so that you can get many a good picture without devoting too much effort to really learning something about your hobby. On the other hand, it's obvious that the more you know the better your pictures will be, and some day you will be sure of your results long before your film has been developed.

NEW EQUIPMENT

For names of manufacturers who produce these items send stamped, self-addressed envelope to "Know Your Camera," Equipment Review Department, care Graphic Section, The Chicago Tribune. Be sure to mention serial number of item.

253 Ultraspeed photography is becoming less expensive. A new synchronized speed lamp that gives exposures of 1/30,000 sec. costs $120. This may sound expensive, but the lamp is good for more than 5,000 flashes, which brings down the price per shot to a few cents.

254 Gadget bags are becoming more popular all the time, because it is simpler to pack films, lens shade, filters, exposure meter, and other accessories in one bag with the camera than to stuff them in your pockets. A new gadget bag of this type just appeared at a very reasonable price.

255 Development of cut film and film packs in daylight tanks offers the same convenience as tank development of roll film. A new adjustable cut film tank accommodating 24 films costs $3.50, the reel alone $2.

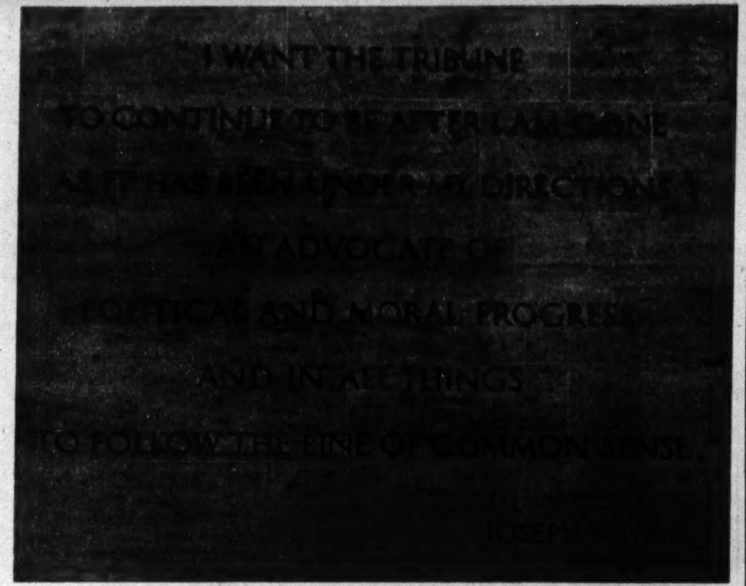
THE HALL OF INSCRIPTIONS IN TRIBUNE TOWER



IN ONE of the letters to his family in the last years of his life Joseph Medill, editor of The Chicago Tribune, wrote the lines that are reproduced here from an inscription in the Hall of Inscriptions of Tribune Tower.

In these words was left an ideal to which The Tribune for more than 42 years has striven to be faithful.

Joseph Medill was a man of sturdy common sense, a genius, and a patriot. For 44 years his was the guiding mind of The Tribune.

He was born in a small village near the present site of St. Johns, N. B., April 6, 1823. His father had come to America four years previously and settled in what he believed to be a part of the United States but which subsequently was awarded to Canada by the treaty of 1842. When Joseph Medill was 9 years old he moved with his family to Stark county, Ohio. Here as a boy he attended district school and an academy. Altho family finances would not permit his entering a college, he was not discouraged. He educated himself in law and at the age of 23 was admitted to the bar, soon afterward forming a partnership with George W. McIlvaine (later chief justice of Ohio) in New Philadelphia, O.

In 1849 Medill abandoned the profession of law to become a newspaper man. He purchased the Coshocton Whig of Coshocton, O., changed its name to the Republican, and engaged his three younger brothers as his assistants. The Republican under his editorship became an influential medium in the fight against slavery, but after operating it for two years Medill sought a larger field for his talents. He founded the Daily Forest City in Cleveland, O., which, after consolidation with another newspaper, he renamed the Cleveland Leader.

In 1854 Medill came to Chicago and with Dr. Charles Ray of Galena, Ill., bought a controlling interest in The Tribune. Four years later this newspaper absorbed the Democratic Press, acquiring with it William Bross and John Locke Scripps. For two years the paper was known as the Press and Tribune, after which it reverted to its original name, The Chicago Tribune. In 1863 Dr. Ray sold his interest in the paper and Joseph Medill became editor in chief.

Thruout the Civil war Medill and The Tribune stanchly supported President Lincoln and the Union cause. In 1870 Medill was elected to the Illinois constitutional convention, and the next year he was made a member of the first United States civil service commission and elected mayor of Chicago. In the last-named post, which he held until 1873, it was his wise financial policy that enabled Chicago to rise from the ashes of the great fire of 1871. Two Presidents, Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison, offered him places in their cabinets, but he preferred to remain a newspaper editor. He was principally responsible for the formation of the Western Associated Press, a forerunner of the present Associated Press, and it was he who installed the first steam press and the first copper-faced type in an Illinois newspaper.

Altho for several years before his death he had delegated active management of The Tribune to younger men, he continued up to his last day to have a decisive voice in matters of Tribune policy. Joseph Medill died in San Antonio, Tex., March 16, 1899.

Another inscription from the Hall of Inscriptions will be reproduced and discussed in an early issue.

convened. It was headed by Maj. Gen. Robert Howe of North Carolina. Arnold appeared without counsel and cleverly and eloquently pleaded his own case. The verdict virtually acquitted the defendant of all intentional wrong, but it directed that Washington, as commander in chief of the army, reprimand Arnold for two trivial offenses. Arnold's popularity was restored when the verdict of the court martial was made public.

It was during the delay occasioned by the slowness of the court in convening that Arnold, vexed by the whole business, entered into secret correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, with the aim of joining the British service. Clinton in his headquarters in New York in the spring of 1779 received a letter from Philadelphia bearing the signature "Gustavus." The writer of this letter stated that he could procure information of importance to the British and would like to communicate it to them. Directions for replying were elaborately explained.

Clinton turned the communication over to Major John André, deputy adjutant general of the British army in America and his close personal friend. The hand of fate is seen in the detailing to André the task of answering the letter from the mysterious Gustavus. André had known Peggy Shippen in Philadelphia.

In replying to the Philadelphia correspondent André represented himself as "John Anderson," a New York merchant. Correspondence between the two continued for more than a year, Clinton in this manner receiving considerable secret information of importance. Some of it was of such nature that the British general and Major André at last concluded that it could have come from no one but Arnold.

• • •

André wrote Mrs. Arnold, asking if she still remembered him, paid her several fine compliments, and offered to purchase dress goods and the like for her in New York. This kindly offer concluded:

"I shall be glad to . . . render you in these trifles services from which I hope you would infer a zeal to be further employed."

Arnold must have read betweeen the lines that Clinton and André had identified him as the mysterious Gustavus and that they were now ready to bargain with him for further treachery.

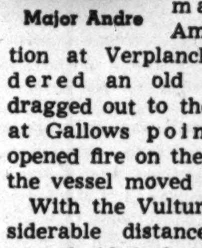
The plot at this point began to race toward its unexpected conclusion. Arnold persuaded Washington to place him in command of the West Point fortress, key to the Hudson valley. This was in August, 1780. It is accepted by most historians that Arnold maneuvered the transfer in order to place himself in a position more valuable to the British than had been his position in Philadelphia. Located on the west bank of the Hudson river about 50 miles north of New York, West Point was a stoutly fortified post held by a garrison of about 3,000.

After Arnold arrived at West Point he made a direct offer to the British to surrender the fortress and troops for a high position in the British army and a substantial sum of money. Finally, after a further exchange of letters between "John Anderson," the merchant, and "Gustavus," it was arranged for André, still masquerading as Anderson, to sail up the river to meet the traitor. The old British sloop Vulture, under the command of Lieut. Andrew Sutherland, was anchored off Teller's point, 17 miles below West Point, on Thursday, Sept. 21. Aboard it were Major André and Col. Beverley Robinson, the last named an officer of American troops in British service and the owner of the house near West Point that Arnold was using as his headquarters.

These two British officers expected a signal from shore, and Arnold, who was waiting on the river bank, expected André to come ashore under a flag of truce. There had been a misunderstanding of the plans, however, and nothing happened.

Darkness fell, and still no meeting had taken place. Arnold could stand the suspense no longer. He sent Joshua Smith, a farmer of the neighborhood, out to the Vulture in a boat. Smith, a questionable character suspected of being in the pay of both the Americans and the British, reached the vessel just before midnight. André had gone to bed, but he got up and dressed and accompanied Smith to shore.

André, wearing his army uniform under a civilian greatcoat, found Arnold waiting in a wood near the shore. The two conferred until after dawn. Smith then refused to carry André back to the Vulture in daylight. In an upstairs room at Smith's the final negotiations were completed. Arnold handed over to the British officer the plans of the West Point fortress, for which he was to get in return a British major general's commission and the sum of £10,000. He helped André secrete the plans in his stockings. (Ten thousand pounds in those days represented a fortune, as the buying power of a pound—now worth $4.03—was far greater than it is today.)



Major Andre

Everything might have turned out to suit the conspirators had not Col. James Livingston, in command of the American position at Verplanck's point, ordered an old four-pounder dragged out to the promontory at Gallows point. The gun opened fire on the Vulture, and the vessel moved out of range.

With the Vulture now a considerable distance away, it was decided that André could not be put aboard it by means of Smith's boat. During the night Smith and André crossed the river. After riding with André for some distance the farmer refused to go farther. He wheeled his horse and turned back, while André rode on alone. It was daylight now.

Just north of Tarrytown André was halted by a man with a musket. Two others near the road rushed down to him. These three were not actually American soldiers, altho they had been active in the war in the rôles of bushwhackers. It has been suggested that they probably intended to rob André and let him go on his way, but when he became confused and tried to bribe them with a promise of a thousand pounds they realized that they had seized a person of importance. Searching his stockings, they found the incriminating papers. These, however, they were unable to read. The papers appeared to have military value, so they took them, along with their prisoner, to White Plains.

We may as well drop Major André here, with a sentence as to his fate. He was hanged as a spy at Tappan on Oct. 2.

• • •

Arnold was at breakfast at his quarters across the river from West Point on the morning of Sept. 25 when a messenger rode in with the word that a British spy had been taken with plans of the fortress in his possession. As yet Arnold had not been identified with the plot.

The traitor quickly understood that it was his move. He excused himself, rose from the table, walked to a door, and ordered a horse to be saddled for him at once. Then he went upstairs to his wife's bedroom and sent for her. He told her his story in few words. She fainted in his arms. He placed her upon a bed, by the side of which stood a crib with their child in it. Then he hurried from the house.

Mounting his horse, he rode at a gallop to the bank of the river, where his barge was moored. Shouting to his bargemen, he flung himself aboard and admonished the men at the oars to row swiftly. He ordered the coxswain to steer for the British sloop down the river.

Hardly had Arnold departed when General Washington, Marquis Lafayette, Col. Alexander Hamilton, and others of the commander in chief's staff appeared on the scene. Col. John Lamb informed them that General Arnold had departed suddenly a short time before. A messenger soon arrived at the headquarters of the fortress with the papers that had been taken from André, and after glancing at them Colonel Hamilton understood at once. He threw himself upon a horse and rode furiously down the road along the river in the hope of intercepting the fleeing traitor. But Arnold got away.

Once aboard the Vulture, Arnold wrote a letter to Washington, trying to explain his act as one inspired by his love for his country, denying that his intimates at West Point, including Farmer Smith, had been involved in the plot, and begging his commander in chief to extend his protection to Mrs. Arnold, whom he exonerated of all guilt in the conspiracy.

That is about all there is to the story of Arnold's treasonable act. Because the plot failed, he did not obtain the full reward offered. Instead of obtaining a major general's commission in the British regular army, he was made a brigadier general of provincial auxiliaries. Instead of receiving £10,000, he was given a little more than £6,000. He was employed in an expedition that burned Richmond, Va., and in an attack on New London, Conn. In December, 1781, he went to London. It was in that city on June 14, 1801, that the first "Union Now" man died.

...and probably there never has been a time in this country's history when a good day's work by everybody, every day, was so important as it is right now.

Then give yourself something to work on! — a good, nourishing breakfast to help you keep going clear through the morning. And there you have an accurate description of a "Breakfast of Champions", the kind of breakfast you can count on because it gives you all the varied nourishment of milk, fruit and choice whole wheat.

Yes, Wheaties are whole wheat, guaranteed by General Mills to provide in full grain amounts every food value of known importance that nature stores in the whole wheat berry. Including all of whole wheat's "go" vitamin B_1. For this reason, Wheaties are accepted as a preferred wheat cereal by the Council on Foods of the American Medical Association. A preferred cereal — that's what you want for your family, isn't it?

Extra dividend! Nourishment is only half the Wheaties story. These toasted flakes of choice whole wheat have a flavor that is very, very satisfying. Eat some for breakfast tomorrow and you will understand why Wheaties have become America's favorite whole wheat flakes.

This "GO" Vitamin! If you could call one vitamin the National Preparedness Vitamin, it would probably be B_1. This "GO" vitamin helps make the wheels go around, has a direct effect on the nervous system, on endurance and good performance.

For more B_1, eat Wheaties. This champion cereal is guaranteed to give you all the plentiful vitamin B_1 (Thiamin), all the vitamin G, all the minerals (iron, phosphorus) naturally present in whole wheat. Thus Wheaties are accepted by the Council on Foods of the American Medical Association as a preferred wheat cereal, a good food made better than ever, and at no added cost to you.

Joan Bennett tells how to be slim...

and serve food that everyone enjoys

Famous movie star, Joan Bennett, now featured in the Columbia Picture, "She Knew All the Answers" keeps her weight the same the year 'round without strenuous exercises or drastic diet.

To get Ry-Krisp plan which permits any normal overweight person to lose about 7 pounds a month, just send 1¢ postcard for

Free Reducing Booklet

Simply state if plan is for man or woman. Address Ry-Krisp, 745 E Checkerboard Square, St. Louis, Mo.

Miss Bennett's evening coat is black velvet with blocked turquoise blue.
J. Magnin, Los Angeles.

"Movie stars must watch their figures and they must keep fit, too! That's why I like Ry-Krisp. Following the plan in the Ry-Krisp reducing booklet,* you can choose foods that keep your energy up and plan low-calorie meals that even a husband will rave about. A swim or brisk walk, regularly, helps your muscles stay firm. And, of course, eating Ry-Krisp as bread is important in reducing because each delicious wafer has only 23 calories."

Joan Bennett

Ry-Krisp, Big Hit with Men at Joan's Hollywood Parties

"I knew the women would be glad I served Ry-Krisp," says Miss Bennett, "because most of them were movie stars and this crisp bread is part of their figure-control regime. But I had no idea Ry-Krisp would be such a hit with men. Come to think of it, though, Ry-Krisp is just like Swedish hard rye bread, only better! It has that good rye flavor men like!"

If you haven't tried Ry-Krisp lately, you're in for a grand surprise! The new wafers are extra crisp, finer in texture, more delicious than ever... and each wafer is scored so that it breaks easily into two little squares. Just the right size for appetizers.

Try Ry-Krisp... with soups, salads, cheese, fruit juices. Enjoy it as an every-meal bread. Remember, Ry-Krisp is as wholesome as it is delicious... supplies vitamin B_1, helps to keep you "regular."

Try these 3 Cheese Appetizers! 1. Cut Kraft's American or similar cheese with cookie cutters. 2. Form soft cheese into shape of carrot, roll in grated carrot. 3. Stuff hard-cooked egg with mixture of yolk, cream cheese, mayonnaise, seasonings; add carrot slice and green pepper strip for sailboat effect. Serve with Ry-Krisp wafers. (Photo shows individual serving from appetizer tray.)

Enjoy Delicious Ry-Krisp as bread at every meal

I'VE GOT TO GET SOME SLEEP, AND I CAN GET IT BY USING MY HEAD
MY HOOK IS BARE-- I DIDN'T PUT ANY BAIT ON IT--NOW FOR A GOOD SNOOZE
ZZzz
POOR PA-HIS BAIT IS GONE--I'LL PUT A NICE FAT WORM ON IT FOR HIM
WHAT THA?
HE'S BEEN BATTLING THAT FISH FOR TWO HOURS--
AND HE HASN'T LICKED HIM YET-

REGGIE, DISAPPOINTED BECAUSE THE COACH MADE STREAKY FIRST STRING PITCHER ON THE MIDVILLE TEAM, PAYS BILLY HILL—A SEMI-PRO CATCHER—TO EMBARRASS STREAKY AND CAUSE HIM TO LOSE HIS PITCHING POST. JEANIE, SUSPICIOUS OF BILLY'S ACTIONS, DECIDES TO INVESTIGATE IN HER OWN WAY. SHE DOESN'T TELL STREAKY BECAUSE SHE FEARS HER SUSPICIONS MAY BE GROUNDLESS......
STREAKY, I WANT TO HAVE A WORD WITH YOU, SON—
I'VE JUST WATCHED YOU STRIKE OUT FOUR OF YOUR TEAM-MATES IN A ROW IN THIS PRACTICE SESSION. NOW WHAT I WANT TO KNOW IS— WHY DON'T YOU DO THAT IN THE REAL GAMES—HOW COME, EVERY GAME WE'VE PLAYED LATELY, THE OPPOSING BATTERS SLAM EVERY BALL YOU PITCH TO THEM—?
GOSH COACH, I DON'T KNOW—I'VE TRIED—I ABIDE STRICTLY BY BILLY HILL'S SIGNALS, AND HE'S WATCHED ALL THE TEAMS BEST BATTERS—HE'S SUPPOSED TO KNOW WHAT KIND OF PITCHING FOOLS EACH ONE—BUT THEY KEEP HITTING ME ANYWAY—

WHY, NO, STREAKY—JEANIE ISN'T HOME. SHE WENT WALKING WITH THAT BILLY HILL BOY—SHE SEEMS QUITE FOND OF HIM—HE IS AMUSING, ISN'T HE?

THE STARS AND STRIPES WAS FIRST CARRIED INTO ACTION IN THE BATTLE OF BRANDYWINE IN SEPTEMBER, 1777, ON JUNE 14, 1777, CONGRESS RESOLVED THAT THE FLAG OF THE UNITED STATES BE 13 STRIPES, ALTERNATE RED AND WHITE, AND THAT THE UNION BE 13 STARS, WHITE ON A BLUE FIELD. SINCE THEN A STAR HAS BEEN ADDED FOR EACH STATE ADMITTED TO THE UNION, BUT THE 13 STRIPES STILL SYMBOLIZE THE ORIGINAL 13 COLONIES.

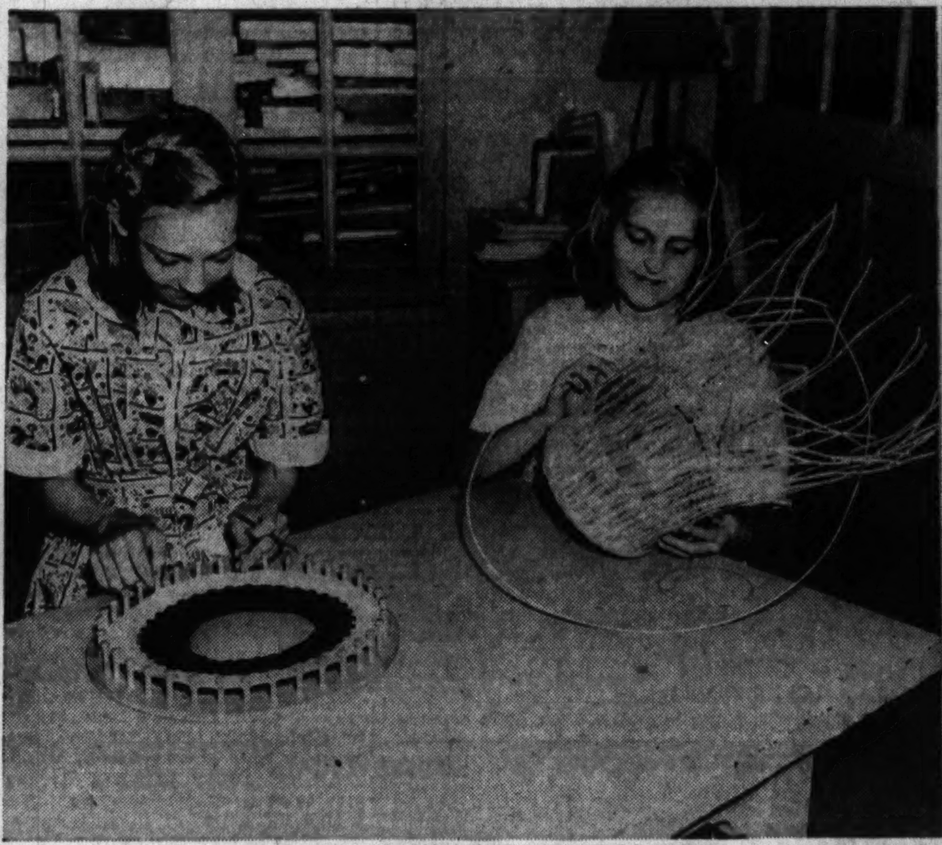
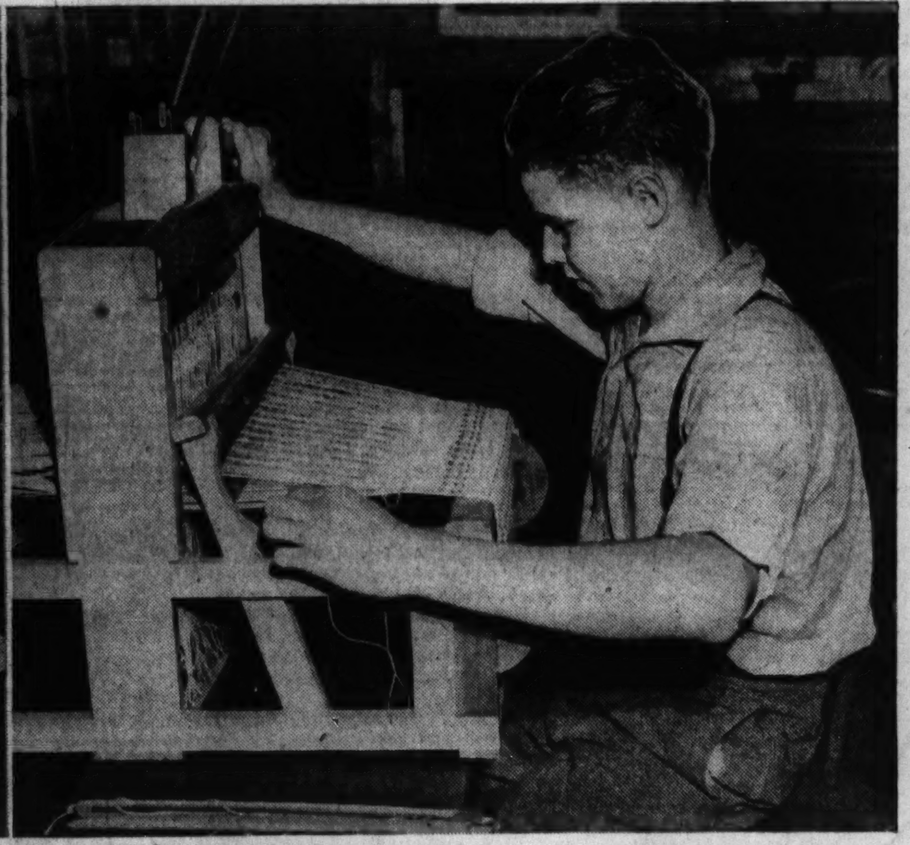
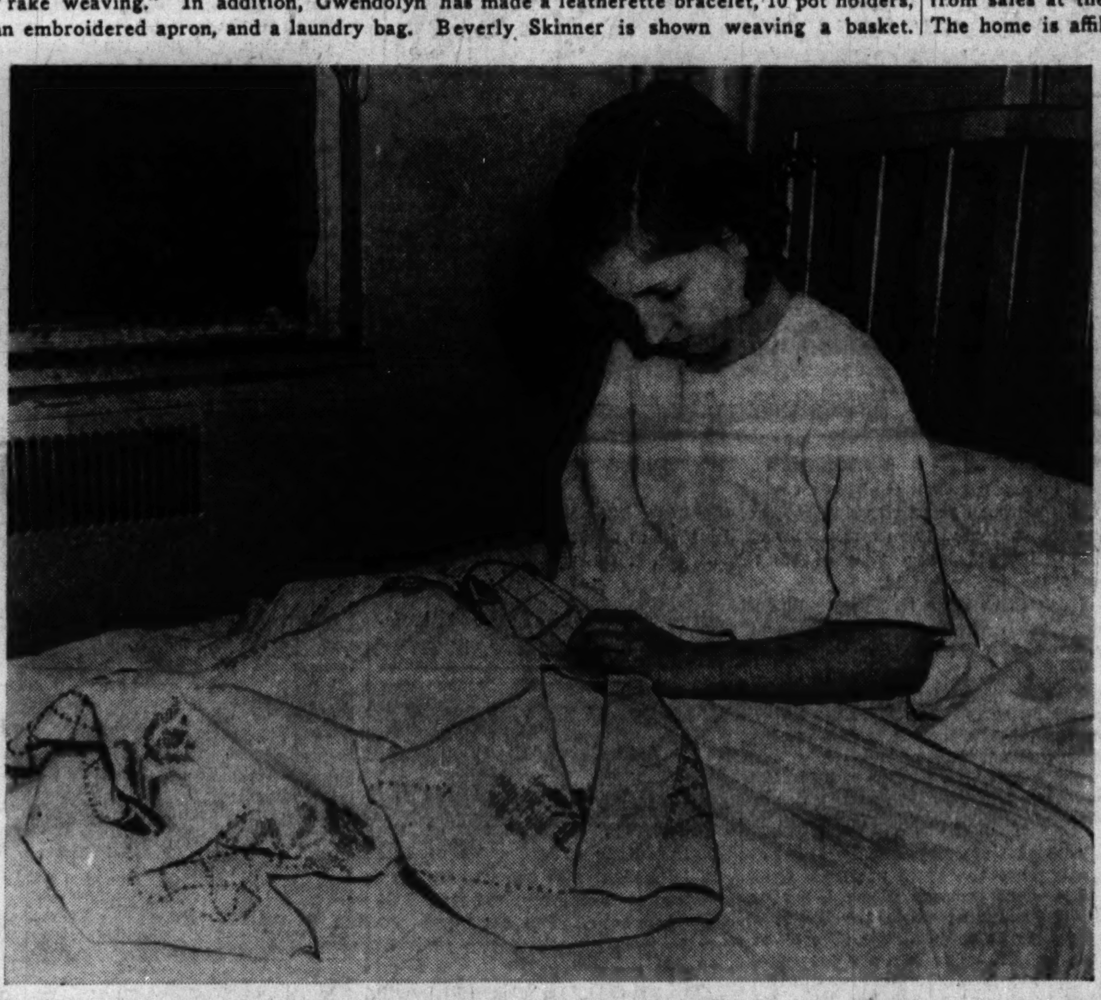
Young Patients Will Hold Exhibit and Sale of Their Handiwork





Patients in the Home for Crippled Children, 970 East 59th street, were busy last week putting the final touches on homemade articles to be exhibited at the annual bazar Wednesday. Gwendolyn Hutchison (left), for example, made a yarn stocking cap by "rake weaving." In addition, Gwendolyn has made a leatherette bracelet, 10 pot holders, an embroidered apron, and a laundry bag. Beverly Skinner is shown weaving a basket. She also has embroidered towels and made a purse and pot holders, tho she says she likes to make stocking caps best. Sitting at a small loom, making a table runner, is George Mansell, who is skilled at making rugs, woven belts, wallets, and leather purses. Proceeds from sales at the bazar will be used to defray expenses in the occupational therapy shop. The home is affiliated with the University of Chicago.



Joan Knuckles has become adept at embroidering table cloths without leaving her bed. She says she makes belts, towels, and "most everything." Sixty-five children in the home have fashioned more than 200 articles for the bazar, which will be open from 10 until 5 o'clock. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

WOODLAWN HOSPITAL JUNIORS TO PRESENT 4TH ANNUAL BANQUET

The junior auxiliary of the Woodlawn hospital will hold its fourth annual banquet on Thursday evening at Burton court, 1055 East 60th street. Mrs. Harry Scherubel, 639 East 79th street, is social chairman, and Miss Marian Du Lek, 6977 Anthony avenue, is president of the group.

Mrs. Harry Scherubel.

New officers will be elected at the meeting and the juniors will make their annual contribution to the senior auxiliary which maintains children's rooms at the hospital. Entertainment will be supplied by Miss Frances Schultz and Miss Suzanne Bohnen.

Among the guests will be Mrs. Walter Seymour, a representative of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. M. A. Andreen, president of the senior auxiliary, and Miss Grace De Vilbiss, superintendent of the hospital.

1,500 GARY TOTS TO HAVE HEALTH WEEK CHECKUPS

For the 12th time National Health week will be observed in Gary, starting tomorrow and continuing for five days. The program will be conducted by the Illinois Steel Company Welfare association's clinic in coöperation with the United States Children's bureau.

Nearly 1,500 children not yet 6 years old will receive physical examinations from attending physicians who provide instructions to the mothers in proper feeding and daily routine for the children. The attending physicians are volunteers who examine the children and refer them to family physicians when treatment is required.

Five U. of C. Savants to Match Wits with Youthful Quintet

The University of Chicago will call upon five of its most famous professors to uphold the institution's reputation Saturday afternoon in a quiz contest with five children. The program, scheduled to start at 3:30 o'clock in Mandel hall, will be the highlight of the annual Alumni day celebration for approximately 2,000 former students.

Van Dyke Tiers.

Pitted against the professors will be four boys and a girl who have made numerous appearances on the Quiz Kids radio program. The children, who average 12 years old, will be Gerard Darrow, Richard Williams, Van Dyke Tiers of Dolton, Joan Bishop and Jack Lucal. Van Dyke, a 13 year old junior at Thornton Township High school, is the farthest advanced scholastically.

Professors to Meet Champs.

Chosen to oppose the youngsters are Dr. Anton J. Carlson, a Frank P. Hixon distinguished service professor emeritus of physiology, holder of eight degrees, and a member of the National Academy of Sciences and National Research council; Dr. Harry S. Everett, extension professor and secretary of the department of mathematics who wrote his Ph. D. thesis on "Determinants Whose Elements Are Forms"; Dr. James L. Cate, dean of students in the division of humanities; Dr. Mary B. Gilson, chairman of the Illinois minimum wage commission for the laundry industry, and Dr. Arthur G. Bovee, author of 25 articles and 12 books in foreign languages. The professors' average age is 56 years.

Before the quiz program addresses will be given by President Robert Maynard Hutchins, and William V. Morgenstern, director of the alumni foundation.

Alumni Celebration.

The alumni school, usually held on the Quadrangles in June, has been combined this year with the 50th anniversary celebration in September. On Saturday alumni will attend events starting at 11:30 o'clock in the morning. At 12:30 the class of 1916 will have luncheon with the class of 1917 in the coffee shop, after which members will adjourn for an interclass baseball game.

The session in Mandell hall will feature the program in the afternoon. In the evening there will be a buffet supper, a special doctors of philosophy dinner, club reunions, a program by the University concert band, directed by Harold Bachman, the 31st annual interfraternity sing in Hutchinson court, and the formal induction of senior marshals and aides for next year. A dance in the Reynolds club will conclude the reunion program.

Currently most of the importnat offices are filled by Indians and there is an Indian majority on the board of directors. Half of the membership is Indian.

Has Scholarship Fund.

The group meets on the first Sunday afternoon of every month from October to May. The organization has an emergency fund to provide food, clothes, and employment for local Indians, and a scholarship fund for schools and summer camps. At Christmas clothes, toys, food, and candy are sent to children living on nearby reservations and to Indian children in Chicago.

Some of the south side Indians who are members of the organization are Lafayette M. Connor, a Chippewa who operates a barber and beauty shop at 1302 East 61st street; Harold Johns, a Winnebago who works at the United States Indian warehouse; Miss Edith Johns, 4645 Lake Park avenue, a Winnebago who practices as a trained nurse; Mrs. Anna Harris, 3259 West 66th street, the Sioux wife of a white airplane pilot; Peter Powlas of Midlothian, an Oneida who works in a garage, and George Smith, Cherokee student at George Williams college.

PLAN 11 MILLION OUTLAY TO STOP CANAL NUISANCE

Project to Require 2 Years Work.

Work is being rushed on the $11,633,427 expansion of facilities of the west and southwest side sewage treatment works, it was announced last week by Ross A. Woodhull, president of the sanitary district.

His announcement came soon after the United States Supreme court had refused the state's plea that it modify its 1930 decree to permit a temporary increase in the lake diversion flow thru the Illinois-Michigan waterway while the enlargement was being accomplished. It is estimated that the building program will require about two years.

Contracts already have been awarded for $4,494,427 of the work, or 39 per cent of the whole, Woodhull said. Most of the remainder of the project, to cost an estimated $7,139,000, or 61 per cent, will probably be let late next fall, he indicated.

Forecast Less Odor.

As the work progresses, there should be a gradual improvement in conditions along the waterway, where residents are suffering discomfort because of the odors given off by incompletely treated sewage. This problem became acute after the Supreme court decree cut the lake water diversion flow to 1,500 cubic feet per second. At one time it was as high as 10,000 cubic feet per second.

The state had asked the Supreme court to increase the 1,500 cubic feet per second minimum to an average of 4,500 cubic feet this year, and to an average of 5,750 cubic feet next year.

This additional flow, it was estimated, would be sufficient to dilute the partially treated sewage from the big west side plant at Pershing road and Central avenue enough to remove most of the objectionable odors. The only hope of attaining this end now lies in the plant enlargement now underway, engineers said.

Add Settling Tanks.

William H. Trinkaus, chief engineer for the district, outlined what is being done to augment present treatment facilities for the south and southwest side plants [which also treat sewage from Des Plaines valley towns as far north as Des Plaines].

Work now under contract will provide new final settling tanks in the southwest plant, immediately to the west of the west side plant, as well as additional sludge concentration tanks. Work soon to be let will add more settling tanks, additional aeration tanks, and a conduit line between the two plants.

Incompletely treated sewage is being discharged from the west side plant, Mr. Trinkaus said, because the Imhoff method of treatment is in use there. This method removes only about 50 per cent of putrescible matter from sewage.

Utilize Better Process.

Another widely used but comparatively new method, the activated sludge process, removes up to 90 per cent or more of the matter that causes bad odors. When the present enlargement program is completed, the west

Crisis in 'Glory Road,' Religious Pageant

"The Glory Road," a religious pageant, will be built around a scene like this when it is presented in the Metropolitan Community center, 4100 South Parkway, Tuesday evening. A. Bernard Moore (extreme right) as Satan, tempts Rose Woodfork, the wayward girl, with money as Clarence Johnson, the show's St. Peter, cries a warning. In the background Eula Cox, a successful pilgrim, has just been rewarded by Irene Tinsey, the "crowning angel." Mr. Moore is director of the pageant. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

DRIVER SCHOOLS CURB ACCIDENTS AMONG YOUTHS

Value of Courses Shown in AAA Report.

In the first year after the American Automobile association driver training program started in full swing, automobile accidents involving persons between the ages of 15 and 24 dropped 38 per cent. The rate is three times as great among nontrained young drivers as with those who have learned to drive thru the training programs.

These figures, gathered by the AAA, explain the rapid spread of such driving programs thruout public schools in this country. Five Chocagoland schools have instituted the program—high schools in Oak Park, Evanston, Glenbard, Waukegan, and Lockport. Every Cleveland high school has at least one practice car and one driving instructor. A driver training program was started in St. Louis this spring and other cities are adopting it.

Courses for Teachers.

Teachers are trained according to programs set up by the AAA and several courses for teachers are offered each summer. This year, training courses will be offered to instructors at summer sessions at the University of Pennsylvania, Iowa State, University of Texas, and the University of Washington.

The course as offered to students emphasizes correct driver attitude, development of necessary physical and mental abilities and knowledge, and actual practice.

The recommended course requires 20 clock hours of class study per semester, an average of two or three classes per week. Each student should spend 32 hours in a demonstration car with an instructor, eight of which should be spent in actual driving. The common practice is for four students to accompany the instructor in the demonstrator and take turns at the wheel.

Small Laboratory Fee.

Tests and textbooks are suggested by the AAA and in the Chicagoland area the Chicago Motor club has helped schools obtain this material, provided demonstrations, assisted in purchase of the demonstration car, and on occasion has loaned its own demonstrator.

Actual cost of the program for a student for a semester equals the cost of any other laboratory course. Since the practice cars average 3,000 to 4,000 miles per semester, the amount set aside for upkeep and insurance often may accumulate to cover the purchase of another car.

BLIND AND DEAF GIRL IS SOUTH SIDE'S HAPPIEST

Her Exceptional Talents Overcome Handicap.

One of the happiest girls on the south side is Geraldine Lawhorn, who is blind and deaf. Geraldine, a 24 year old Negress who has exceptional talent at piano playing and dramatic art, is nearing the end of her first year as a successful recitalist.

Geraldine has been blind since she was 10 years old and deaf for the last five years. Next to her parents, her closest companion today is Blondie, who is said to be the only dog in the United States trained to guide a blind-deaf person. Some of Geraldine's original dramatic readings are about Blondie.

Is Unusual Student.

At the Chicago Piano College and School of Fine Arts Geraldine is regarded as the school's most unusual student. Because of her poise, congeniality, and sense of humor, she also is the school's most popular student.

"I have never seen any one who had such normal mental balance, in addition to special talents," says Miss Helen Browne Freund, principal. Geraldine is studying at the school on a scholarship provided by the state.

Her teachers agree that her "receptivity" is remarkable. Each instructor communicates with her by tapping Geraldine's extended right palm in movements which correspond to the deaf mute finger language. For persons who don't know the deaf mute symbols she wears a white glove on which each joint of the hand is labeled with numbers and letters of the alphabet. A person may talk with her by touching letters.

Speaking Voice Inmproves.

Geraldine started studying dramatic art because Mrs. Lawhorn thought it was the best way to keep her from forgetting how to speak distinctly. Thru practice and constant correction by Miss Bessie Henderson, her teacher, she has actually improved her speaking voice. Miss Henderson says that by experience Geraldine has formed patterns in her mind which correspond to certain pitches. Thus she is able to follow her instructor's suggestions.

In her six public recitals this year she has given monologues and numerous sketches she created herself. A recent issue of Music News, a trade magazine, commented that she has "a great deal of talent in dramatic art."

After nine months of piano lessons Geraldine knows 12 compositions. Her teacher, Miss Evelyn Graham, says she learns much faster than the average student and has done the equivalent of three years' work since last September, tho she did not own a piano until a month ago.

Geraldine is enthusiastic about playing piano because "I enjoy the rhythm of my movements on the keyboard and the vibrations it sends into my fingers."

Loses Sight After Measles.

She lost her sight after an attack of the measles in childhood. Then, after two years at Marshall High school, her auditory nerves failed overnight. She was graduated, however, as the outstanding member of a high school class of 500 boys and girls, and won a scholarship to Columbia university for her short story writing ability. She took the course by correspondence, writing her stories in Braille. Now she owns a Braille typewriter and a Braille dictionary.

Blondie was given to Geraldine two years ago thru the effort of the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, auxiliary bishop of Chicago, and money donated by Marshall students. In getting acquainted with Blondie she says the most difficult job was convincing the dog that she was depending on it under all circumstances. At first Geraldine was afraid of the sounds of trucks and trains, which, she says, "have earthquaking vibrations."

Geraldine's leisure time is usually passed in sewing for the Red Cross, writing short stories, or romping in the park with Blondie. She also loves to dance and is escorted to social affairs by neighborhood boys. Her mother says that the girl is "really and truly happy." She lives at 6226 Indiana avenue.

Calvary Church.

The Rev. John Charles Yelton, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, 2309 East 80th street, will preach on "When He Comes" at 11 o'clock this morning and on "This Savior" at 7:45 o'clock this evening.

Dog Shares Road to Fame

EXPAND SEWAGE PLANTS TO HELP CURB NUISANCE

New Process Expected to Reduce Odors.

and southwest side plants will be giving complete activated sludge treatment to 99.5 per cent of all sewage originating in the jurisdiction of the sanitary district, Mr. Trinkaus said.

The switch from the Imhoff to the activated sludge principle was begun in 1930. The Imhoff method was decided upon for the west side plant when it was first planned in 1923 because the then new activated sludge method had never been tried on a large scale, and was protected by airtight patents, since expired, which would have required enormous royalty payments. Recent experimentation has demonstrated the superiorities of the activated sludge type of treatment, the engineer said.

Work to be done this year will enlarge the capacity of the southwest side works to 500,000,000 gallons of sewage a day. The construction to follow immediately will push that capacity up to 900,000,000 gallons a day, or more than sufficient to care for the anticipated needs of the west and southwest areas for years to come, the planners estimate.

Joliet Suffers Most.

Residents of Joliet and Lockport at present are the chief sufferers from the sewage problem along the deep waterway. Ever since the Supreme court decree reduced the lake diversion to 1,500 cubic feet per second at the end of 1938, sludge from the Chicago treatment plants has been collecting in the Brandon road pool in Joliet.

Here it remains indefinitely, because of the sluggish current, decaying and giving off miasmatic fumes that are particularly objectionable on warm days.

Most of this sludge will be removed when the new plant capacity is completed. Then, the engineers believe, the canal will gradually clean itself and within a few years the source of the odor will have disappeared.

Mr. Woodhull declared that Chicago is doing more than any other large city in the treatment of its sewage, on which $165,100,000 has already been spent. The sanitary district researchers are constantly striving for improvement in treatment methods, and have made noted progress, he said.

Expand Plants

This map shows the sanitary district's west and southwest side sewage treatment plants and the territories they serve. These plants' capacity are to be more than doubled in an $11,600,000 expansion program now being sped toward completion, which is expected to relieve pollution of the Illinois-Michigan canal.

WILSON COLLEGE CLASS OF 1936 TO HAVE REUNION

CRIPPLED YOUTH HOME TO HOLD HANDIWORK SALE

To Benefit Occupational Therapy Shop.

The handiwork of 65 residents of the Home for Destitue and Crippled Children, 970 East 59th street, will be exhibited between 10 and 5 o'clock Wednesday. The home is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Proceeds of the semi-annual bazar will go toward expenses of the hospital's occupational therapy shop.

More than 200 articles will be on sale. They will include knitted doll dresses, cowboy belts, model airplanes, leather purses, bill folds, belts, woven rugs, table runners, metal ash trays, cane baskets, stocking caps, and beadwork bracelets and necklaces.

Learn to Do Handiwork.

Tho the shop is not designed to give children a vocation, many boys and girls have continued their handiwork after leaving the hospital, according to Miss Lillian Spencer, head of the hospital's occupational therapy room.

"One little girl bedridden with a back ailment," she said, "learned to make silk purses so well that she earned $100 in a month after being discharged. Another patient, a boy who had paralysis, became proficient in leather work here and later set up a profitable gift shop while convalescing at home."

Average Stay is 3 Months.

The home is one of a few Chicago hospitals which care for free bed cases up to 21 years old. Most orthopedic patients in the 14 to 21 year old category must compete with adults for attention in free wards. The hospital accepts orthopedic cases between the ages of 6 and 21. The average stay is three months with a yearly turnover of about 350 patients.

Three instructors, two for grammar school and one for high school, are assigned to the hospital by the board of education. Children study during the morning hours and work in the occupational therapy room in the afternoon.

Mrs. Walter C. Biddle is chairman of the occupational therapy committee and Mrs. Alfred P. Plamondon is chairman of the board of managers of the hospital. Patients of Billings hospital also will contribute to the bazar.

NOW— more Chicago Tribune sales power for you —

EVERY DAY OF THE WEEK!

• The editorial qualities which build greatest interest among readers produce the best returns for advertisers.

On week days the Tribune delivers from 590,000 to 630,000 more total daily circulation than other Chicago daily newspapers. On Sundays it delivers from 270,000 to 730,000 more than delivered by other Chicago Sunday newspapers.

Right in metropolitan Chicago, Tribune net paid daily circulation is 450,000 more than delivered by other Chicago daily newspapers—more than any two other Chicago daily newspapers combined.

On Sundays, the Tribune delivers in Chicago and suburbs from 385,000 to 460,000 more than other Chicago Sunday newspapers—more than the other two Chicago Sunday newspapers combined.

When You Can Have More, Why Take Less?

Every day you do without Tribune sales power, you pass up opportunities which easily can be yours. There is no need to pass them up when Tribune rates per 100,000 circulation are among the lowest in America.

Ask a Tribune representative or your advertising counsel to help you plan a program built around the Tribune which can help you get your share of the increased volume available in this market.

APRIL SET A NEW ALL TIME HIGH FOR THE MONTH IN TRIBUNE TOTAL NET PAID DAILY CIRCULATION!

Averaging well over 1,000,000 net paid, Chicago Tribune total daily circulation during April set a new all-time high for the month.

It was the eighth consecutive April to register a gain in Tribune net paid total daily circulation —an increase of more than 290,000 since April, 1933.

As higher industrial activity steps up the tempo of Chicago's trade, Tribune circulation growth delivers new slices of buying power for advertisers.

AUTOMOTIVE AND GROCERY PRODUCTS—For convenience items or for high-priced specialties, the results prove that you sell more when you build your Chicago sales drive around the Tribune. General grocery advertisers and automotive advertisers place more of their budgets in the Tribune than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

DEPARTMENT STORES—To maintain the store traffic and the sales volume which their huge establishments require, Chicago department stores place in the Tribune more of their advertising appropriations than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

TOTAL RETAIL—The Tribune is the medium on which this market is accustomed to base its buying. This is a fact proved by Chicago retailers who, whether they sell to men or to women, place in the Tribune more of their advertising budgets than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

GENERAL ADVERTISERS—When you use the Tribune you get balanced, market-wide coverage which penetrates into every neighborhood and suburb of Chicago. Recognizing this, general advertisers place in the Tribune more of their budgets than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

WOMEN'S APPAREL—Thru the Tribune, every day of the week, you reach Chicago's largest constant audience of women. Demonstrating this fact is the advertising practice of Chicago retailers who place in the Tribune more of their appropriations for women's apparel advertising than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

SHOWER STALL CAN FILL ODD NOOK IN MANY A HOME

Complete Unit Available for Easy Placing.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There need be nothing expensive—any more—about a shower stall installation in the home. Still less expensive is the shower over the tub. Showers can start at the bottom, in your basement, or at the top in your attic.

A shower has been called the great American institution, the nation's morning pickup. There is nothing really new about it, since an ancient Babylonian king modernized his palace some 5,000 years ago and installed a shower stall for his own use. His plumber was wise enough to insist on a waterproof floor with a drain made of clay tile, and it was built a trifle large—some 15 feet square—since slaves had to do the "showering." Servants instead of pipes sprayed water over the king in those by-gone days.

Wide Range of Prices.

New showers and stalls aren't limited to royalty or to the rich, for an everyday basement can have a stall. Nice, neat leakproof unit assemblies are on the market, in a wide range of prices. A shower can be installed over an existing bathtub without tearing out the walls, or one can take advantage, perhaps, of an unneeded closet and make it over into a shower and dressing room.

There are cabinets which are independent of the walls of a room and for this reason are especially fine for modernization work. And these cabinet shower stalls, whether de luxe or of inexpensive gavanized steel with duck curtains, are grand places to relax when the temperature soars and vacations are a long way off, or far in the past. They are spots of retreat for cooling comfort, any hour of the day or night.

Stalls Are Durable.

These modern stalls come tailored to fit almost any wall or corner and they are manufactured for hard knocks and the ceaseless demands of every day living.

There is shower equipment for all family ages, from 8 months to 80 years and water tight shower inclosures can be set down in your home, self-sufficient units, to stay with you for keeps.

Receptors can be of rubber, of porcelain enamel and compositions. There's a receptor which has been given a nonslippery feature by a special method of infusing certain ingredients into the porcelain receptor coating. So that whether your stall floor is dry or wet, it isn't slippery.

Now Easily Cleaned.

Shower heads are designed to save water by directing it all at the bather and at the same time aerating it so its effect may be soothing. And many of the new shower heads are easily cleaned if and when they show signs of clogging.

From the newest shower equipment to match the chrominum trimmings on your swanky plumbing fixtures and the newest cabinet showers of tile, glass, and porcelain enamel, to the simplest utility fixtures and stalls of galvanized steels there are units available for all needs and occasions and purses and places.

Once a Clothes Closet

June's the month to think of showers—inside the home. Here is a shower cabinet installation in what was once a large clothes closet. This entire cabinet is independent of walls so that it is easily adaptable for modernization work.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, June 2.

Sow seeds of hardy plants. The young can be transplanted into rows in a sunny spot by July. The plants will develop and be well able to withstand the winter without injury. Sowing the seed thinly will make transplanting unnecessary; in fact, all kinds of seed should not be sown to thickly.

The pruning of spring flowering shrubs should be done after they are thru blooming because the branches that bore the flowers can be cut away without injury and new growths will be forced into strong growth with abundant buds. Forsythia, bridal wreath, Van Houtte's spirea, shadbush, and many others require this treatment.

Tuesday, June 3.

Keep edges of walks and beds well trimmed. Cultivation should continue to keep down the weeds and give full opportunity for the plants to grow. However, where perennials grow close together care must be taken not to injure the roots. Mulch these plants about July 1 and avoid excessive cultivation and the necessity of frequent watering.

deaux mixture.

Plant tuberous rooted begonias in a shady location [not too dense] in a leafmold soil. Under similar conditions may be planted fancy leaved caladiums. Both are good for window boxes in the shade. Plant bedding plants.

Young, vigorous plants of annuals will furnish flowers much earlier than seed sown now. The petunia is a good example. Dust hollyhocks frequently with dusting sulphur or bor-

Wednesday, June 4.

Plant tender waterlilies. Use a rich soil and do not overplant. Give full sun. An application of liquit manure to peonies will give larger blooms. Plant dahlia roots and place stakes at the same time. Plant about three feet apart. Sow portulaca in sunny places.

The four o'clock is one of the best annuals to grow in restricted or congested city areas. It makes a good hedge plant. Plant a few of the new morning glories from started, potted plants.

Thursday, June 5.

Home gardeners having outdoor space will find that the house plants will do much better if placed outdoors. Palms, ferns, and similar plants should be in shade, altho some palms, like the date palm, will do well anywhere.

Staking the taller growing perennials is essential. Asters, delphiniums, helenium, dahlias, and others will look unkempt if allowed to grow at will.

Friday, June 6.

Cut back the old flower stalks of the iris and do not permit the plant to form seeds. Transplanting may take place after flowering. Use good sized divisions. Cut back the leaves to six inches. Do not plant too deep. Do not plant bedding plants while the soil is dry; water the plants thoroly before planting.

Saturday, June 7.

Sow sweet corn now. Sow again in 10 days for a late crop. Mulch both sides of the sweet pea row with decayed manure, grass clipping, or other material; watch for aphids and spray with tobacco or Black Leaf 40. Spray potatoes with arsenate of lead the minute a potato beetle is noticed. Spray roses with Tri-o-gen once a week. Watch iris for borers and if any are seen cut and burn the leaves.

Keep all lawn areas that are infested with crab grass well mowed. Rake before mowing to catch the stems and avoid any seed from forming. Rake and mow, with fertilization, will keep down this pest.

Prepared in cooperation with Garfield park conservatory.

FOGARTY RENEWS OLD FRIENDSHIPS IN 'ASK IT' QUIZ

Having Time of Life with W-G-N Show.

With all the headaches that result from producing a radio show, Paul Fogarty, W-G-N producer, is having the time of his life staging the "Ask-It-Ball" quiz programs, broadcast from various army posts and navy stations at 7 p. m. Saturdays on W-G-N. Fogarty, who joined the army in 1917 and retired in 1923 as a captain, is meeting old friends and making new friends every week as he tours with the show.

Paul Fogarty.

Ask-It-Ball. follows the general theme of baseball with the soldiers or sailors answering questions on 15 subjects ranging from sports and movies to geography and the army and navy. Correct answers pay from $1 to $4 to the man who answers the question and count from a single to a home run for the team.

Fogarty was on active duty at one of the camps that is taking part in the program. He served as a bayonet instructor at Camp Grant in 1920. During his period of service he also visited many of the other units that are now playing Ask-It-Ball.

Graduating from Notre Dame in 1917, Fogarty went to the officers training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis. Receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in the infantry, he was sent to numerous camps as an instructor in bayonet drill and calisthenics.

Leaving the army, Fogarty went to Culver, where he became an instructor in military science. After this period of military life he retired and entered private business.

He is the author of the comic strip "Draftie," appearing in many papers. He has produced numerous radio shows over W-G-N and other stations and is the composer of the popular song hit, "Betty Co-ed."

FIND MARRIAGE LICENSE SHOWS HAVE BIG APPEAL

If you know a woman who doesn't like to talk about marriages and brides, you know the woman who isn't a steady listener to Quin Ryan's W-G-N program, "Marriage License Bureau Romances," aired at 1:30 p. m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from the office of County Clerk Michael J. Flynn.

Picking four couples at random from the large throng at the counter of the world's busiest marriage license bureau, Ryan interviews them with heart-to-heart questions. How they met, what their plans are, how and where he proposed, are among the many human interest questions Ryan puts to the would-be-weds.

In the six years the program has been a W-G-N feature no story has had more appeal than the recent case of a blind girl and her nearly blind husband to be. The bride-to-be, Dorothy Fevrus, wrote to Ryan and asked if she and her future husband could be interviewed on his program. They were invited to take part in the show and during the interview the listening public learned that the girl's fiancé could only do odd jobs. As a result of the broadcast hundreds of people attended the girl's wedding and the couple was swamped with wedding gifts.

Ryan recalls one couple who had saved three hundred pennies to pay for their license.

Altho some men interviewed on the program have admitted that they are getting married to beat the draft, many others have told Ryan that they are leaving for camp a day or two after the wedding. These young men have made no attempt to avoid a year's service.

So many alumni and guests are expected to attend the programs and meetings that a large convention tent is being erected on the back campus to house the gatherings.

Three national groups, the Covenant Young People's quadriennial, the Covenant Woman's auxiliary, and the Covenant Annual conference, all affiliates of the Evangelical Mission Covenant Church of America, which founded the college, will hold their conventions on the campus during this period.

A student memorial ceremony will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow with Alec Brooks, president of the student council, in charge. Dexter Nelson, president of the graduating class, will discuss "50 Years at North Park."

Pay Homage to Founders.

Tribute to the founders of the college will be paid by students, including Miss Jean Bloom, Dwight Elting, Miss Daphne Daume, Karl Lofquist, Paul Lund, Theodore Roos, and Patricia Myer. An anniversary dinner will be held at the Sovereign hotel, Granville and Kenmore avenues, at 7 o'clock.

"The Contribution of Evangelical Christianity to Culture" will be discussed by the Rev. David Sandstrom at an academic session at 3 o'clock Tuesday. Senior class exercises will be held at 7 o'clock followed by a president's reception.

Dr. W. R. Frederickson will speak on "The Relation of Science to Education" at the academic session at 3 o'clock Wednesday. Robert Peterson and Dr. K. M. Nelson will lead the discussion groups at 4 o'clock. The Covenant Young People's quadriennial conference will open at 7:45 o'clock that evening with an address on "Science and Religion" by Dr. Arthur Compton of the University of Chicago.

Gov. Stassen Guest Speaker.

Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota will speak on "Citizenship in the Light of Christian Ideals" at 7:45 o'clock Thursday. The Rev. Eric G. Hawkinson will lead a worship service at 10 o'clock that morning and the Rev. Harold M. Carlson will discuss "The Indwelling Christ" at 10:30

Friday's services will start with a worship service at 10 o'clock in the morning followed by an address on "The Christian Church and Youth" by the Rev. Herbert E. Palmquist at 10:30. Dr. Daniel Poling, editor of the "Christian Herald" magazine and secretary of the International Christian Endeavor, will speak on "Christ for Youth" at 7:45 o'clock.

"Covenant Youth of Tomorrow" is the subject of the address the Rev. Nathaniel Franklin will give at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning following the worship service. "Youth and Christian Education" will be discussed at 3 o'clock by Prof. Emory Lindquist of Bethany college. The Rev. John B. Hubbard will be the speaker at the alumni banquet at the Hamilton hotel at 7 o'clock.

College Founded as Seminary.

North Park college, founded in June, 1891, has grown from a school with two departments and 96 students to an institution with six departments and an enrollment of 1,949. The school was founded by the Evangelical Mission Covenant church to supply qualified ministers for its services.

For three years the school was conducted in Minneapolis, Minn., and in 1894 the Swedish University association offered the present site to the school. An academy was established in addition to the theological seminary and the business department and the beginning of the junior college was made in 1902 when four students enrolled for such courses.

One of the outstanding figures in the history of the school, the Rev. David Nyvall, first president of the college and now president emeritus, will attend the golden anniversary celebrations.

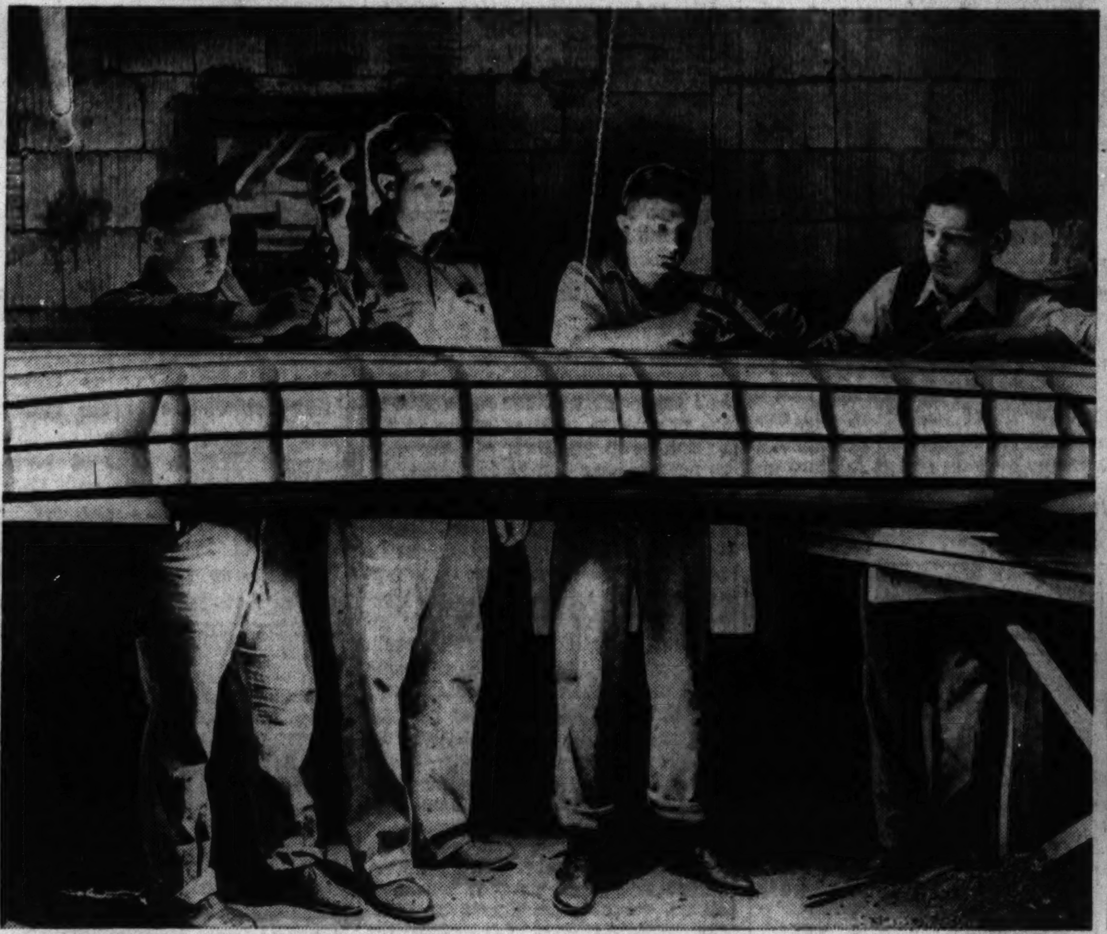
KINDERHEIM AID GROUP TO MARK ITS 25TH YEAR

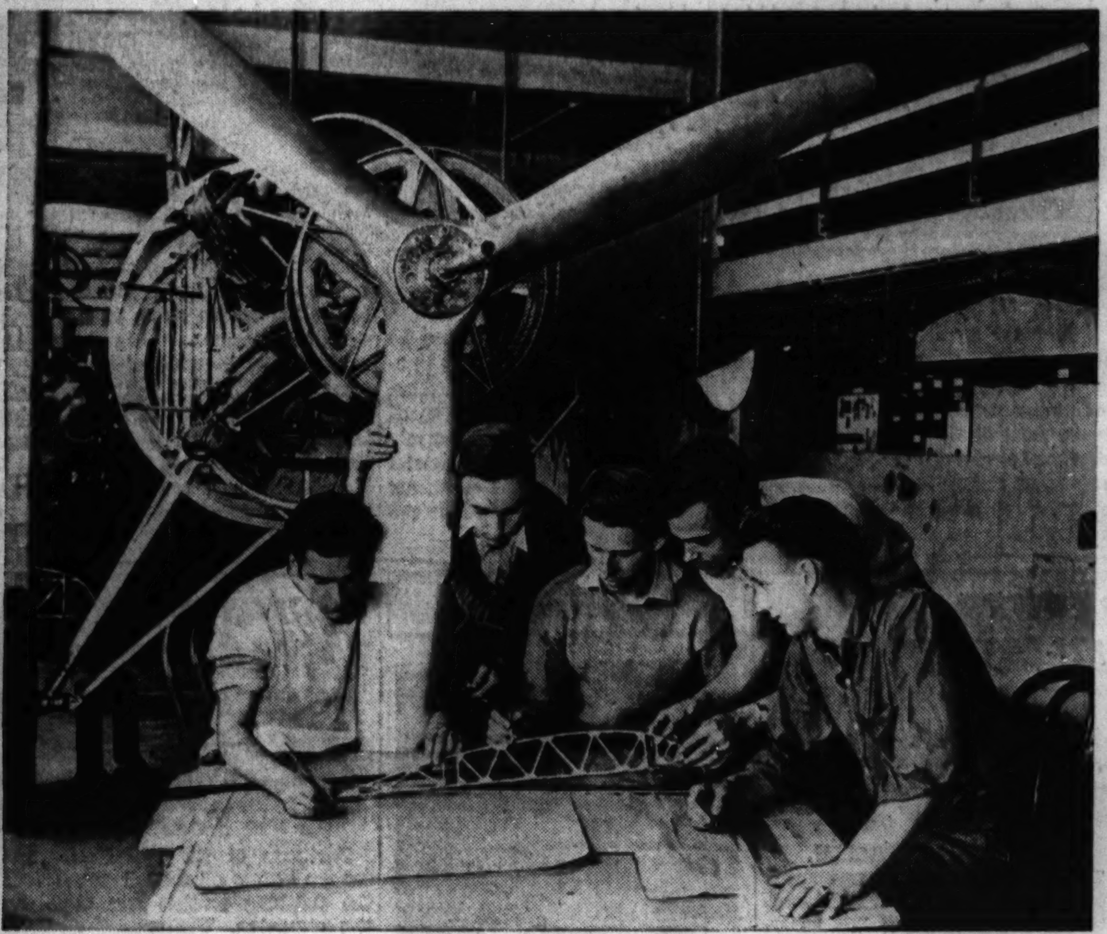
The 25th anniversary of the Ladies' auxiliary of the Kinderheim, an Evangelical Lutheran home for dependent children in Addison, Ill., will be celebrated at a banquet at the Germania club on Thursday. The banquet will mark the end of the auxiliary's separate functions since it is being consolidated with the Luthern Child Welfare association which works for the maintenance of both the Kinderheim and the Lutheran orphanage in Addison.

The auxiliary, founded in 1916, has grown to a membership of more than 700. The group was especially active in the campaign for the erection and maintenance of the $250,000 building completed in 1925.

Mrs. Harry Jost is president. Mrs. Henry Jaeger is chairman of the banquet committee and she is being assisted by Mrs. William Bohnsack, Mrs. Frederick Franke, and Mrs. Fred Kristenstein.

Training at Lane Tech Includes Work in Industries That Are Vital to National Defense





Students at Lane Technical High school will be ready to step into jobs in defense industries when they graduate, for courses at Lane range from boat building to aircraft mechanics. There are no flaws in the kayak which these boys in the boat shop are finishing, as the light in its "innards" shows. The shipwrights are, left to right, are: Walter Jabczynski, Erwin Brinkmann, the instructor; John Wagner, and George Kowalewski. Against a background of airplane props a group is comparing an actual airplane wing rib with its blue print. They are, left to right: Frank Mester, Royal Peterson, Edward Steffen, Albert Sahs, and Art Nelson. The boat building and aeronautics classes are popular ones.

Boys at Lane Study Roles in Defense Work

Uncle Sam and his defense industries are fortunate to be able to fold their arms around graduates of Lane Technical High school. The big north side boys' school at 2501 Addison street, offers courses embracing vital industries from airplane mechanics and airplane building to welding and iron pouring and even to the construction of a 32 foot, 10 ton cruiser which will go into government service.

Actually, many boys near graduation are dropping out of school to take jobs as skilled laborers, according to Charles E. Lang, principal of the school. "The boys find it hard to pass up all the offers of defense jobs," he says. The school, however, encourages the boys to take after-school jobs if they can, so they may finish their courses.

On W-G-N Tuesday.

Lane students will tell their skill stories on the Citizens of Tomorrow program over radio station W-G-N at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday. The studio audience program in which 600 students will take part will be held at 4:30 o'clock, and will be transcribed for the broadcast later.

Charles E. Lang, principal of the school, will speak and the Lane chorus under the direction of Hugh Dickerson will sing. Philip Maxwell, member of the editorial staff of THE TRIBUNE, will be master of ceremonies. The Lane program will be the 38th in the series. The last this season will be held next week when the Chicago Teachers college will be the guests.

A former mayor of Boys Town, famous orphanage run by Father Flanagan, will be a special guest and be interviewed on Tuesday's program. He is Sam Turner, 18 years old, who has come to Chicago to work in a hotel.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the maze of shops which is Lane is the fun which every Lane boy seems to have. Each class produces a concrete product which the boy may see and touch and know that he himself can some day produce another like it, perhaps for profit.

Make 300 Benches.

Mute evidence of the boys' love for the school are the 300 wooden and stone benches which the boys made and placed on their campus. Another touch is the garden which the vocational biological class has planted in a light shaft between the wings of the building.

In the airplane shops one group tears down one of three airplanes while another rebuilds a second plane which has been worn out, it has been studied so much. A third group works on the motor of still another plane and in a back room another group learns to rivet the metal noses of planes. Across the corridor a class toils over glider building and dreams of the day when they may fly the three gliders already completed.

Down the hall, amid clouds of steam, a class pours iron into molds while co-workers in the iron-working and welding shop twist ingots into grille gates or tools. The boys in the wood shop bend over the lathes, turning out patterns to be used in the other shops.

Has Safe Driving Class.

Wood shop classes made the 30 dummy cars used in the safe driving course. Each has a wheel, gear shift, clutch, and brake. As a movie of possible traffic situations is flashed on the screen the instructor can watch the driving reactions of the students on an electric control board. Actual driving practice is obtained on the school's own practice field, complete

Three planes are harbored in the airplane shop at Lane and the boys have practiced so hard tearing them down and putting them together again that one has been worn out. These boys are bracing and redesigning a plane wing for the worn out ship. They are, left to right: George Fischer, Edward Strauch, Edward Schluth, and Richard McLoughlin.

A Wright engine is what these students are working on in the airplane engine shop. And before they finish the course William Hoar, Harry Rostkowski, and Roy Hilbert will know what makes the plane stay in the air.

New Fountains to Save Pupils Mile in Bending

Wright Junior college's 3,300 students and teachers will have less strenuous bending exercise each time they want a drink of water next fall.

This is because Wright's 16 drinking fountains have finally, after six years, been promoted to real honest-to-goodness college height, and during the summer each of them will undergo a $19 operation to add six and one half inches to their present squatty three foot stature.

"And it's about time," one six foot tall drinking fountain customer sputtered. "When the fountains were moved in here this place was going to be a junior high. Well it was, for a year or so. Then it was a grade school for a year. And in 1935 they made it a junior college, and since then we've had to cope with these runty fountains by leaning half way to the floor for a drink."

Fountains to Be Taller.

Raising the drinking fountains is the last step in the transformation of the impressive building at 3400 North Austin avenue from a junior high school to a junior college. First it was necessary to change the carved lettering on the face of the building. Then armchairs replaced the small fixed desks in the class rooms. And then, as if to indicate that college students are more serious minded than elementary and high school pupils, a gymnasium was turned into a library and a music room was turned into a science lecture room.

To Cost $302.

This final change, involving a total cost of $302, was voted last week by the board of education on the recommendation of John Howatt, chief engineer.

"We've all become quite used to these," said Dean William H. Conley nodding to a three foot fountain. "It's going to seem luxurious next fall."

Assuming that each person takes three drinks a day, mathematics students figure, the change to taller fountains will bring a saving in leaning-down distance of about a mile a day.

Women of Moose.

The Albany Park chapter, No. 427, of the Women of the Moose will hold an annual Mooseheart chapter program at 8 o'clock Tuesday in Moose hall, 4350 North Pulaski road. A class of candidates will be initiated.

ADULTS TO STAR IN PARK RIDGE CHILDREN'S PLAY

"Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater," a children's play by Martha King will be presented by the adult members of the Masque players of Park Ridge in the auditorium of the Lincoln school in Park Ridge at 2:30 o'clock Saturday. The play is the last in a series sponsored by the Park Ridge school board and Park Ridge recreation commission for the children of the community.

Among those in the cast are Robert Beisler, Miss Elle Schneider, Miss Margaret Liedberg, Miss Virginia Bambas, Mrs. Marcellite Henderson, Miss Sonja Knutsen, Charles Ehnborn, and Mrs. Kay Thompson. Allan Julin will provide the musical background. Frank Ruh is stage manager.

The annual party and business session of the Masque Players will be held on Saturday, June 21, in the South park fieldhouse in Park Ridge.

Junior Class of Maine High Elects 2 Student Officers

Thomas Poyer and Marion Scott, juniors at Maine Township High school, have been elected president and secretary, respectively, of the high school's student council for next year. Poyer, the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Poyer of Des Plaines, is president of the junior class and a member of the lightweight basketball team. Miss Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Scott of Park Ridge, is secretary of the class, a representative of the girls' club, and a member of the girls' hockey team.

Lyon School to Sponsor Safety Rallies Tuesday

Tuesday morning four assemblies at the Mary Lyon elementary school, 2941 North McVicker avenue, will hear safety talks by George W. Fleming of the Keep Chicago Safe committee and see safety films. The programs are being arranged by Mrs. A. J. Clouston and Miss V. R. Morrisey, principal of the school.

It Takes Auto Age to Reunite Two Brothers

A meeting with his brother and a 45 mile journey to downtown Chicago put spry, 68 year old Charles Mears on top of the world recently. He is not the kind that gets excited about little things, as a rule, either.

But the combination of these two has him still talking. It was his third trip to Chicago—his first since automobiles have become common, altho he lives in Dundee. And it was the first time he had seen his brother, Orville, in 57 years.

Like young Lochinvar, Orville came out of the west, for he lives in Seattle, Wash., and is engaged in the construction business. He also came out of the blue, for none of his family here had heard of him for some 40 years. But unlike young Lochinvar, Orville is 65 years old.

Both Well Traveled.

Charles worked his way all thru the west, married, spent many years in Texas, and returned to Dundee to live with a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Berke, when his wife died two years ago. He was so anxious to start talking about his brother, tho, that he tried to skip over his own adventurous existence lightly.

"O," he said, "I slept in doorways and rode boxcars for several years. Worked in a pottery in Sioux City. Ranch in Texas.

"But my brother," he beamed, he's been around. How he ever picked up any education I don't know. He went off to Nebraska and then enlisted in the Spanish-American war. He went to the Philippines. When he got back to Nebraska he found it was too dull for him, so he sent word he was set-

NORTHWEST SIDE CENSUS SHOWS NEW MIGRATION

Outlying Areas Gain as Near Sector Loses.

A population loss of 4,357 on the northwest side from 1930 to 1940 is revealed by the 1940 census, which is now being published officially by the department of commerce. This loss is in contrast to a city wide gain of 20,370, or about six-tenths of 1 per cent.

There are 797,373 inhabitants of the northwest side, according to the census. This sector of the city is west of the river and north of Kinzie street as far west as Kenton avenue, and north of Hirsch street from Kenton avenue to the city limits. The drop in population represents a loss of about one-half of 1 per cent.

Move Into Suburbs.

The entire city's population is 3,396,808, and its small gain is among the least recorded for any large city in the world during a 10 year period.

The decrease in this part of the city is attributed partly to general stagnation of urban growth, and partly to the attractiveness of northwest side suburbs, all of which have showed large increases in provisional reports.

An indication as to the growth of suburbs can be seen in the large percentage gains on the outskirts of the city. The communities of Sauganash and Edgebrook, for example, showed a gain of 140 per cent, the largest in the city. But this represented a numerical increase of only about 1,600.

Industrial Area Loses.

In the Wicker and Eckhart park areas, on the other hand, a drop of about 10 per cent represented the loss of nearly 13,000 inhabitants. Losses were heaviest near the industrial region along the lower part of the river, but were noticeable along railroads, where factories have also been constructed recently.

In general there was a movement away from all densely populated areas. The Humboldt Park, Logan Square, and Albany Park regions showed fairly consistent losses, except along boulevards, which, because of more desirable living conditions, showed less decrease and in some cases even a gain.

Ravenswood Manor, a somewhat secluded community near Wilson avenue and the river, which at that point is lined with luxuriant willows, showed a 7 per cent gain.

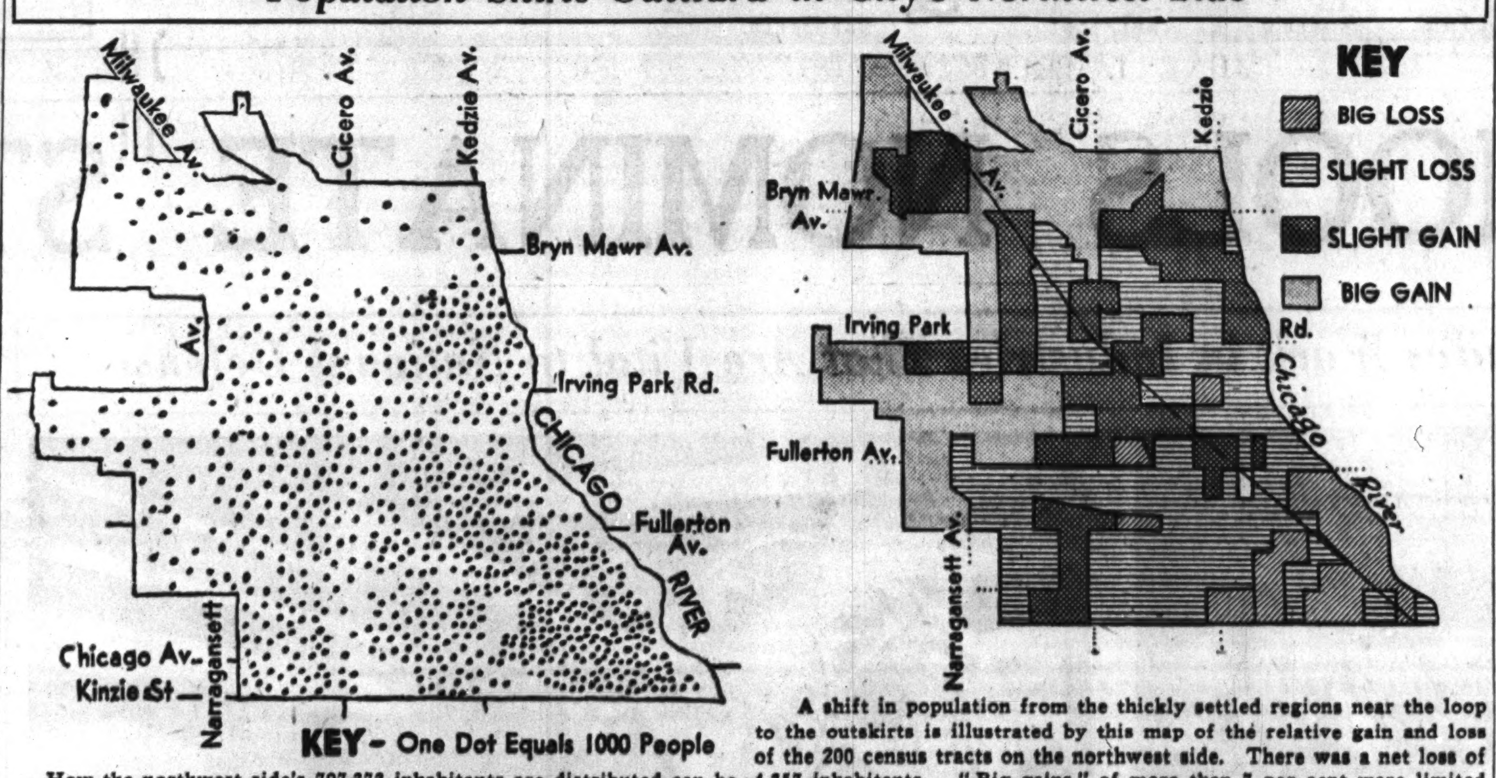
Following Sauganash and Edgebrook, the largest gains are in the outlying districts of North Park, Edison Park, Norwood Park, Dunning, and Mont Clare.

Cite Vacancy Figures.

The report of the Department of Commerce also includes figures on the number and percentage of vacant dwelling units for sale or rent. This figure is closely related to population change. In areas of great emigration there are many vacant homes and flats. Between Western avenue and the river the proportion vacant consistently runs above 5 per cent and sometimes up to 10 per cent.

In normal areas this proportion is less than 2 per cent. But in rapidly expanding areas where real estate operators are busy building new houses or apartments, the number on the market jumps up again.

Population Shifts Outward in City's Northwest Side



How the northwest side's 797,373 inhabitants are distributed can be seen at a glance from this map, made from detailed figures recently published by the census bureau, on which each dot represents 1,000 persons. For census purposes the area shown in the map is divided into 200 small tracts, each of which is dealt with individually. In the more densely populated regions, blank spaces represent parks, cemeteries, industrial regions, or railroad yards. Just east of Humboldt park, in the southeast corner, there are some 46,000 persons to the square mile. Thruout the country there are about 45 persons to a square mile.

A shift in population from the thickly settled regions near the loop to the outskirts is illustrated by this map of the relative gain and loss of the 200 census tracts on the northwest side. There was a net loss of 4,357 inhabitants. "Big gains" of more than 7 per cent were limited to the outlying communities. "Big losses" of more than 7 per cent are pretty much limited to the crowded area south of Fullerton and east of California avenue. Of the three isolated areas of great loss, one, near Grand and Cicero avenues, is due to railroad expansion and the other, in Kelvyn Park between Fullerton and Diversey avenues and at Addison and Kedzie avenues, are due to industrial development. An area which gained less than the city average of six-tenths of one per cent is classed as losing slightly.

HORSEMEN PLAN BREAKFAST RIDE NEXT SUNDAY

A record crowd is expected at the first of three breakfast rides sponsored by the Town and Country Equestrian association, to start from the Oakbrook polo field at 2400 York road at 10 a. m. next Sunday, according to T. L. J. Klapp, chairman.

Upward of 200 riders will be in the cavalcade that will traverse 15 miles of Du Page and Cook county forest preserve trails before breakfast is served at 1 p. m.

Klapp said the association has made arrangements to have a horse trucked from any part of the Chicago area to the breakfast ride site and returned for a flat rate of $5. Information concerning this service can be obtained by telephoning John FitzGerald, association secretary, at Wabash 1878, he said.

SHOWER STALL FILLS ODD NOOK IN MANY A HOME

Complete Unit Easily Installed Today.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There need be nothing expensive—any more—about a shower stall installation in the home. Still less expensive is the shower over the tub. Showers can start at the bottom, in your basement, or at the top in your attic.

A shower has been called the great American institution, the nation's morning pickup. There is nothing really new about it, since an ancient Babylonian king modernized his palace some 5,000 years ago and installed a shower stall for his own use. His plumber was wise enough to insist on a waterproof floor with a drain made of clay tile, and it was built a trifle large—some 15 feet square—since slaves had to do the "showering." Servants instead of pipes sprayed water over the king in those by-gone days.

Wide Range of Prices.

New showers and stalls aren't limited to royalty or to the rich, for an everyday basement can have a stall. Nice, neat leakproof unit assemblies are on the market, in a wide range of prices. A shower can be installed over an existing bathtub without tearing out the walls, or one can take advantage, perhaps, of an unneeded closet and make it over into a shower and dressing room.

There are cabinets which are independent of the walls of a room and for this reason are especially fine for modernization work. And these cabinet shower stalls, whether de luxe or of inexpensive gavanized steel with duck curtains, are grand places to relax when the temperature soars and vacations are a long way off, or far in the past.

Stalls Are Durable.

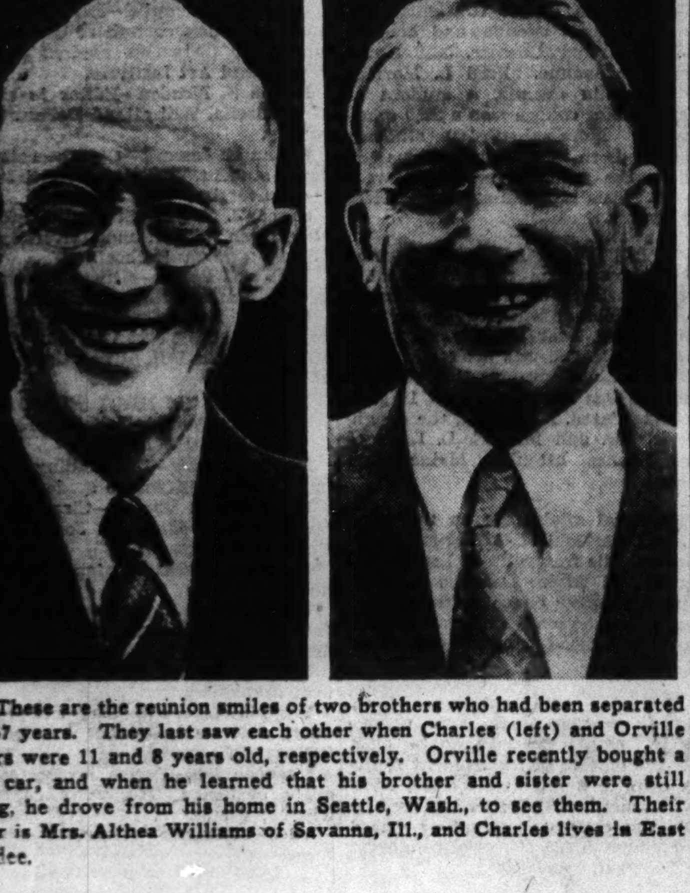
These modern stalls come tailored to fit almost any wall or corner and they are manufactured for hard knocks and the ceaseless demands of every day living.

There is shower equipment for all family ages, from 8 months to 80 years and water tight shower inclosures can be set down in your home, self-sufficient units, to stay with you for keeps.

Receptors can be of rubber, of porcelain enamel and compositions. There's a receptor which has been given a nonslippery feature by a special method of infusing certain ingredients into the porcelain receptor coating. So that whether your stall floor is dry or wet, it isn't slippery.

Shower heads are designed to save water by directing it all at the bather and at the same time aerating it so its effect may be soothing.

Brothers United After 57 Years



These are the reunion smiles of two brothers who had been separated for 57 years. They last saw each other when Charles (left) and Orville Mears were 11 and 8 years old, respectively. Orville recently bought a new car, and when he learned that his brother and sister were still living, he drove from his home in Seattle, Wash., to see them. Their sister is Mrs. Althea Williams of Savanna, Ill., and Charles lives in East Dundee.

ting out for Washington. That's the last we heard."

They were unable to locate Orville eight years ago when a third brother died. They figured he had died, too.

Letter Starts Reunion.

But several months ago, it seems, Orville bought a new car. He wanted to go some place, but he didn't know where.

The latest he knew of his family was that a sister, Mrs. Althea Williams, lived at the old family home in Savanna. That was 28 years ago. "I'll see if she's still alive and if she knows where Charley is," he thought, And he sent her a registered letter.

Then the dust started to fly. Althea [66 years old] dashed off a letter to Orville and a note to Charley. Charley wrote to Orville. Orville wrote to Charley. Orville wrote to their elder brother's widow, Mrs. Marion Mears, in Omaha, Neb. Then Orville went to the hospital.

It was two months before he got out, and two days later he was on the road.

When he pulled up in front of the Berkes there were a lot of curious eyes there to meet him. "This is your niece, this is your nephew, this is your grandnephew," such were the introductions.

Keeps Old Mannerisms.

"He was a little scamp when I last saw him," Charley said. "He was always contrary. He hasn't changed much, either. He's still got the old mannerisms. But he's picked up an education, some place."

Before Orville left for New York last week the family decided to celebrate with a trip to Chicago.

"We went in to get a fancy meal," Charley said. "But I lost all my appetite on the way in. Cars passing you on both sides, two story buses going around corners. The town sure has grown up. Last time I was in that was quite a while ago. The time before that I stayed at my grandmother's on Jackson street, near the lake. I guess that's sort of a busy place now."

TRAINING CAMP NEWS

The 131st infantry headquarters at Camp Forrest, Tenn., last week announced the promotion of Private First Class Frank J. Zygmant, 2304 North Moody avenue, to the rank of sergeant. He was the only Chicagoan there advanced directly from the rank of private to that of sergeant.

VOTERS IN 37TH TO MAKE COUNCIL CHOICE TUESDAY

Keeney, Callahan Seek Two Year Post.

Partisans of the two candidates for the 37th ward council seat added the finishing touches last week to the campaign. The special election will be held Tuesday. The winner will be the alderman of the Austin ward until the next regular election two years hence.

The strength of the regular Democratic organization was behind Francis E. Callahan, while the G. O. P. ward units supported former Ald. Albert F. Keeney.

Aldermanic elections technically are nonpartisan, and so the candidates do not run under party labels. However, the winner usually owes his victory to a party organization.

Plans Full Time Job.

Callahan is promising the voters that he will continue the policies of former Ald. Roger J. Kiley, Democrat who resigned last year after his election to the Superior court bench.

It is his contention that an alderman should devote full time to his job, and promises to do so if elected.

Callahan is an alumnus of Northwestern university and the Chicago law school. He was formerly secretary to the general counsel of the Santa Fe railroad, and later served with an investment banking house on La Salle street. Before taking his present post as superintendent of city sidewalks he was chief deputy clerk of the Probate court. He lives with his wife and family at 1447 Massasoit street, and has lived in the ward for 21 years.

During the first three years of Ald. Kiley's service in the city council, Callahan was in charge of the alderman's office on Lake street.

In Business 46 Years.

Keeney has conducted a west side real estate business for the last 46 years. He was alderman of the old 27th ward from 1899 to 1903, and in 1906 was elected state representative from the 7th senatorial district. He is president of the regular Republican ward organization. He lives with his wife at 5849 Race street.

One other vacant council seat will be filled in Tuesday's special election. County Commissioner Fred J. Fischmann is unopposed as the candidate for the 24th ward post left vacant by the resignation of Ald. Jacob M. Arvey, now serving as an officer with the 33d division.

OLD SNAPSHOT LINKS FRIENDS AFTER 15 YEARS

Thru a strange chain of circumstances stemming from the observation of Steinmetz day at Steinmetz High school, in April, two old friends who had not heard from each other for 15 years, are now corresponding again.

When last he heard from him, L. J. Ewald's college room mate, Emil Remscheid, was working as a laboratory assistant for Charles Steinmetz, the great electrical genius of the General Electric company for whom the high school is named. Correspondence had been kept up during their first years out of school but changes of addresses and lack of personal contact soon snapped the chain.

When Phyllis Ewald told her father of the school plans for Steinmetz day, Ewald dug thru an old trunk and brought out a snapshot of Steinmetz and Remscheid. Phyllis took the picture to her teacher, Miss Lois Bergh, and the two sent it to the General Electric company with a note about its history.

Almost in the next mail came a letter to Miss Bergh containing reminiscences of Dr. Steinmetz by Emil Remscheid. Mr. Ewald followed up the contact, finally found Remscheid's address in Schnectady, N. Y., and the letters are again in the mails telling stories of jobs and promotions, of marriages and children.

EXPAND SEWAGE PLANTS TO HELP CURB NUISANCE

New Process Expected to Reduce Odors.

Work is being rushed on the $11,633,427 expansion of facilities of the west and southwest side sewage treatment works, it was announced last week by Ross A. Woodhull, president of the sanitary district.

His announcement came soon after the United States Supreme court had refused the state's plea that it modify its 1930 decree to permit a temporary increase in the lake diversion flow thru the Illinois-Michigan waterway while the enlargement was being accomplished. It is estimated that the building program will require about two years.

Contracts already have been awarded for $4,494,427 of the work, or 39 per cent of the whole, Woodhull said. Most of the remainder of the project, to cost an estimated $7,139,000, or 61 per cent, will probably be let late next fall, he indicated.

Forecast Less Odor.

As the work progresses, there should be a gradual improvement in conditions along the waterway, where residents are suffering discomfort because of the odors given off by incompletely treated sewage. This problem became acute after the Supreme court decree cut the lake water diversion flow to 1,500 cubic feet per second. At one time it was as high as 10,000 cubic feet per second.

The state had asked the Supreme court to increase the 1,500 cubic feet per second minimum to an average of 4,500 cubic feet this year, and to an average of 5,750 cubic feet next year.

This additional flow, it was estimated, would be sufficient to dilute the partially treated sewage from the big west side plant at Pershing road and Central avenue enough to remove most of the objectionable odors. The only hope of attaining this end now lies in the plant enlargement now underway, engineers said.

Add Settling Tanks.

William H. Trinkaus, chief engineer for the district, outlined what is being done to augment present treatment facilities for the south and southwest side plants [which also treat sewage from Des Plaines valley towns as far north as Des Plaines].

Work now under contract will provide new final settling tanks in the southwest plant, immediately to the west of the west side plant, as well as additional sludge concentration tanks. Work soon to be let will add more settling tanks, additional aeration tanks, and a conduit line between the two plants.

Incompletely treated sewage is being discharged from the west side plant, Mr. Trinkaus said, because the Imhoff method of treatment is in use there. This method removes only about 50 per cent of putrescible matter from sewage.

Utilize Better Process.

Another widely used but comparatively new method, the activated sludge process, removes up to 90 per cent or more of the matter that causes bad odors. When the present enlargement program is completed, the west and southwest side plants will be giving complete activated sludge treatment to 99.5 per cent of all sewage originating in the jurisdiction of the sanitary district, Mr. Trinkaus said.

The switch from the Imhoff to the activated sludge principle was begun in 1930. The Imhoff method was decided upon for the west side plant when it was first planned in 1923 because the then new activated sludge method had never been tried on a large scale, and was protected by airtight patents, since expired, which would have required enormous royalty payments. Recent experimentation has demonstrated the superiorities of the activated sludge type of treatment, the engineer said.

Work to be done this year will enlarge the capacity of the southwest side works to 500,000,000 gallons of sewage a day. The construction to follow immediately will push that capacity up to 900,000,000 gallons a day, or more than sufficient to care for the anticipated needs of the west and southwest areas for years to come, the planners estimate.

Joliet Suffers Most.

Residents of Joliet and Lockport at present are the chief sufferers from the sewage problem along the deep waterway. Ever since the Supreme court decree reduced the lake diversion to 1,500 cubic feet per second at the end of 1938, sludge from the Chicago treatment plants has been collecting in the Brandon road pool in Joliet.

Here it remains indefinitely, because of the sluggish current, decaying and giving off miasmatic fumes that are particularly objectionable on warm days.

Most of this sludge will be removed when the new plant capacity is completed. Then, the engineers believe, the canal will gradually clean itself and within a few years the source of the odor will have disappeared.

Mr. Woodhull declared that Chicago is doing more than any other large city in the treatment of its sewage, on which $165,100,000 has already been spent. The sanitary district researchers are constantly striving for improvement in treatment methods, and have made noted progress, he said.

Church Wedding

[Sallman Photo.]

Mrs. Edward Crowley was a spring bride. She is the former Pearl Flotron, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Flotron of 4325 North Hermitage avenue. Mr. Crowley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Crowley of 1446 Wilson avenue. The marriage took place in Our Lady of Lourdes church.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, June 2.

Sow seeds of hardy plants. The young can be transplanted into rows in a sunny spot by July. The plants will develop and be well able to withstand the winter without injury. Sowing the seed thinly will make transplanting unnecessary; in fact, all kinds of seed should not be sown to thickly.

The pruning of spring flowering shrubs should be done after they are thru blooming because the branches that bore the flowers can be cut away without injury and new growths will be forced into strong growth with abundant buds. Forsythia, bridal wreath, Van Houtte's spireas, shadbush, and many others require this treatment.

Tuesday, June 3.

Keep edges of walks and beds well trimmed. Cultivation should continue to keep down the weeds and give full opportunity for the plants to grow. However, where perennials grow close together care must be taken not to injure the roots. Mulch these plants about July 1 and avoid excessive cultivation and the necessity of frequent watering.

Plant tuberous rooted begonias in a shady location [not too dense] in a leafmold soil. Under similar conditions may be planted fancy leaved caladiums. Both are good for window boxes in the shade. Plant bedding plants.

Young, vigorous plants of annuals will furnish flowers much earlier than seed sown now. The petunia is a good example. Dust hollyhocks frequently with dusting sulphur or bordeaux mixture.

Wednesday, June 4.

Plant tender waterlilies. Use a rich soil and do not overplant. Give full sun. An application of liquit manure to peonies will give larger blooms. Plant dahlia roots and place stakes at the same time. Plant about three feet apart. Sow portulaca in sunny places.

The four o'clock is one of the best annuals to grow in restricted or congested city areas. It makes a good hedge plant. Plant a few of the new morning glories from started, potted plants.

Thursday, June 5.

Home gardeners having outdoor space will find that the house plants will do much better if placed outdoors. Palms, ferns, and similar plants should be in shade, altho some palms, like the date palm, will do well anywhere.

Staking the taller growing perennials is essential. Asters, delphiniums, helenium, dahlias, and others will look unkempt if allowed to grow at will.

Friday, June 6.

Cut back the old flower stalks of the iris and do not permit the plant to form seeds. Transplanting may take place after flowering. Use good sized divisions. Cut back the leaves to six inches. Do not plant too deep. Do not plant bedding plants while the soil is dry; water the plants thoroly before planting.

Saturday, June 7.

Sow sweet corn now. Sow again in 10 days for a late crop. Mulch both sides of the sweet pea row with decayed manure, grass clipping, or other material; watch for aphids and spray with tobacco or Black Leaf 40. Spray potatoes with arsenate of lead the minute a potato beetle is noticed.

Collegian at Grade School Fountain

An acute angle is formed by a college student who tries to drink out of a grade school drinking fountain. This geometric rule was discovered by Wright Junior college students who must drink out of fountains which have not been raised since the building was used for a grade school six years ago, but who are going to be relieved of this hardship next year. The board of education has voted $302 to raise the 16 fountains six inches each. Here is Patrick O'Connor forming the acute angle while Carmen Podkaln looks as tho she would rather wait until next year and form a more obtuse angle. (Story on page 1.)

LANE TECH BOYS STUDY ROLES IN DEFENSE WORK

with stop lights, hills, curves, and traffic signals.

Wornout cars are driven into the auto shop and when their troubles are diagnosed, a class sets to work rebuilding or repairing them.

Down in the basement a group toils over boat-making. Kayaks, canoes, and row boats are made for fun and in a long inner room forms are going up for the construction of a 32 foot cruiser, for which the government is supplying materials. The cruiser is being constructed in such a way that it may be taken apart and carried out of the building.

For other fun the boys invite the girls of neighboring schools over for matinée danes. They have a first class band and the stage in the auditorium is almost always in use for play practices.

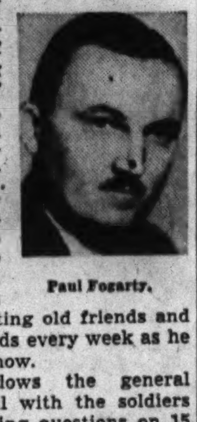
FOGARTY RENEWS OLD FRIENDSHIPS IN 'ASK IT' QUIZ

Having Time of Life with W-G-N Show.

With all the headaches that result from producing a radio show, Paul Fogarty, W-G-N producer, is having the time of his life staging the "Ask-It-Ball" quiz programs, broadcast from various army posts and navy stations at 7 p. m. Saturdays on W-G-N. Fogarty, who joined the army in 1917 and retired in 1923 as a captain, is meeting old friends and making new friends every week as he tours with the show.



Paul Fogarty.

Ask-It-Ball follows the general theme of baseball with the soldiers or sailors answering questions on 15 subjects ranging from sports and movies to geography and the army and navy. Correct answers pay from $1 to $4 to the man who answers the question and count from a single to a home run for the team.

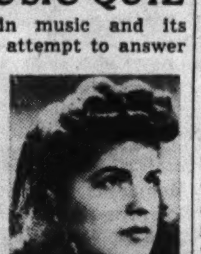
Fogarty was on active duty at one of the camps that is taking part in the program. He served as a bayonet instructor at Camp Grant in 1920. During his period of service he also visited many of the other units that are now playing Ask-It-Ball.

Graduating from Notre Dame in 1917, Fogarty went to the officers training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis. Receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in the infantry, he was sent to numerous camps as an instructor in bayonet drill and calisthenics.

Leaving the army, Fogarty went to Culver, where he became an instructor in military science. After this period of military life he retired and entered private business. He is the author of the comic strip "Draftie," appearing in many papers. He has produced numerous radio shows over W-G-N and other stations and is the composer of the popular song hit, "Betty Co-ed."

4 MUSIC EXPERTS TO MATCH WITS ON MUSIC QUIZ

Four experts in music and its related fields will attempt to answer puzzlers sent in by the public on "Your Music I. Q." on W-G-N from 8:30 to 9 p. m. tomorrow. Pierre Andre will be master of ceremonies.



Jean Browne.

The first expert will be Maurice McGehee, director of Sharps and Flats, a choral group which is associated with Chicago's Urban League chorus. The second will be Siegmund Levarie, instructor in music at the University of Chicago.

From the Glass Hat of the Congress hotel will come Jean Browne, featured vocalist at this night spot. She will be expected to handle questions on popular music. Raymond Henagow, assistant editor of the Lincoln-Belmont Booster, will be the fourth.

Boris Karloff to Star in Edgar Allen Poe Thriller

Boris Karloff, famous bogeyman of stage, screen, and radio, will star in one of Edgar Allen Poe's grimmest stories, "The Fall o' the House of Usher," during the Inner Sanctum Mystery program at 7:30 p. m. today over WLS. The story concerns identical twins—a boy and a girl—who feel the same pains, read each other's thoughts, and have the same actions. The boy finally kills his sister, but she returns from her tomb to seek vengeance.

BENNY TO AIR LAST PROGRAM FOR NAVY LADS

"Jack Benny comin' 'longside!" will be the cry of lookouts at the United States Naval Training station at San Diego at 6 p. m. today over WMAQ

Benny was a gob himself during 1917-'18, and it was at another naval training station on the Great Lakes that he blossomed out as a comedian while in Uncle Sam's service. As a "seasoned" sailor Jack is certain in his well-known fatherly way to try and impart some of his vast nautical knowledge to the tyro tars who will attend the broadcast.

Mary Livingstone, Dennis Day, Phil Harris, and Don Wilson, with previous experience of the Benny seamanship while on a San Francisco-Oakland ferryboat, are lashing down all loose gear. This is the last Benny program of the season.

Women Enjoy Quin Ryan Interviews.

If you know a woman who doesn't like to talk about marriages and brides, you know the woman who isn't a steady listener to Quin Ryan's W-G-N program, "Marriage License Bureau Romances," aired at 1:30 p. m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from the office of County Clerk Michael J. Flynn.

Picking four couples at random from the large throng at the counter of the world's busiest marriage license bureau, Ryan interviews them with heart-to-heart questions. How they met, what their plans are, how and where he proposed, are among the many human interest questions Ryan puts to the would-be-weds.

Interviews Blind Pair.

In the six years the program has been a W-G-N feature no story has had more appeal than the recent case of a blind girl and her nearly blind husband to be. The bride-to-be, Dorothy Fevrus, wrote to Ryan and asked if she and her future husband could be interviewed on his program. They were invited to take part in the show and during the interview the listening public learned that the girl's fiancé could only do odd jobs. As a result of the broadcast hundreds of people attended the girl's wedding and the couple was swamped with wedding gifts.

Ryan recalls one couple who had saved three hundred pennies to pay for their license.

Describes Marriages, Too.

About once a month the broadcasts follow a couple into the marriage chambers of the courthouse and Ryan presents the couple's wedding.

Altho some men interviewed on the program have admitted that they are getting married to beat the draft, many others have told Ryan that they are leaving for camp a day or two after the wedding. These young men have made no attempt to avoid a year's service.

QUINTO QUINTET TO BE GUESTS OF STEELMAKERS

Six guests will augment the regular cast of Musical Steelmakers on W-G-N and the coast-to-coast Mutual network from 8:30 to 9:00 tonight. The veterans, Dorothy Ann Crowe, the Steele Sisters, the Old Timer, Regina Colbert, and the Wheeling Steel orchestra will perform in front of the microphone on the stage of the Capitol theater in Wheeling, W. Va. In addition Quinto's Quintet and Bobby Klingensmith, young singer, will also be on hand to pack the program with entertainment.

On Hit Parade

Louise King, blonde Chicago songstress, has joined the CBS Hit Parade in New York. Formerly heard on the Contented hour here, she is now featured with Mark Warnow and Barry Wood at 8 p. m. Saturdays on WBBM-CBS.

HELEN HAYES IN 'FAREWELL TO ARMS' TONIGHT

Responding to numerous requests, Helen Hayes has decided to enact the rôle of Catharine Barkley, the English nurse, in a radio adaptation of the great love story, "Farewell to Arms," in her own theater of the air over WBBM-CBS at 9:30 tonight.

Miss Hayes played the same rôle in the motion picture. Gary Cooper was her leading man. She was also heard as the English nurse in a radio version of the story on Oct. 13, shortly after the start of her series of dramas. Since that time she has been receiving a steady stream of mail asking her to repeat the performance.

SARAH BURTON JOINS CAST OF 'ALWAYS YOUNG'

Sarah Burton, British-American actress, has been added to the cast of "We Are Always Young," W-G-N-Mutual daytime serial, keeping intact the program's claim that only stage and screen "name" players are cast in the play. She will play the part of a debutante.

Now an American citizen, Miss Burton has been in this country for a little over six years, playing important rôles in such plays as "What a Life" and the Bea Lillie revue, "Set to Music."

Communion Breakfast.

A communion breakfast will be served after the 8 o'clock mass next Sunday morning in Ascension church, East avenue and Van Buren street, Oak Park.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS NOMINATE STARS

Stepped Up Industry Calls Graduates.

Uncle Sam and his defense industries are fortunate to be able to fold their arms around graduates of Lane Technical High school. The big north side boys' school at 2501 Addison street, offers courses embracing vital industries from airplane mechanics and airplane building to welding and iron pouring and even to the construction of a 32 foot, 10 ton cruiser which will go into government service.

Actually, many boys near graduation are dropping out of school to take jobs as skilled laborers, according to Charles E. Lang, principal of the school. "The boys find it hard to pass up all the offers of defense jobs," he says. The school, however, encourages the boys to take after-school jobs if they can, so they may finish their courses.

On W-G-N Tuesday.

Lane students will tell their skill stories on the Citizens of Tomorrow program over radio station W-G-N at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday. The studio audience program in which 600 students will take part will be held at 4:30 o'clock, and will be transcribed for the broadcast later.

Charles E. Lang, principal of the school, will speak and the Lane chorus under the direction of Hugh Dickerson will sing. Philip Maxwell, member of the editorial staff of THE TRIBUNE, will be master of ceremonies. The Lane program will be the 38th in the series. The last this season will be held next week when the Chicago Teachers college will be the guests.

A former mayor of Boys Town, famous orphanage run by Father Flanagan, will be a special guest and be interviewed on Tuesday's program. He is Sam Turner, 18 years old, who has come to Chicago to work in a hotel.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the maze of shops which is Lane is the fun which every Lane boy seems to have. Each class produces a concrete product which the boy may see and touch and know that he himself can some day produce another like it, perhaps for profit.

Make 300 Benches.

Mute evidence of the boys' love for the school are the 300 wooden and stone benches which the boys made and placed on their campus. Another touch is the garden which the vocational biological class has planted in a light shaft between the wings of the building.

In the airplane shops one group tears down one of three airplanes while another rebuilds a second plane which has been worn out, it has been studied so much. A third group works on the motor of still another plane and in a back room another group learns to rivet the metal noses of planes. Across the corridor a class toils over glider building and dreams of the day when they may fly the three gliders already completed.

Down the hall, amid clouds of steam, a class pours iron into molds while co-workers in the iron-working and welding shop twist ingots into grille gates or tools. The boys in the wood shop bend over the lathes, turning out patterns to be used in the other shops.

Has Safe Driving Class.

Wood shop classes made the 30 dummy cars used in the safe driving course. Each has a wheel, gear shift, clutch, and brake. As a movie of possible traffic situations is flashed on the screen the instructor can watch the driving reactions of the students on an electric control board. Actual driving practice is obtained on the school's own practice field, complete with stop lights, hills, curves, and traffic signals.

Wornout cars are driven into the auto shop and when their troubles are diagnosed, a class sets to work rebuilding or repairing them.

Down in the basement a group toils over boat-making. Kayaks, canoes, and row boats are made for fun and in a long inner room forms are going up for the construction of a 32 foot cruiser, for which the government is supplying materials. The cruiser is being constructed in such a way that it may be taken apart and carried out of the building.

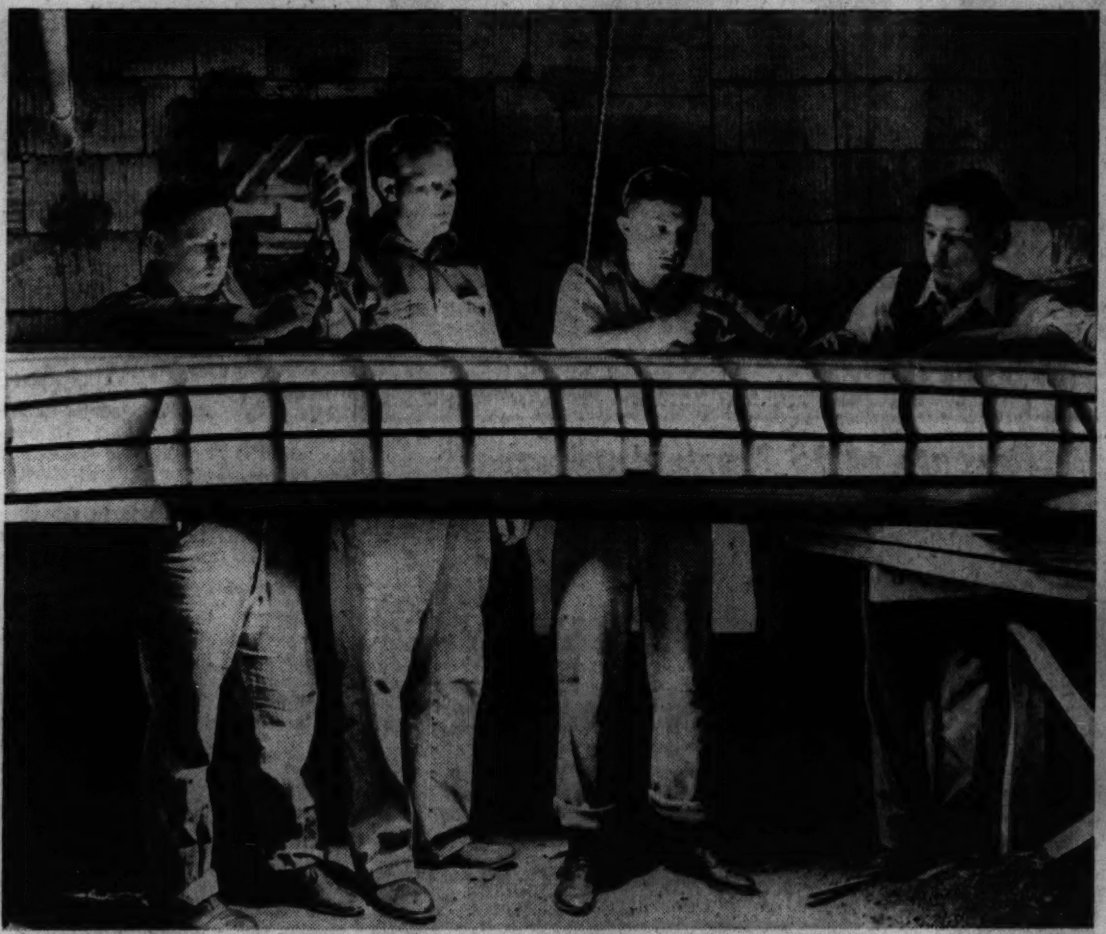
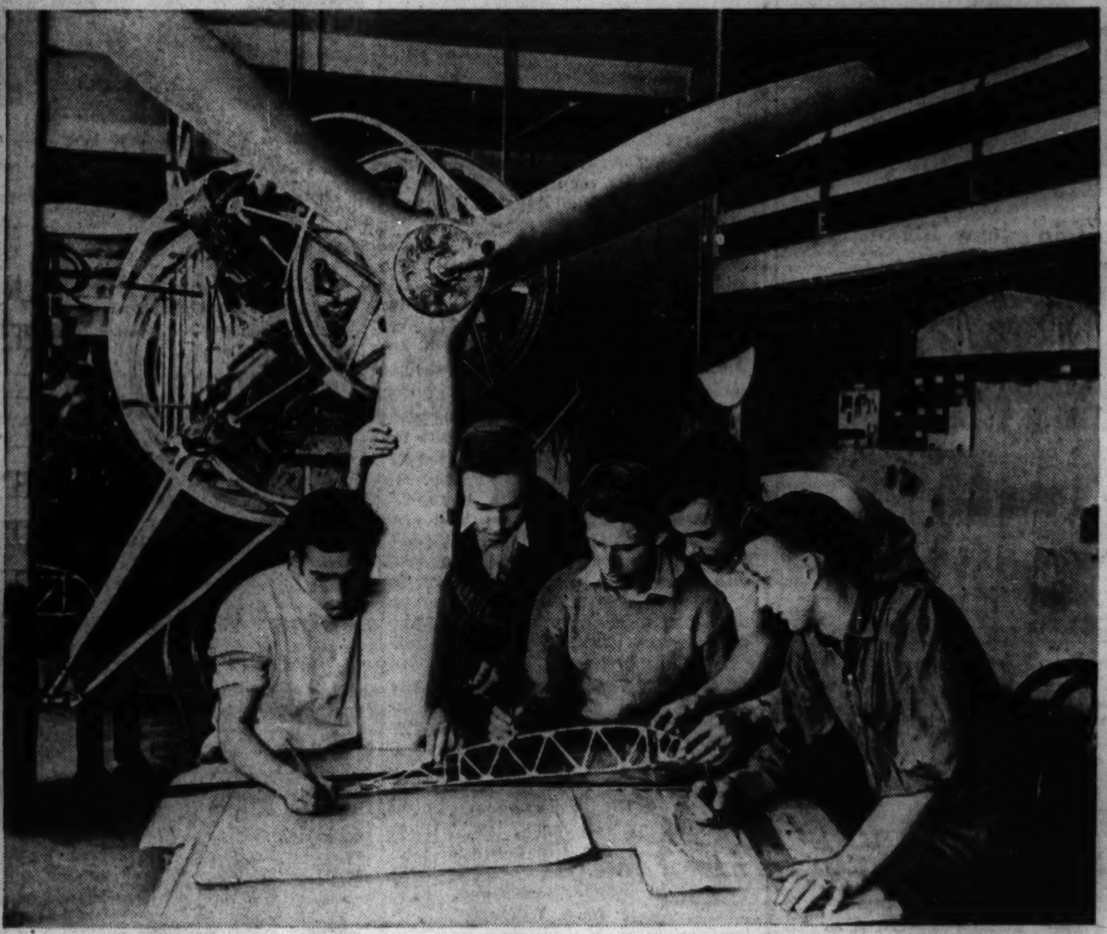
For other fun the boys invite the girls of neighboring schools over for matinée danes. They have a first class band and the stage in the auditorium is almost always in use for play practices.

Morton Grove Faces Suit for Bond Fund Accounting

Suit for an accounting of approximately $20,000 in 1928 and 1929 special assessment bond funds was filed against the village of Morton Grove in Circuit court last week. The action was brought by Knight and Clarence Blanchard and James Schofield, officers of the Blanchard Bondholders Protective committee, 29 South La Salle street. It charges that funds for the retirement of the bonds were co-mingled with the general corporate funds by village officials.

Training at Lane Tech Includes Work in Industries That Are Vital to National Defense





Students at Lane Technical High school will be ready to step into jobs in defense industries when they graduate, for courses at Lane range from boat building to aircraft mechanics. There are no flaws in the kayak which these boys in the boat shop are finishing, as the light in its "innards" shows. The shipwrights are, left to right, are: Walter Jabczynski, Erwin Brinkmann, the instructor; John Wagner, and George Kowalewski. Against a background of airplane props a group is comparing an actual airplane wing rib with its blue print. They are, left to right: Frank Mester, Royal Peterson, Edward Steffen, Albert Sahs, and Art Nelson. The boat building and aeronautics classes are popular ones.

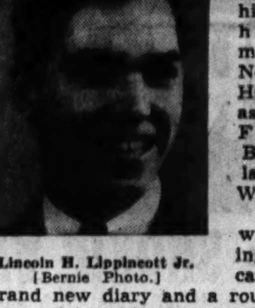
Winnetka Boy Gets Invitation to Adventure

Lincoln H. Lippincott Jr., 6 feet 1 in tall, red headed and 17 years old, is off on an adventure that sets him up with his classmates at New Trier High school as a sort of Frank Buck—Trelawny of Winnetka.



Lincoln H. Lippincott Jr.
[Bernie Photo.]

Armed with fishing tackle, cameras, a brand new diary and a round robin letter from his friends, Linc last Monday boarded a fast California bound train. He was confident but not yet completely recovered from bewilderment at his good luck. After months of hopeful waiting, he was on his way to meet Capt. John D. Craig, the deep sea explorer and photographer, in Los Angeles.

To Accompany Capt. Craig.

From that city, Craig and his party, with young Lippincott as a new member of the crew, will sail on the S. S. Lurline on a few months' exploration of Hawaiian waters.

Ever since the boy read Craig's book, "Danger Is My Business," an account of a diver's encounters with octopi, killer whales, sharks, and the terrible manta rays, Linc has had one dream—to be one of Craig's men.

Then a few months ago came an opportunity to meet the explorer when Craig gave a lecture at New Trier. Linc buttonholed the speaker after the lecture. Craig listened, asked questions, contemplatively rubbed his chin. What was Lippincott's ultimate ambition?

He wanted a career in the United States navy, the young man confided. He hoped to get an appointment to Annapolis after he finished high school. A trip with Craig, learning about diving, subsurface photography, how to handle a boat—that would be an invaluable preliminary, he thought, to training for naval service.

Invitation to Adventure.

Craig saw the point. At that stage plans for the next trip still were tentative, but when they shaped up, Craig promised he'd think the matter over and let Lippincott know. The explorer's telegram, inviting Linc to join the expedition, arrived on the Friday previous to his departure.

A junior this term at New Trier, Linc is vice president of his class. He has taken the star part in school dramatic productions, is quarterback on the football squad, is a member on the swimming team and has served as guard at the school swimming pool.

To Film Sea Sports.

He has been an Eagle Boy Scout since he was in junior high school, and is a veteran Rocky Mountain camper. This year the Winnetka legionnaires named him to be New Trier's representative at Boy's State, a week's convention of students in Springfield, held under American Legion sponsorship; this privilege he will be obliged to resign. All this, together with good scholarship, makes him a TNT honor man. His home in Winnetka is at 915 Ash street.

On the forthcoming photographic exploration, Craig and his men will work off the Cona coast, Place New Stop Signs.

Twelve new stop signs have been erected in and around the Great Lakes Naval Training station by the Chicago Motor club to reduce accident hazards caused by increased activity around the station.

Three planes are harbored in the airplane shop at Lane and the boys have practiced so hard tearing them down and putting them together again that one has been worn out. These boys are bracing and redesigning a plane wing for the worn out ship. They are, left to right: George Fischer, Edward Strauch, Edward Schluth, and Richard McLoughlin.

Suburb Square Steppers Stop Season's Swing

For their windup meeting tomorrow, members of the square dancing group at the Evanston First Methodist church will swing their partners on the green in front of Garrett Biblical Institute.

Every one who has attended a dance session since the group started on March 31 is expected to turn up for the outdoor party. This will mean 50 or more persons, according to Miss Marjorie Johnson, the caller. She drew on her training in group work at Northwestern university and in three settlements to sponsor this social activity after several persons suggested it on "participation" questionnaires sent out by the church board of education.

Violin Student to Fiddle.

The regular dancers have perfected three of the most popular dances, "Indian Style," "Swing Like Thunder," and "Old Arkansas." These will be included in tomorrow's program. Fiddle playing will be by Robert Beers, a violin student in the Northwestern school of music, accompanied by Elizabeth Hull.

Robert fiddles because it's in his blood. His grandfather played the fiddle at barn dances many years ago and some of his original tunes have been heard again this spring in the Evanston church.

"Single File, Indian Style."

Miss Johnson studied square dancing seriously, since it is a part of her profession, but she forgets its work once she starts calling. Over the yelps and whooping of the "Indian Style" dance one can hear her shouting, "First couple out to the couple on the right, four hands around and re-sashy. Break that circle with the lady in the lead. Single file, Indian style, turn and swing her once in a while."

An equally strenuous dance is "Swing like Thunder." The call gives you the general idea: "Ladies bow and gents bow under; hold your hold and swing like thunder." After every one catches his breath, then comes the call for "Old Arkansas"; "First lady out to the couple on the right. Swing your man and swing your paw, and don't forget old Arkansas."

By that time every one is ready for a week of sleep. Tomorrow night's dancers will have three months to recover before the group meets again next fall.

GIRL, 15, CHOSEN FOR JUNIOR ACTING ROLES IN MUMMERS' THEATER

Phoebe Boas, 15 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Boas, 1158 Farwell avenue, was chosen last week to play junior rôles with the Chicago Mummers theater during its summer season at Charlevoix, Mich., from July 4 to Aug. 23.

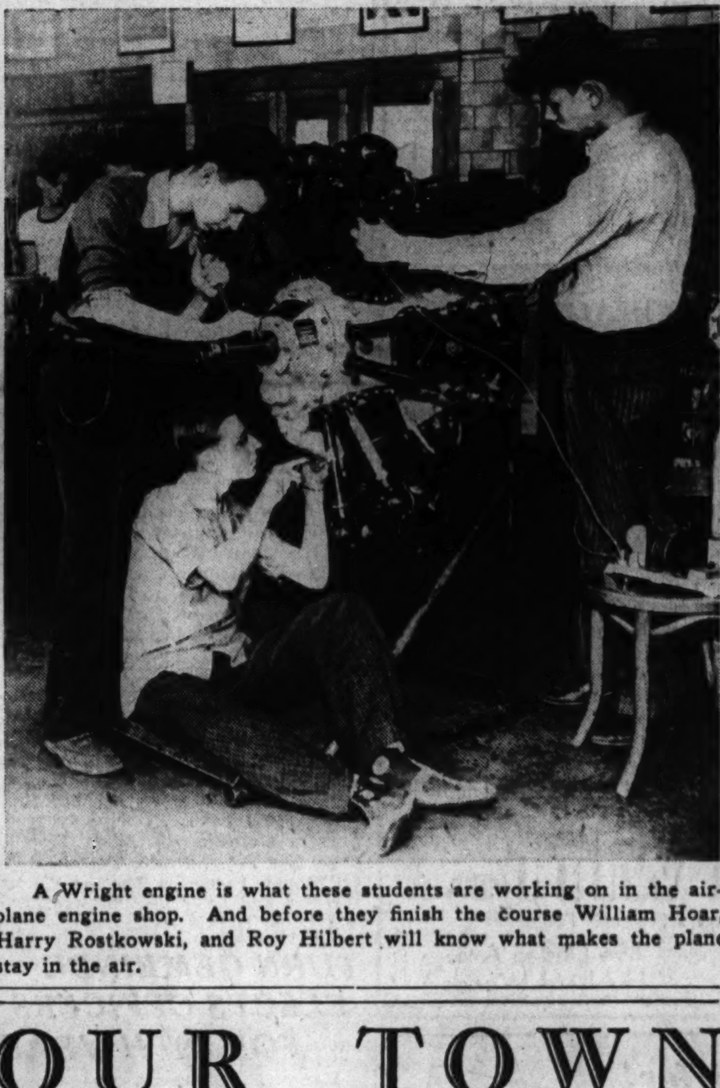
Miss Boas has been a student in the children's class of the Mummers' school during the last year. The summer season affords amateurs an opportunity to work with professionals in the production of recent Broadway shows.

STUDENT PILOT IS DEWEY CHOICE FOR WEST POINT

Hopes of attending the United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y., came a little nearer realization last week for three north side youths—including one who has already enlisted in the army. They received principal and alternate appointments to the academy from United States Representative Charles S. Dewey [R., 9th district].

Winners of the appointments are Andrew J. Herstel, 1627 Sedgwick street, principal; Wallace Moore, 3824 Pine Grove avenue, first alternate, and Warren Fox, 1010 Altgeld street, second alternate.

Herstel, 17 years old, is now a student at the Lewis School of Aeronautics at Lockport. Moore, 19, enlisted in the army last September and is now stationed at Scott field, Ill. Fox, who is 18, was recently graduated from Lane Technical High school in the upper quarter of his class.



A Wright engine is what these students are working on in the airplane engine shop. And before they finish the course William Hoar, Harry Rostkowski, and Roy Hilbert will know what makes the plane stay in the air.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

Personality, according to Miss Rosalyn Tiger, 1646 Albion avenue, is something that one must acquire, and not an inherited virtue. Miss Tiger, who is a student at the Washburne Trade school, should know, for she recently won a diamond personality pin in the third national personality contest on Northwestern university's downtown campus. Upon graduation from Sullivan High school in February, 1940, Miss Tiger entered Wright Junior college, where she was crowned prom queen in May, 1940. She recently began a five month secretarial course at Washburne. Other Washburne winners in the contest was Eva Kellner, 4510 North Racine avenue, and Nancy Durse, 1016 North Cleveland avenue.

Seymour B. Weinstein, 6615 Greenview avenue, was one of 359 senior students honored for outstanding work in their studies at the third all-university honors convocation recently at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. Only members of the senior class with an average of 2.5 in their studies were honored. A grade point average of 3 is perfect at the school.

Baccalaureate services for the senior class will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon at Mundelein college. The speaker will be the Very Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson.

DEAN JOHN W. BEATTIE of the Northwestern university school of music has been selected by the Pan American union, in Washington, D. C., to make a tour of South America this summer in the interest of better understanding among musicians of this hemisphere. He will leave by plane on July 4 and return by mid-September to prepare a report on music education in Latin America. The trip is sponsored jointly by the union and a cultural relations committee of the Council of National Defense.

Three north side artists are among those exhibiting in the current showing of the North Shore Art guild in Mandel Brothers store galleries. They are Otto A. Backer, 4907 North Paulina street; William F. Gingrich, 4829 North Damen avenue; and Paul L. Olson, 4916 North Mozart street. The exhibit will continue thru June 10.

JOHN HIBBARD SANDERS, 2615 Lincoln street, Evanston, has been tapped by Sphinx Head, senior honorary society at Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y. A junior in the arts college, Sanders was one of 26 men elected to the society for the academic year 1941-'42.

Mrs. George Hoppe, 2742 Lincoln avenue, was recently elected president of the state Lioness clubs at their annual convention in Aurora.

THREE Our Towners were among 28 junior college students in all parts of the United States awarded scholarships recently by the University of Chicago. They are Arthur Harvey, 8569 North Lakewood avenue; David J. Doblin, 1517 Jonquil terrace; and Isadore Agron, 1345 Greenleaf avenue. All are students at Wright Junior college. The awards were made on the basis of the ninth annual competitive examination conducted by the university among junior college students. More than 200 students competed this year.

SENIORS TO VOTE ON CHOICES FOR CLASS HONORS

Tribune to Interview Election Winners.

Eighty seven seniors in Catholic high schools on the north side and suburbs have been nominated as outstanding graduates by their teachers. These young people have merited this honor ranking on the basis of their record over a four year period. In each case the teachers considered the student's scholastic standing, his participation in school activities and his attitude towards this business of getting an education.

Most of the students were selected for their extensive records which sometimes seemed to touch every activity offered in the modern high school program. A few were picked because of their persistent work in one field which led to a single outstanding achievement.

Each senior class will choose one outstanding student from among the candidates nominated by the faculty and THE TRIBUNE will print interviews with these young people and their photographs. The nominees are as follows:

THREE SUBURBAN SCHOOLS TO HAVE GRADUATION RITE

Warren Gives Diplomas This Evening.

Three north suburban township high schools, Waukegan, Zion-Benton and Warren in Gurnee, will hold their commencement exercises this week. Seniors in the Wauconda Township High school received their diplomas last Wednesday.

Warren Township High school has established its own custom of holding graduation exercises on Sunday. Sixty graduates will assemble at 11 o'clock this morning in the school gymnasium to hear the senior sermon and convene again at 8 o'clock to receive their diplomas. The Rev. Frank Butterworth, pastor of the Gurnee Community church, will preach in the morning on "Majority Fools."

Program This Evening.

Dr. Paul E. Belting of Springfield, assistant superintendent of public instruction in Illinois, will be the commencement speaker. His topic is "Some Purposes of High Schools." D. W. Thompson, principal, will present the class to E. E. Elsbury, president of the board of education, who will award the diplomas. Between 8 and 8:30 o'clock the school orchestra of 90 pieces will play, under the direction of Karl E. Klauser. Members of the Warren Garden club will furnish the flowers and decorate the gymnasium.

Baccalaureate services for 85 Zion-Benton graduates will be held at 3 o'clock today in the school auditorium in Zion. The Rev. Howard E. Ganster of Christ Episcopal church in Waukegan will speak. Dr. William C. Reavis of the University of Chicago will deliver the commencement address on Tuesday evening.

Name Class Leaders.

James R. Paxton, president of the school board, will present the diplomas. Music will be furnished by the band, directed by Ronald Meeker, and the a cap'ella choir, led by Chester Bagg. William L. Davies, principal, announced last week that David Offner is the valedictorian, and Leland Noll, salutatorian, of the class. There are 23 more graduates than last year.

Waukegan's senior class of 332 students will attend a baccalaureate service at 4 o'clock today, the class night program on Tuesday, and the graduation exercises on Thursday night, all in the school gymnasium. The Rev. Francis Shea of the Immaculate Conception church will preach today, and the Rev. Carl S. Winters, pastor of the Oak Park Baptist church, will consider "The Fine Part of Living" on Thursday.

Everyone in the community is invited to the commencement program, stressed John W. Thalman, principal. Parents will receive special tickets. Minard E. Hulse, president of the board of education, will present the diplomas.

Name Wauconda Graduates.

A musical program will be offered by the school chorus, directed by George E. Schumann, and the orchestra, conducted by Otto Graham. For class night, an original production on the theme of a melting pot, where citizens of many nations are assimilated into a union, will be presented.

Dressed in the clothes they wore 10 years ago on their wedding days, 10½ couples recently celebrated their 10th anniversaries in the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Mann, 1241 Maple avenue, Wilmette. Mrs. L. S. Fosdick of Evanston (first on the left) made the half couple, for her husband was called out of town. Others, left to right, are Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Borg, 1522 Chase avenue; Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Gallie Jr., Wilmette; Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Sprague, Evanston; Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Croft, Evanston; Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Newcomb, Wilmette; Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Mann, Wilmette; Dr. and Mrs. M. H. Seifert, Wilmette; Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Morse, Wilmette; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Allen, Wilmette, and Dr. and Mrs. Peter C. Kronfeld, Wilmette. The Kronfelds were married in Vienna, Austria, and Mrs. Kronfeld is wearing a costume similar to her original wedding dress. Mrs. Croft and Mrs. Morse, who are wearing black, had their gowns dyed for utility purposes, and Mrs. Sprague found an afternoon dress more appropriate for their wedding in the north woods. IN '32 SHE SPOKE NO ENGLISH; GETS DEGREE IN 1941!

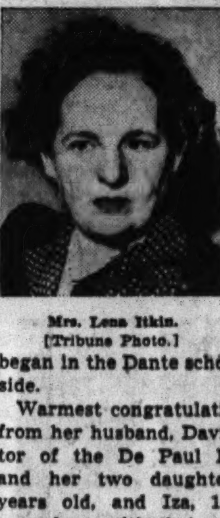
Mother Will Graduate from De Paul.

Nine years ago, when Mrs. Lena Itkin arrived in Chicago from Russia, she did not speak a word of English. On June 11 she will receive her bachelor of arts degree from De Paul university. The degree is a climax to nine years of study which began in the Dante school on the west side.



Mrs. Lena Itkin. [Tribune Photo.]

Warmest congratulations will come from her husband, David Itkin, director of the De Paul Drama school, and her two daughters, Bella, 20 years old, and Iza, 18. The girls came here with their mother in 1932 to join Mr. Itkin, who had been working in Chicago since 1927. Mrs. Itkin began to learn English at Dante, an elementary school for foreigners, which she praises highly.

Learned English in One Year.

"There were 400 of us in one room," she recalled, "but within two weeks we had found those who knew our native tongue. Soon, tho, we were all trying to use our English words and in a year I had learned enough to start my high school course at Tuley."

Mrs. Itkin left each morning for school with her daughters, who also attended an elementary school. Mrs. Itkin completed a four year high school course in three years. In Russia, when she was 15 years old, Mrs. Itkin had begun work as an accountant, but when she came here she decided to specialize in English and history.

She finished the courses for her bachelor degree at De Paul last March and since then has been taking two courses for her master's degree in the graduate school.

"I am still studying," she said, "but it is too difficult to say what I will do later. I love the school work. That's why I try to do so much."

Favorite Studies History, English.

In her early forties Mrs. Itkin is shy and hesitates to speak about her work, but her teachers and daughters call it "brilliant." Both girls are planning stage careers. Bella is a student in the Goodman theater and Iza is a freshman in the De Paul college of liberal arts. Tho Mrs. Itkin is surrounded by dramatic enthusiasts, and loves the art herself, she is not turning to it for a career.

"English and history are my favorite subjects," she explained, "and the more I study, the more I realize that there is so much to learn. No, I have not been back to Moscow," she answered, "and do not think I ever will return. My husband and I are naturalized Americans. We received our papers three years ago, and this is our home now."

TRAINING CAMP NEWS

Eight north side and suburban residents were among the 534 officers recently graduated from the army's Medical Field service school at Carlisle Barracks, Carlisle, Pa. The school, established shortly after the first world war, trains physicians, dentists, veterinarians, sanitary engineers, and members of the medical administrative corps.

Among the graduates were Captains Delmar Eichler Domke, Highland Park, and James Kenneth Goldstene, 30 West Chicago avenue, and First Lieutenants Adolph Maller, 4406 Clarendon avenue; Orville Gordon, 2649 Carmen avenue; Harvey Gaynes, 720 Waveland avenue; George Freedman, 732 Bittersweet place; Mario V. Cook, 6522 Glenwood avenue, and Albert F. Stein, 5625 Kenmore avenue.

Altho some of the men graduated were of the regular army and a few from the National Guard, the majority were reserve officers now on active duty because of the national emergency.

Capt. Harvey M. Hopp, a resident of Wilmette for 30 years who now lives at 817 Forest avenue, Highland Park, was recently promoted to the rank of major at Fort Sheridan. A volunteer in the first world war, Maj. Hopp participated in two major offensives in France and received the Distinguished Service Cross. A reserve officer, he received his captain's commission in 1931 after being graduated from the cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kas. He was called to active duty last October and has since been assigned to the records section of north shore reception center.

Fred Thompson, 25, 2828 Sheridan road, was recently promoted to the rank of corporal at Fort Sheridan after only five months in the army. Prior to his induction, Corporal Thompson taught in a rural school in southwest Missouri. He is now serving as assistant to the reception center chaplains.

Henry A. Hensley, 542 Waukegan avenue, Highwood, has been promoted to the rank of sergeant and is now a barracks leader at Fort Sheridan. Sergt. Hensley has been in the service four years, two and one-half of which were spent in Hawaii.

At Fort Bragg, N. C., Roy G. Larson, 4510 Beacon street, has been promoted to the rank of corporal in the 26th field artillery battalion.

Somebody's Spreading PROPAGANDA about

The SKOKIE VALLEY LAUNDRY

It has just been brought to our attention that there are a number of people in the Skokie Valley spreading rumors about the kind of laundry and cleaning work we do.

Just the other day the following conversation took place between two prominent housewives in a private room somewhere off Sheridan Road in Winnetka:

"You know M———, for years I've had my linens done by a laundress because I thought all laundries used strong acids, chemicals and bleaches to get clothes clean. Then my laundress took sick and I called the SKOKIE VALLEY LAUNDRY. That's five weeks ago and do you know I've received more than one surprise since then. The Skokie routeman had a marvelous set of photographs which showed the methods used to professionally launder clothes in a modern laundry operating under standards set by the famed AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF LAUNDERING. Through these pictures and a visit I actually made to this beautiful new laundry I've convinced myself that the Skokie Laundry is actually easier on my clothes than any method I could use in my home."

Now it isn't our intention to put a stop to such propaganda as this. This sort of thing has been going on for a long time. Naturally we can't stop people from TALKING . . . particularly about that glorious new . . .

SHOWER STALL CAN FILL ODD NOOK IN MANY A HOME

Complete Unit Available for Easy Placing.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There need be nothing expensive—any more—about a shower stall installation in the home. Still less expensive is the shower over the tub. Showers can start at the bottom, in your basement, or at the top in your attic.

A shower has been called the great American institution, the nation's morning pickup. There is nothing really new about it, since an ancient Babylonian king modernized his palace some 5,000 years ago and installed a shower stall for his own use. His plumber was wise enough to insist on a waterproof floor with a drain made of clay tile, and it was built a trifle large—some 15 feet square—since slaves had to do the "showering." Servants instead of pipes sprayed water over the king in those by-gone days.

Wide Range of Prices.

New showers and stalls aren't limited to royalty or to the rich, for an everyday basement can have a stall. Nice, neat leakproof unit assemblies are on the market, in a wide range of prices. A shower can be installed over an existing bathtub without tearing out the walls, or one can take advantage, perhaps, of an unneeded closet and make it over into a shower and dressing room.

There are cabinets which are independent of the walls of a room and for this reason are especially fine for modernization work. And these cabinet shower stalls, whether de luxe or of inexpensive gavanized steel with duck curtains, are grand places to relax when the temperature soars and vacations are a long way off, or far in the past.

Stalls Are Durable.

These modern stalls come tailored to fit almost any wall or corner and they are manufactured for hard knocks and the ceaseless demands of every day living.

There is shower equipment for all family ages, from 8 months to 80 years and water tight shower inclosures can be set down in your home, self-sufficient units, to stay with you for keeps.

Receptors can be of rubber, of porcelain enamel and compositions. There's a receptor which has been given a nonslippery feature by a special method of infusing certain ingredients into the porcelain receptor coating. So that whether your stall floor is dry or wet, it isn't slippery.

Shower heads are designed to save water by directing it all at the bather and at the same time aerating it so its effect may be soothing.

MUNDELEIN WILL GRADUATE 63 GIRLS TOMORROW

Mundelein college's 10th graduating class has the largest number of honor students in the history of the college. Stritch will deliver the address and confer the diplomas.

Mary Caroline Bemis and Winifred Greenspahn are candidates for the bachelor of arts degree summa cum laude. This Week in the Garden

Monday, June 2.

Sow seeds of hardy plants. The young can be transplanted into rows in a sunny spot by July. The plants will develop and be well able to withstand the winter without injury. Sowing the seed thinly will make transplanting unnecessary; in fact, all kinds of seed should not be sown to thickly.

The pruning of spring flowering shrubs should be done after they are thru blooming because the branches that bore the flowers can be cut away without injury and new growths will be forced into strong growth with abundant buds. Forsythia, bridal wreath, Van Houtte's spirea, shadbush, and many others require this treatment.

Tuesday, June 3.

Keep edges of walks and beds well trimmed. Cultivation should continue to keep down the weeds and give full opportunity for the plants to grow. However, where perennials grow close together care must be taken not to injure the roots. Mulch these plants about July 1 and avoid excessive cultivation and the necessity of frequent watering.

Wednesday, June 4.

Plant tender waterlilies. Use a rich soil and do not overplant. Give full sun. An application of liquit manure to peonies will give larger blooms. Plant dahlia roots and place stakes at the same time. Plant about three feet apart. Sow portulaca in sunny places.

Thursday, June 5.

Cut back the old flower stalks of the iris and do not permit the plant to form seeds. Transplanting may take place after flowering. Use good sized divisions. Cut back the leaves to six inches. Do not plant too deep. Do not plant bedding plants while the soil is dry; water the plants thoroly before planting.

Friday, June 6.

Home gardeners having outdoor space will find that the house plants will do much better if placed outdoors. Palms, ferns, and similar plants should be in shade, altho some palms, like the date palm, will do well anywhere.

Saturday, June 7.

Sow sweet corn now. Sow again in 10 days for a late crop. Mulch both sides of the sweet pea row with decayed manure, grass clipping, or other material; watch for aphids and spray with tobacco or Black Leaf 40. Spray potatoes with arsenate of lead the minute a potato beetle is noticed.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

"I like Cooley's," says Mrs. W——, young Evanston mother and socialite, because—well, first, of course, because of the unusually fine food...but secondly because they have such fine service and facilities for taking care of my two youngsters. Somehow or other they seem to take to Cooley's like a duck to water and keeping my children quiet and happy at meal time is really something.

Yes, Cooley's is the favorite of many people for many reasons. Such popularity is well understood once you've tried a Sunday dinner here.

FIND MARRIAGE LICENSE SHOWS HAVE BIG APPEAL

If you know a woman who doesn't like to talk about marriages and brides, you know the woman who isn't a steady listener to Quin Ryan's W-G-N program, "Marriage License Bureau Romances," aired at 1:30 p. m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from the office of County Clerk Michael J. Flynn.

Picking four couples at random from the large throng at the counter of the world's busiest marriage license bureau, Ryan interviews them with heart-to-heart questions.

In the six years the program has been a W-G-N feature no story has had more appeal than the recent case of a blind girl and her nearly blind husband to be. The bride-to-be, Dorothy Fevrus, wrote to Ryan and asked if she and her future husband could be interviewed on his program. They were invited to take part in the show and during the interview the listening public learned that the girl's fiancé could only do odd jobs. As a result of the broadcast hundreds of people attended the girl's wedding and the couple was swamped with wedding gifts.

Having Time of Life with W-G-N Show.

With all the headaches that result from producing a radio show, Paul Fogarty, W-G-N producer, is having the time of his life staging the "Ask-It-Ball" quiz programs, broadcast from various army posts and navy stations at 7 p. m. Saturdays on W-G-N. Fogarty, who joined the army in 1917 and retired in 1923 as a captain, is meeting old friends and making new friends every week as he tours with the show.

Paul Fogarty.

Ask-It-Ball follows the general theme of baseball with the soldiers or sailors answering questions on 15 subjects ranging from sports and movies to geography and the army and navy. Correct answers pay from $1 to $4 to the man who answers the question and count from a single to a home run for the team.

Fogarty was on active duty at one of the camps that is taking part in the program. He served as a bayonet instructor at Camp Grant in 1920. During his period of service he also visited many of the other units that are now playing Ask-It-Ball.

Graduating from Notre Dame in 1917, Fogarty went to the officers training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis. Receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in the infantry, he was sent to numerous camps as an instructor in bayonet drill and calisthenics.

Leaving the army, Fogarty went to Culver, where he became an instructor in military science. After this period of military life he retired and entered private business.

He is the author of the comic strip "Draftie," appearing in many papers. He has produced numerous radio shows over W-G-N and other stations and is the composer of the popular song hit, "Betty Co-ed."

4 MUSIC EXPERTS TO MATCH WITS ON MUSIC QUIZ

Four experts in music and its related fields will attempt to answer puzzlers sent in by the public on "Your Music I. Q." on W-G-N from 8:30 to 9 p. m. tomorrow. Pierre Andre will be master of ceremonies.

The first expert will be Maurice McGehee, director of Sharps and Flats, a choral group which is associated with Chicago's Urban League chorus. The second will be Siegmund Levarie, instructor in music at the University of Chicago.

From the Glass Hat of the Congress hotel will come Jean Browne, featured vocalist at this night spot. She will be expected to handle questions on popular music. Raymond Henagow, assistant editor of the Lincoln-Belmont Booster, will be the fourth.

HELEN HAYES IN 'FAREWELL TO ARMS' TONIGHT

Responding to numerous requests, Helen Hayes has decided to enact the rôle of Catharine Barkley, the English nurse, in a radio adaptation of the great love story, "Farewell to Arms," in her own theater of the air over WBBM-CBS at 9:30 tonight.

Miss Hayes played the same rôle in the motion picture. Gary Cooper was her leading man. She was also heard as the English nurse in a radio version of the story on Oct. 13, shortly after the start of her series of dramas. Since that time she has been receiving a steady stream of mail asking her to repeat the performance.

All the boxing bouts, including championship contests, promoted by the Twentieth Century Sporting club of New York will be broadcast over stations of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation, as well as Mutual. The Mutual system has received the exclusive right to broadcast all Twentieth Century bouts and will feed a description of the matches to the Canadian listeners as well as to a coast-to-coast audience in the United States. First of the championship contests scheduled for the Mutual series is the Joe Louis-Billy Conn world heavyweight bout at New York's Polo Grounds on Wednesday, June 18. W-G-N will be the local outlet.

BENNY TO AIR LAST PROGRAM FOR NAVY LADS

"Jack Benny comin' 'longside!" will be the cry of lookouts at the United States Naval Training station at San Diego at 6 p. m. today over WMAQ.

Benny was a gob himself during 1917-'18, and it was at another naval training station on the Great Lakes that he blossomed out as a comedian while in Uncle Sam's service. As a "seasoned" sailor Jack is certain in his well-known fatherly way to try and impart some of his vast nautical knowledge to the tyro tars who will attend the broadcast.

Mary Livingstone, Dennis Day, Phil Harris, and Don Wilson, with previous experience of the Benny seamanship while on a San Francisco-Oakland ferryboat, are lashing down all loose gear. This is the last Benny program of the season.

LEON BENDITSKY IS SOLOIST ON MELODY PAGEANT

Kathryn Witwer Will Sing Three Solos.

A piano version of Cadman's "Dark Dances of the Mardi Gras" by Leon Benditsky, will highlight the Pageant of Melody over W-G-N and Mutual from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m. tomorrow. The program will be directed by Henry Weber.

Kathryn Witwer, noted soprano, will be featured in three solos: Chausson's "Time of Lilacs," "A Birthday" by Woodman, and the famous "Indian Love Call" by Friml. She will be supported by the chorus in the last song.

The orchestra wil offer Reznicek's "Donna Diana Overture," Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Dance of the Tumblers" from "Snow-Maiden," and the "España Rhapsody" by Chabrier.

Benditsky has been with W-G-N since 1924. The complete program follows:

SARAH BURTON JOINS CAST OF 'ALWAYS YOUNG'

Sarah Burton, British-American actress, has been added to the cast of "We Are Always Young," W-G-N-Mutual daytime serial, keeping intact the program's claim that only stage and screen "name" players are cast in the play. She will play the part of a debutante.

Now an American citizen, Miss Burton has been in this country for a little over six years, playing important rôles in such plays as "What a Life" and the Bea Lillie revue, "Set to Music."

While Bergen and Disney talk about their brain-children, Charlie will be making eyes at Ruth Terry.

SEWAGE WORKS TO REDUCE ODORS

CATHOLIC HIGH GRADS TO NAME STAR STUDENTS

Teachers Nominate Class Leaders.

June graduates in Catholic high schools thruout the city will cast their votes this week in their respective schools for a member they deem best qualified to exemplify his class and be its spokesman in an interview with THE TRIBUNE. Last week the principal or faculty at each school posted a list of nominees from whom the class is to make its selection. These candidates were named on the basis of scholarship, school leadership, and civic enterprise.

In interviewing senior class leaders, both in the public and Catholic high schools, THE TRIBUNE follows a long established practice. There is this June, however, an important difference in the manner of selecting the students for interviews. Heretofore, the principal in each school has named several senior leaders, of whom THE TRIBUNE subsequently printed brief biographies and pictures. This year the class is to have a voice in choosing a representative. In the Metropolitan sections of June 15 the results of the elections in the Catholic high schools will be announced and stories of the class representatives together with their pictures will appear.

Seniors voting in the nine Catholic high schools on the southwest side tomorrow will choose, each class one representative, from among the following candidates:

ST. RITA HIGH SCHOOL.

Southwest District Scouts Hold Family Day Picnic Saturday

The Kuehne family and some of the kids from next door test out the weather, setting, and sandwiches for the southwest district Boy Scout family day picnic. Scouts, their parents, and relatives, some 5,000 strong, will gather Saturday for an afternoon and evening of sports, music, and a campfire chat at Camp Kiwanis in Palos Hills. Cub Master Harold H. Kuehne of 440 Normal parkway, is the man seated at the right. Others in the semicircle, left to right, are Bob Kuehne, Bill Mason, Mrs. H. G. Kuehne, H. H. Keuhne, Mrs. Harold Keuhne, Louis Kuehne, and (the lad with the long reach) Russell Bliss. In the background, waiting their turn, are Charles Zwissler and William Koch. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

City's Indians Will Dance to Swing Music

Indians will sway to the rhythm of swing music Saturday evening at the annual dance and card party sponsored by the Indian Council Fire in the Blue room of the Southmoor hotel. Costumed Indians, including Robinson Whirling Thunder, 4644 Lake Park avenue, the organization's president, will supply the entertainment.

Chief Whirling Thunder.

The Indian Council Fire was formed in 1923 to bring about a better understanding between the red and white races, as well as for the advancement of the rights and welfare of Indians. Currently most of the importnat offices are filled by Indians and there is an Indian majority on the board of directors. Half of the membership is Indian.

Has Scholarship Fund.

The group meets on the first Sunday afternoon of every month from October to May. The organization has an emergency fund to provide food, clothes, and employment for local Indians, and a scholarship fund for schools and summer camps. At Christmas clothes, toys, food, and candy are sent to children living on nearby reservations and to Indian children in Chicago.

Some of the south side Indians who are members of the organization are Lafayette M. Connor, a Chippewa who operates a barber and beauty shop at 1302 East 61st street; Harold Johns, a Winnebago who works at the United States Indian warehouse; Miss Edith Johns, 4645 Lake Park avenue, a Winnebago who practices as a trained nurse; Mrs. Anna Harris, 3259 West 66th street, the Sioux wife of a white airplane pilot; Peter Powlas of Midlothian, an Oneida who works in a garage, and George Smith, Cherokee student at George Williams college.

Instructor in Archery.

Whirling Thunder is an instructor in Indian lore and archery for the park district. At the organization's annual Indian day program, a benefit affair in April, Indian members, in costume, present native songs, dances, and ceremonies.

NORTH BEVERLY CIVIC PLANNERS TO HAVE PARTY

Square dances are listed on the program arranged by Chairman George W. Engelhardt, 8634 South Paulina street.

Supporting Engelhardt on the committee in charge are John Johannsen, Floyd Ely, and the president of the association, James B. Leibforth. Funds raised by the party are to go toward the purchase of a weed cutter and snow plow.

The group going to Peru will have headquarters at Lima.

The trips are sponsored by the Frank B. Kellogg Foundation and the Experiment in International Living, centered at Putney, Va.

ARTS ACADEMY STUDENTS WILL EXHIBIT WORK

Five young artists and designers from southwest side communities will be represented in the annual student exhibition of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, 18 South Michigan avenue, opening Thursday to continue thru Sunday. Bernice Grossman of 11553 South Oakley avenue and Grayce Blossom Lucas of 8026 South May street, students of dress design, will show models in a fashion parade. Paintings will be exhibited by Edith Kay Anderson of 340 Normal parkway, Ruth Butler of 7429 Parnell avenue and George Koske of 5752 South Fairfield avenue.

Miss Anderson and Miss Butler recently took prizes in an international poster contest sponsored by the Latham foundation in New York.

The forthcoming exhibition marks the 40th anniversary of the academy, which was founded by Carl N. Werntz, now president emeritus of the school. Mrs. Ruth Van Sickle Ford succeeded Mr. Werntz to the active presidency. During the exhibition the galleries of the academy will be open to the public from 9 in the morning to 9 at night on the first three days and from 10 to 5 o'clock Sunday. The students of design will conduct their fashion show on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings.

Club Gardeners to Visit Conservatory Wednesday

Headed by Mrs. Benson Bates, garden chairman, the garden circle of the Neighborhood Woman's club will visit Garfield park conservatory at 11:30 o'clock Wednesday. The club holds its meetings at the Ogden park fieldhouse, Racine avenue and 65th street.

City's 'Sleepy Hollow' Has No Headless Rider

A headless horseman, a frightened schoolmaster, and a Dutch farmer's pretty daughter are the figures in the plot situation of Washington Irving's "Legend of Sleepy Hollow," Chicago has its own Sleepy Hollow. A real estate subdividing company and a mailman named "Tom" created it. It was in 1913 that the Frederick Bartlett company subdivided the swampy land bounded by Cicero avenue on the west and Knox avenue on the east, 42d street on the north, and 47th on the south. When the first settlers moved in "Tom" [no one still living there recalls his other name] drove out to deliver the mail. The subdividers had called the place Stickney. But Tom called it Sleepy Hollow, and the name stuck. The residents laughed and called it Sleepy Hollow too.

Mrs. Walter Newhouse was a very small girl when her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yara, moved out to Sleepy Hollow and built the home in which Mrs. Newhouse still resides at 4734 West 47th street. "Ours was the third house out here," she recalls. "There were about 47 houses put up here in 1913, 1914, and 1915, and then building stopped. There have been perhaps three or four since. You see, the Belt railroad cuts us off on the east. We have to go to 55th street to get past it, so we've just stayed out here in Sleepy Hollow."

Raised the Roof—Literally.

Those first years hold memories of many happy times, however. The Bohemian, Polish, German, the few Irish families who went out to Sleepy Hollow knew how to make a good time of working. "We really did raise a roof now and then," Mrs. Newhouse laughs. "I mean literally. When a new house was going up the neighbors went over to help raise the roof, and some one would bring a concertina and every one would dance."

Sleepy Hollow was swampy until the sewer went in 15 years ago. The mud and water were so bad that workers used to wear rubber boots on the way to the street car line at Archer and Cicero avenues. "Then every one would put his boots behind the counter at the terminal waiting room there," Mrs. Newhouse explains, "and the man who had the concession would watch them until the workers came back at night."

Form Fire Fighters' Club.

Another bit of Sleepy Hollow history is the story of the club organized by Charles Mattick. "He set up a plan so every one could help in case of fire," Mrs. Newhouse says, "and he made a lot of the social side of the club, too. But now the old timers have moved away, or they have died, and no one keeps up Mr. Mattick's social club."

The Yaras, Mrs. Newhouse's folks, had the first car in Sleepy Hollow. They bought it in 1916, and the whole neighborhood turned out to look at it and to take turns riding.

Residents Still Isolated.

The community is still much set apart. Sleepy Hollow children go to portable schoolhouses until they're in fifth grade, when they're big enough to hike off to a larger grade school. High school students go to Lindblom or Harrison. The prairies west of Cicero avenue and south of 47th street were truck farms when Sleepy Hollow was laid out. Now the truck farms are gone, but there are still wide open spaces where the wind swirls thru the long grasses. Workers from Sleepy Hollow must still go to Archer and Cicero to get a street car.

"Nearly every one here is in an industry on the west or southwest side of the city," Mrs. Newhouse says. "It would be difficult for us to get to the loop. We've heard that 47th street may be cut thru the Belt line elevation, but we don't mind being out here by ourselves. It's quiet and we have plenty of air and sun." Time was when there were plenty of cows, ducks, pigs, and chickens to enjoy the fresh air and the sunshine. But the children and grandchildren of the old timers haven't carried on that part of the tradition. They just preserve the community name—Sleepy Hollow.

YOUNG WOMEN FORM EVENING AUXILIARY OF CHICAGO LAWN CLUB

Sixty young women, most of whom are from the Chicago Lawn district, have formed a new organization and established affiliation with the Third district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. The group will be known as the Chicago Lawn Young Woman's club. Mrs. Charles Keeler, who recently moved from 6134 South Parkside avenue to Evergreen Park, has been elected president.

Mrs. Charles Keeler. [Vaslow Photo.]

The club is an outgrowth of the Chicago Lawn Junior Woman's club, junior auxiliary of the Chicago Lawn Woman's club. Desiring to undertake senior club activities, but precluded from taking an active part in the mother club's program because of their occupations, the majority of the auxiliary members withdrew to become an independent club. The junior department of the mother club will have a membership drive, replacing its depleted membership with girls of high school and college age.

Since most of the members work during the day, when the new club opens activities in the fall it will hold evening meetings at Marquette park fieldhouse, Kedzie avenue and 67th street.

Other officers elected with Mrs. Keeler are Miss Kathryn Reilly, 3654 West 64th street, vice president; Mrs. Kenneth Stonebraker, Oak Lawn, recording secretary; Miss Marie Fau, 3512 West 66th place, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Kenneth Hoff, 3710 West 60th place, treasurer.

FRIEND OF TEDDY ROOSEVELT WILL LECTURE TONIGHT

Dr. Robert S. McClenahan, dean of the school of oriental studies of the American university in Cairo, Egypt, will be the guest speaker at 7:45 o'clock tonight at Thoburn Methodist church, 64th and Paulina streets. He will discuss "Problems of the East Mediterranean Area."

It was Dr. McClenahan who in 1910 accompanied Theodore Roosevelt from the Sudan frontier down the Nile to Alexandria. Col. Roosevelt said of him when they parted: "He has been my guide, counselor, and friend, and sometimes my conscience."

Shortly before his departure for America Dr. McClenahan was received in private audience by the king of Egypt.

SPRING FLOWER SHOWS TO GREET JUNE IN SUBURBS

Flossmoor Club Will Exhibit Friday.

As suburban Chicago settles knee deep in June, gardeners are preparing either to display their finest blooms at community flower shows or are organizing trips to spots of horticultural interest. In Flossmoor the annual flower show of the Garden club is set for Friday afternoon and evening in the community house. The Blue Island Garden club will hold its exhibit on the following Thursday in the fieldhouse of Memorial park.

A tour of Beverly Hills gardens has been announced for Thursday by the garden department of the Beverly Hills Woman's club in the series of spring and summer trips which already have directed the members on a May pilgrimage to Lombard when the lilacs were at the height of their bloom, to Morton arboretum and to the Old Mill road estate in Lake Forest, recently acquired by the University of Chicago by gift from Albert D. Lasker.

Hours of Flossmoor Show.

The Flossmoor show will open at 2:30 o'clock Friday and continue until 10. Mrs. Elwood F. Rapelye, heading the committee on management, will accept entries from 7 to 10 in the morning, and the judges will place ribbon awards before the opening hour. Mrs. Rapelye has announced that exhibits and visitors from neighboring towns will be welcomed. The premium list for entries, prepared by Kenneth Nelson and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Burdett, may be obtained from Mr. Nelson, whose home is on Argyle avenue in Flossmoor.

Diversified classifications will insure a comprehensive array of arrangements and specimen exhibits of flowers, plants, and berries. Among the more unusual arrangements will be breakfast, after dinner coffee, wine service, and terrace trays, and settings, card table size for breakfast, luncheon for four, bridge luncheon and tea, all to be judged for color harmony, suitability, and proportion. The children will have their own room for table and floral exhibits. There is to be a fortune teller, and the committee will install a refreshments booth.

Members of Committees.

E. B. English is president of the Flossmoor club. Among the members assisting Mrs. Rapelye on the flower show committee are Mrs. Burdett, acting as chairman of judges; Mrs. Kenneth Nelson, who has charge of receiving and classifying entries; Mrs. W. D. Hamilton, in charge of arrangements; Mrs. Myrtle coleman, chairman of the table arrangements section; Chester Nelson, managing cartage; Mrs. Brice B. Reeves, chairman of the children's exhibit; Mrs. Graham Jacobus, in charge of boutonnieres; Mrs. H. J. Jacobson, chairman of the hospitality committee, and Mrs. Edward L. Murfey, in charge of refreshments.

Mrs. Charles A. Ford, representing the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, will take all the flowers to the Oak Forest home after the show.

The Blue Island show also will include a special junior department, and the entire community is invited to participate by exhibiting flowers and plants in the regular displays. There are to be no entry fees nor admittance charge.

Tour on Thursday.

In Beverly Hills, Woman's club members making the Thursday tour of gardens in the community are to assemble at 1 o'clock at Ridge park Fieldhouse. The round of visits ends with tea in Mrs. Richard E. Owen's garden at 9609 Hoyne avenue. Two other trips have been arranged for June, a visit to Sauk Trails park on Monday, June 16, for which the group will assemble at 10:30 o'clock, each person bringing her own picnic lunch, and on Saturday, June 28, the annual garden walk, with horticultural exhibit, arranged by the Lake Forest Garden club. The assembly hour for the Lake Forest trip will be at 9:30 o'clock.

Mrs. C. F. Farwell, 9631 Vanderpoel avenue, is chairman of garden tours for the Beverly Hills club.

PLAN 11 MILLION OUTLAY TO STOP CANAL NUISANCE

Project to Require 2 Years Work.

Work is being rushed on the $11,633,427 expansion of facilities of the west and southwest side sewage treatment works, it was announced last week by Ross A. Woodhull, president of the sanitary district.

His announcement came soon after the United States Supreme court had refused the state's plea that it modify its 1930 decree to permit a temporary increase in the lake diversion flow thru the Illinois-Michigan waterway while the enlargement was being accomplished. It is estimated that the building program will require about two years.

Contracts already have been awarded for $4,494,427 of the work, or 39 per cent of the whole, Woodhull said. Most of the remainder of the project, to cost an estimated $7,139,000, or 61 per cent, will probably be let late next fall, he indicated.

Forecast Less Odor.

As the work progresses, there should be a gradual improvement in conditions along the waterway, where residents are suffering discomfort because of the odors given off by incompletely treated sewage. This problem became acute after the Supreme court decree cut the lake water diversion flow to 1,500 cubic feet per second. At one time it was as high as 10,000 cubic feet per second.

The state had asked the Supreme court to increase the 1,500 cubic feet per second minimum to an average of 4,500 cubic feet this year, and to an average of 5,750 cubic feet next year.

This additional flow, it was estimated, would be sufficient to dilute the partially treated sewage from the big west side plant at Pershing road and Central avenue enough to remove most of the objectionable odors. The only hope of attaining this end now lies in the plant enlargement now underway, engineers said.

Add Settling Tanks.

William H. Trinkaus, chief engineer for the district, outlined what is being done to augment present treatment facilities for the south and southwest side plants [which also treat sewage from Des Plaines valley towns as far north as Des Plaines].

Work now under contract will provide new final settling tanks in the southwest plant, immediately to the west of the west side plant, as well as additional sludge concentration tanks. Work soon to be let will add more settling tanks, additional aeration tanks, and a conduit line between the two plants.

Incompletely treated sewage is being discharged from the west side plant, Mr. Trinkaus said, because the Imhoff method of treatment is in use there. This method removes only about 50 per cent of putrescible matter from sewage.

Utilize Better Process.

Another widely used but comparatively new method, the activated sludge process, removes up to 90 per cent or more of the matter that causes bad odors. When the present enlargement program is completed, the west and southwest side plants will be giving complete activated sludge treatment to 99.5 per cent of all sewage originating in the jurisdiction of the sanitary district, Mr. Trinkaus said.

The switch from the Imhoff to the activated sludge principle was begun in 1930. The Imhoff method was decided upon for the west side plant when it was first planned in 1923 because the then new activated sludge method had never been tried on a large scale, and was protected by airtight patents, since expired, which would have required enormous royalty payments. Recent experimentation has demonstrated the superiorities of the activated sludge type of treatment, the engineer said.

Work to be done this year will enlarge the capacity of the southwest side works to 500,000,000 gallons of sewage a day. The construction to follow immediately will push that capacity up to 900,000,000 gallons a day, or more than sufficient to care for the anticipated needs of the west and southwest areas for years to come, the planners estimate.

Joliet Suffers Most.

Residents of Joliet and Lockport at present are the chief sufferers from the sewage problem along the deep waterway. Ever since the Supreme court decree reduced the lake diversion to 1,500 cubic feet per second at the end of 1938, sludge from the Chicago treatment plants has been collecting in the Brandon road pool in Joliet.

Here it remains indefinitely, because of the sluggish current, decaying and giving off miasmatic fumes that are particularly objectionable on warm days.

Most of this sludge will be removed when the new plant capacity is completed. Then, the engineers believe, the canal will gradually clean itself and within a few years the source of the odor will have disappeared.

Mr. Woodhull declared that Chicago is doing more than any other large city in the treatment of its sewage, on which $165,100,000 has already been spent. The sanitary district researchers are constantly striving for improvement in treatment methods, and have made noted progress, he said.

ASK COMPLETION OF $12,000,000 SEWAGE SYSTEM

Ridge Council Demands Job Be Finished.

Thomas M. Poynton Jr.

Thomas M. Poynton Jr., upon assuming the presidency of the Ridge Civic council last Monday night, pleadged his administration to support an improvement program in the district ranging from alley cleaning to resumption of work on a $12,000,000 sewer project. The installation meeting was held in the Ridge Country club, California avenue and 105th street. He proposed to the council that it build to greater strength by accepting additional community groups into its membership.

A sewage disposal system, affecting the entire Ridge district, has been under construction for several years. The completion of this new system, Poynton said, would be the council's first concern.

Grade Crossing Problem.

The placing of gates at the grade crossing of the suburban branch of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad at 95th and Wood streets, Poynton listed as a necessity to the district second only to the sewage disposal system. A petition already has been placed by the council before the Illinois Commerce commission for an order directing the railroad to install gates at the intersection. A hearing is set for Monday, June 9.

The council, Poynton said, would intensify its clean-up drives thruout Beverly Hills and the Brainerd and Morgan Park districts, working for cleaner alleys, the cutting of weeds on vacant property and the placing of adequate containers in alleys for garbage and rubbish.

List Officers.

Officers serving the council for the 1941-'42 season with Poynton are Mrs. Frank H. White, vice president, who formerly was chairman of the schools committee, and Mrs. Florence Knapp and John Geringer, who were reëlected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Committee heads are R. J. Campbell, 9867 Wood street, commercial; Fred J. Leverenz, 9155 South Marshfield avenue, safety; Mrs. H. C. Dormitzer, 9131 Leavitt street, streets and alleys, and William Nurlong, 9322 May street, transportation.

MUSIC PROJECT GROUPS TO GIVE SIX CONCERTS

Units of the Illinois WPA music project will give concerts this week at six southwest side schools, the programs being part of a musical appreciation series.

Pupils of the Cook school at 8150 Bishop street will hear the American Concert orchestra, Ralph Cissne conducting, tomorrow afternoon. The same orchestra will play at 8:45 o'clock Tuesday night for the Englewood Evening school, 6201 Stewart avenue. A 1 o'clock concert will be given Wednesday at the Morrill school, 6011 South Rockwell street, by the Illinois Philharmonic choir, which is directed by Adalbert Huguelet.

Theodore Romhild will take the Dearborn Concert orchestra to the Fulton school, 5300 South Hermitage avenue, Thursday morning. Appearing under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher association, the Jubilee Singers, James A. Mundy's Negro chorus, will be heard at 8 o'clock Friday night at the Sawyer school, 5248 South Sawyer avenue. The chorus will sing at 12:40 o'clock tomorrow at the Hamlin school, 4747 Bishop street.

The first reunion dinner of the Wilson Junior college class of 1936 will take place at 7 o'clock Thursday evening at the Aragon hotel, 5401 Cornell avenue. The class was the first to have completed two years of study at the college.

Ald. Paul H. Douglas [5th] will talk on "Experiences of an Alderman." Among the other guests will be Dean John A. Bartky, of Wilson Junior college. Joseph Koss, 1650 East 85th street, and Martin Zimring, 5407 Maryland avenue, are in charge of arrangements for the affair.

Dog Shares Road to Fame

YOUNG PIANIST EQUALLY ADEPT SWINGING A BAT

9 Year Old to Appear in Recital Friday.

Richard Sternasty.

Out on the vacant lot where he and the fellows play ball, Richard Sternasty, 9 years old, bats two baggers with a skill equalled only by his execution of difficult arpeggios and cadenzas on his piano. Baseball and piano playing—Dick attacks them with impartial enthusiasm.

It is in the capacity of the young musician that he will appear Friday night in Kimball hall to play Bach's "Solfegietto," a Celmenti sonatina, a tango, and the Haydn-Robyn "Kinder" concerto. He shares the program with five youthful pianists, the winners of the recent student pianist contests of the Society of American Musicians.

His Second Recital.

Dick, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sternasty, 3451 West 54th street, is the youngest and will play first in the primary section of the concert. Dick gave a public recital of his own a year ago, playing his favorite selections from Beethoven, Brahms, Chopin, and Tschaikowsky.

Dick plays the piano entirely by personal choice and initiative, his mother says. Neither she nor Mr. Sternasty is a musician, and she has never had to urge the boy to the piano to practice. In fact, Dick had learned how to play before he persuaded her to get him a piano.

He has a hobby. Dick is a collector of the photographs and autographs of musicians and White Sox ball players. But the favorite picture in his collection is of a musician—the great Swedish soprano, Madame Kirsten Flagstad.

Makes a Prophecy.

It was at her Grant park concert last year that she gave it to Dick. As the great crowd was breaking up after the concert, Dick and his younger brother became detached from their parents. Two small boys lost, they wandered, hands tightly clasped, up to the bandshell. Mme. Flagstad saw them. She sat down and talked with them until their parents arrived.

"We got to talking about the music we liked best," Dick recounts, "and she got awfully interested. She told me she expected that some day I'd be giving a concert in Grant park, just like her. Golly, but she was a nice lady! Right there she gave me her picture and wrote her name on it."

Expand Plants

This map shows the sanitary district's west and southwest side sewage treatment plants and the territories they serve. These plants' capacity are to be more than doubled in an $11,600,000 expansion program now being sped toward completion, which is expected to relieve pollution of the Illinois-Michigan canal.

BLIND AND DEAF GIRL IS SOUTH SIDE'S HAPPIEST

Her Exceptional Talents Overcome Handicap.

One of the happiest girls on the south side is Geraldine Lawhorn, who is blind and deaf. Geraldine, a 24 year old Negress who has exceptional talent at piano playing and dramatic art, is nearing the end of her first year as a successful recitalist.

Geraldine has been blind since she was 10 years old and deaf for the last five years. Next to her parents, her closest companion today is Blondie, who is said to be the only dog in the United States trained to guide a blind-deaf person. Some of Geraldine's original dramatic readings are about Blondie.

Is Unusual Student.

At the Chicago Piano College and School of Fine Arts Geraldine is regarded as the school's most unusual student. Because of her poise, congeniality, and sense of humor, she also is the school's most popular student.

"I have never seen any one who had such normal mental balance, in addition to special talents," says Miss Helen Browne Freund, principal. Geraldine is studying at the school on a scholarship provided by the state.

Her teachers agree that her "receptivity" is remarkable. Each instructor communicates with her by tapping Geraldine's extended right palm in movements which correspond to the deaf mute finger language. For persons who don't know the deaf mute symbols she wears a white glove on which each joint of the hand is labeled with numbers and letters of the alphabet, A person may talk with her by touching letters.

Speaking Voice Inmproves.

Geraldine started studying dramatic art because Mrs. Lawhorn thought it was the best way to keep her from forgetting how to speak distinctly. Thru practice and constant correction by Miss Bessie Henderson, her teacher, she has actually improved her speaking voice. Miss Henderson says that by experience Geraldine has formed patterns in her mind which correspond to certain pitches. Thus she is able to follow her instructor's suggestions.

In her six public recitals this year she has given monologues and numerous sketches she created herself. A recent issue of Music News, a trade magazine, commented that she has "a great deal of talent in dramatic art."

After nine months of piano lessons Geraldine knows 12 compositions. Her teacher, Miss Evelyn Graham, says she learns much faster than the average student and has done the equivalent of three years' work since last September, tho she did not own a piano until a month ago.

Geraldine is enthusiastic about playing piano because "I enjoy the rhythm of my movements on the keyboard and the vibrations it sends into my fingers."

Loses Sight After Measles.

She lost her sight after an attack of the measles in childhood. Then, after two years at Marshall High school, her auditory nerves failed overnight. She was graduated, however, as the outstanding member of a high school class of 500 boys and girls, and won a scholarship to Columbia university for her short story writing ability. She took the course by correspondence, writing her stories in Braille, Now she owns a Braille typewriter and a Braille dictionary.

Blondie was given to Geraldine two years ago thru the effort of the Most Rev. Bernard J. Shell, auxiliary bishop of Chicago, and money donated by Marshall students. In getting acquainted with Blondie she says the most difficult job was convincing the dog that she was depending on it under all circumstances. At first Geraldine was afraid of the sounds of trucks and trains, which, she says, "have earthquaking vibrations."

Geraldine's leisure time is usually passed in sewing for the Red Cross, writing short stories, or romping in the park with Blondie. She also loves to dance and is escorted to social affairs by neighborhood boys. Her mother says that the girl is "really and truly happy." She lives at 6226 Indiana avenue.

5,000 TO ATTEND BOY SCOUT PICNIC IN PALOS HILLS

Troops Plan Program Saturday.

Southwest district Boy Scouts flanked by fathers, mothers, cousins, uncles, and aunts, will spread picnic lunches Saturday under the trees of Camp Kiwanis in Palos Hills. The mammoth Scout family day outing, it is estimated by Wilbur R. Kelso, managing chairman, will draw more than 5,000 picnickers. There are organized in the Scout troops, ships and Cub packs of the district almost that number of boys.

Beginning at 2 o'clock, a program of skits, pantomimes, stunts, and community singing will be conducted. Soft ball games and other athletic events also are scheduled. The drum and bugle corps and individual soloists will perform in the evening about a campfire.

Sea Scouts to Be Guides.

Sea Scouts are to take over guide duty and they will administer a first aid station.

The camp ground is near Willow Springs. Motorists from the north end of the district are advised to drive on Archer avenue to Willow Springs and there take Willow Springs road [104th avenue] south to the 110th street entrance to Camp Kiwanis. Those traveling from south part of the district, should follow 95th street to Willow Springs road [approximately 1¼ miles west of Mannheim road], and turn south, entering the grounds at 100th street.

List Participating Troops.

Twenty-seven Scout troops, three Sea Scout ships and two Cub packs will participate in the family day outing from the center division of the district. Radio Features on Page 5

W-G-N Starlet

MARY SMALL.

Mary Small, 19 year old singer who in spite of her youth has become one of radio's favorites, is starting a new series of fifteen-minute weekly musical variety programs on W-G-N and the Mutual network tomorrow. Assisted by an orchestra and chorus under the direction of Phil Wall, Mary will be heard each Monday at 9:15 p. m. Blue-eyed, brown-haired, winsome, Mary got her start in radio on the old Rudy Vallee show.

For the first program in the W-G-N-Mutual series, titled "Imperial Time," she will sing "Ol' Man River" and "I Understand."

FIND MARRIAGE LICENSE SHOWS HAVE BIG APPEAL

If you know a woman who doesn't like to talk about marriages and brides, you know the woman who isn't a steady listener to Quin Ryan's W-G-N program, "Marriage License Bureau Romances," aired at 1:30 p. m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from the office of County Clerk Michael J. Flynn.

Picking four couples at random from the large throng at the counter of the world's busiest marriage license bureau, Ryan interviews them with heart-to-heart questions. How they met, what their plans are, how and where he proposed, are among the many human interest questions Ryan puts to the would-be-weds.

In the six years the program has been a W-G-N feature no story has had more appeal than the recent case of a blind girl and her nearly blind husband to be. The bride-to-be, Dorothy Fevrus, wrote to Ryan and asked if she and her future husband could be interviewed on his program. They were invited to take part in the show and during the interview the listening public learned that the girl's fiancé could only do odd jobs. As a result of the broadcast hundreds of people attended the girl's wedding and the couple was swamped with wedding gifts.

Ryan recalls one couple who had saved three hundred pennies to pay for their license.

About once a month the broadcasts follow a couple into the marriage chambers of the courthouse and Ryan presents the couple's wedding.

FOGARTY RENEWS OLD FRIENDSHIPS IN 'ASK IT' QUIZ

Having Time of Life with W-G-N Show.

With all the headaches that result from producing a radio show, Paul Fogarty, W-G-N producer, is having the time of his life staging the "Ask-It-Ball" quiz programs, broadcast from various army posts and navy stations at 7 p. m. Saturdays on W-G-N. Fogarty, who joined the army in 1917 and retired in 1923 as a captain, is meeting old friends and making new friends every week as he tours with the show.

Paul Fogarty.

Ask-It-Ball follows the general theme of baseball with the soldiers or sailors answering questions on 15 subjects ranging from sports and movies to geography and the army and navy. Correct answers pay from $1 to $4 to the man who answers the question and count from a single to a home run for the team.

Fogarty was on active duty at one of the camps that is taking part in the program. He served as a bayonet instructor at Camp Grant in 1920. During his period of service he also visited many of the other units that are now playing Ask-It-Ball.

Graduating from Notre Dame in 1917, Fogarty went to the officers training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis. Receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in the infantry, he was sent to numerous camps as an instructor in bayonet drill and calisthenics.

Leaving the army, Fogarty went to Culver, where he became an instructor in military science. After this period of military life he retired and entered private business.

He is the author of the comic strip "Draftie," appearing in many papers. He has produced numerous radio shows over W-G-N and other stations and is the composer of the popular song hit, "Betty Co-ed."

BLAIR WALLISER TAKES VACATION TO SOUTH SEAS

The unusual hobby of collecting islands is partly responsible for the three week vacation itinerary of Producer Blair Walliser of W-G-N who has left on a plane-steamer jaunt covering the islands of Hawaii and Samoa and Tahiti, in the South seas.

Walliser, whose wish is to visit every island in the seven seas, took a plane for the west coast to board the S. S. Mariposa on the first leg of his vacation.

He plans to mix a little work with his island hobby by taking a course in celestial navigation on the trip as a prerequisite for a commission with the United States coast guard. He has been given permission to stand watch and shoot the sun and stars with the navigators of the two seagoing ships that will carry him.

Walliser has already visited many islands in the Atlantic, Pacific, and the Gulf of Mexico.

Boris Karloff to Star in Edgar Allen Poe Thriller

Boris Karloff, famous bogeyman of stage, screen, and radio, will star in one of Edgar Allen Poe's grimmest stories, "The Fall of the House of Usher," during the Inner Sanctum Mystery program at 7:30 p. m. today over WLS. The story concerns identical twins—a boy and a girl—who feel the same pains, read each other's thoughts, and have the same actions. The boy finally kills his sister, but she returns from her tomb to seek vengeance.

Walt Disney to Tame Charles McCarthy Tonight

Walt Disney, who has done a pretty good job of taming one little wise guy, by name Donald Duck, will try his hand and wit at cooling down another famous brash youngster, Charlie McCarthy, when he is guest of Edgar Bergen at 7 p. m. tonight over WMAQ. While Bergen and Disney talk about their brain-children, Charlie will be making eyes at Ruth Terry, pretty singer and screen actress, who also will be a guest on the program.

FORMER MAYOR OF BOYS TOWN ON CITIZENS HOUR

Youth to Be Named to Roll of Honor.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A former mayor of Father Edward Flanagan's Boys Town, the famous institution near Omaha that has been the subject of several motion pictures, will be interviewed on the Citizens of Tomorrow program over W-G-N at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday. The youth is Sam Turner, an 18 year old redhead, who will arrive here tomorrow to start work at the Stevens hotel as a mail clerk. The hotel executives heard about his excellent work at Boys Town and decided to give him a job.

Turner besides being interviewed will be named to the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll for his record at Boys Town. Philip Maxwell, who conducts the program, will interview him and cite his accomplishments along with those of George DeWitt, 17 years old, senior class president of the Burlington, Ia. High school, who also makes the Roll of Honor.

Twice Mayor of Town.

Turner, who has been mayor of Boys Town twice, this season has served as park commissioner. He was an honor student, sang in the school choir, and was a 4-H club official.

The Lane Technical High school, located on Chicago's north side, accommodating 7,000 boys in the day school, and 1,000 adults in national defense training in the evening, will be the honored school Wednesday evening.

Principal to Speak.

Six hundred students, accompanied by their principal, Charles E. Lang, who will give a brief address, will be guests in W-G-N's No. 1 studio.

The Lane chorus, directed by Hugh Dickerson, will sing three numbers, "Go Lane Go," the school song by Jack Nelson; "Bless the Lord O My Soul," by Ipolitof-Ivanof, and "Po' Ol' Lazarus," Negro spiritual.

The Lane broadcast will be the 38th in this series. The last broadcast this spring featuring the Chicago Teachers college will be on June 10.

Swing's New House.

Raymond Gram Swing, W-G-N-Mutual news analyst, has just bought a new home in Easton, Conn. Because of its background—it was built in revolutionary war days—Swing calls it his "tax evasion" property. The house is one and one-half stories tall. At the time it was constructed only two story houses were taxable.

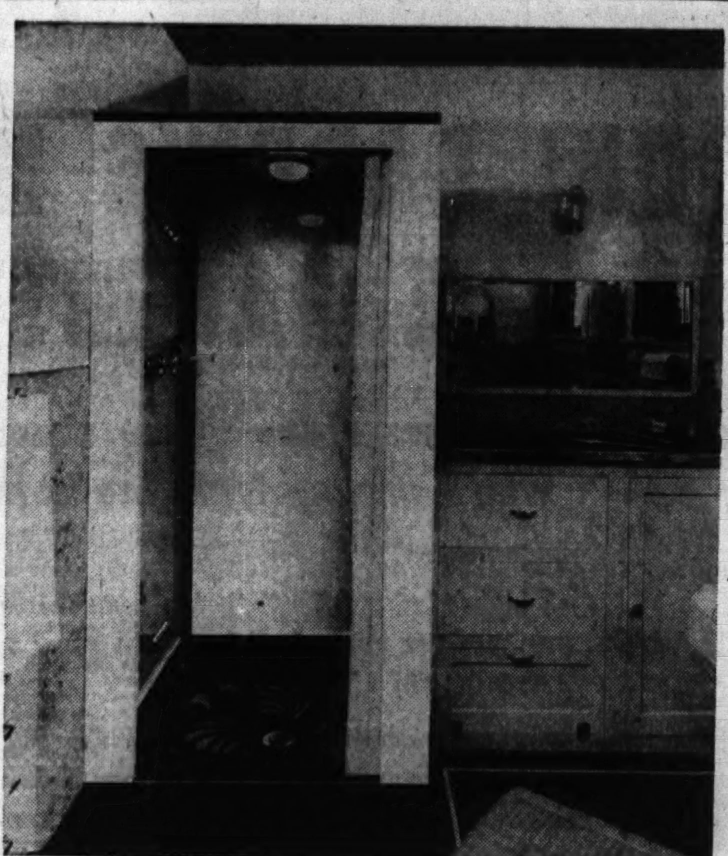
Once a Clothes Closet



June's the month to think of showers—inside the home. Here is a shower cabinet installation in what was once a large clothes closet. This entire cabinet is independent of walls so that it is easily adaptable for modernization work.

SHOWER STALL FILLS ODD NOOK IN MANY A HOME

Complete Unit Easily Installed Today.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There need be nothing expensive—any more—about a shower stall installation in the home. Still less expensive is the shower over the tub. Showers can start at the bottom, in your basement, or at the top in your attic.

A shower has been called the great American institution, the nation's morning pickup. There is nothing really new about it, since an ancient Babylonian king modernized his palace some 5,000 years ago and installed a shower stall for his own use. His plumber was wise enough to insist on a waterproof floor with a drain made of clay tile, and it was built a trifle large—some 15 feet square—since slaves had to do the "showering." Servants instead of pipes sprayed water over the king in those by-gone days.

Wide Range of Prices.

New showers and stalls aren't limited to royalty or to the rich, for an everyday basement can have a stall. Nice, neat leakproof unit assemblies are on the market, in a wide range of prices. A shower can be installed over an existing bathtub without tearing out the walls, or one can take advantage, perhaps, of an unneeded closet and make it over into a shower and dressing room.

There are cabinets which are independent of the walls of a room and for this reason are especially fine for modernization work. And these cabinet shower stalls, whether de luxe or of inexpensive gavanized steel with duck curtains, are grand places to relax when the temperature soars and vacations are a long way off, or far in the past. They are spots of retreat for cooling comfort, any hour of the day or night.

Stalls Are Durable.

These modern stalls come tailored to fit almost any wall or corner and they are manufactured for hard knocks and the ceaseless demands of every day living.

Receptors can be of rubber, of porcelain enamel and compositions. There's a receptor which has been given a nonslippery feature by a special method of infusing certain ingredients into the porcelain receptor coating. So that whether your stall floor is dry or wet, it isn't slippery.

Now Easily Cleaned.

Shower heads are designed to save water by directing it all at the bather and at the same time aerating it so its effect may be soothing. And many of the new shower heads are easily cleaned if and when they show signs of clogging.

From the newest shower equipment to match the chrominum trimmings on your swanky plumbing fixtures and the newest cabinet showers of tile, glass, and porcelain enamel, to the simplest utility fixtures and stalls of galvanized steels there are units available for all needs and occasions and purses and places.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, June 2.

Sow seeds of hardy plants. The young can be transplanted into rows in a sunny spot by July. The plants will develop and be well able to withstand the winter without injury. Sowing the seed thinly will make transplanting unnecessary; in fact, all kinds of seed should not be sown to thickly.

The pruning of spring flowering shrubs should be done after they are thru blooming because the branches that bore the flowers can be cut away without injury and new growths will be forced into strong growth with abundant buds. Forsythia, bridal wreath, Van Houtte's spirea, shadbush, and many others require this treatment.

Tuesday, June 3.

Keep edges of walks and beds well trimmed. Cultivation should continue to keep down the weeds and give full opportunity for the plants to grow. However, where perennials grow close together care must be taken not to injure the roots. Mulch these plants about July 1 and avoid excessive cultivation and the necessity of frequent watering.
deaux mixture.

Wednesday, June 4.

Plant tender waterlilies. Use a rich soil and do not overplant. Give full sun. An application of liquit manure to peonies will give larger blooms. Plant dahlia roots and place stakes at the same time. Plant about three feet apart. Sow portulaca in sunny places.

The four o'clock is one of the best annuals to grow in restricted or congested city areas. It makes a good hedge plant. Plant a few of the new morning glories from started, potted plants.

Thursday, June 5.

Home gardeners having outdoor space will find that the house plants will do much better if placed outdoors. Palms, ferns, and similar plants should be in shade, altho some palms, like the date palm, will do well anywhere.

Friday, June 6.

Cut back the old flower stalks of the iris and do not permit the plant to form seeds. Transplanting may take place after flowering. Use good sized divisions. Cut back the leaves to six inches. Do not plant too deep. Do not plant bedding plants while the soil is dry; water the plants thoroly before planting.

Saturday, June 7.

Sow sweet corn now. Sow again in 10 days for a late crop. Mulch both sides of the sweet pea row with decayed manure, grass clipping, or other material; watch for aphids and spray with tobacco or Black Leaf 40. Spray potatoes with arsenate of lead the minute a potato beetle is noticed.

HIS SLIDING ROOF OPENS NEW VISTA TO RETIRED MAN

Telescope, His Own Work, Only One of Hobbies.

Orville J. Bliss of 9951 South Seeley avenue, retired from his position in the testing department of the Commonwealth Edison company five years ago. Since then, he finds, he has been one of the busiest men in the neighborhood. He has kept his own promise to himself to do all the things he didn't have time to do as a practicing electrical engineer. And keeping that promise has meant that Mr. Bliss may be retired, but he certainly has no time on his hands.

He prepared for these years when he built his home in Beverly Hills and provided a place for a permanent telescope. Mr. Bliss studies astronomy as a hobby, and he has been so successful at it that he has lectured at the Adler planetarium. The telescope, a Cassegrainian type for which Mr. Bliss designed the parts, is housed under the roof, which, at that point, is built to open and slide back. The arrangement is not visible from the street.

Student of Navigation.

Add to the interest in astronomy, Mr. Bliss' interest in navigation [he studied and passed a United States power squadron course in it last winter], his interest in his workshop, and his gardening—the answer is plenty to do.

"Some amateur astronomers are particularly interested in grinding their own reflectors," he says. "Others concentrate on variable star observation. I haven't any particular interest except to educate myself a little. I just study." He has carried on that study in India, where he visited his daughter several years ago. He has gone to observatories thruout the United States.

His Ideas Blossom.

His power lathe, his wood and metal working tools in his basement workshop make it possible for Mr. Bliss to carry out all of the ideas which, to most people, are just ideas—never anything more. The clothesline supports are the products of the home workshop. So is the tool rack, and so is the utility cart. Then, too, Mr. Bliss makes his own adjustments for his telescope.

A lawn to cut makes demands upon Mr. Bliss' retirement, too. And just because a man no longer goes to an office each day doesn't mean that he has no business interests to look after, he points out. But he's kept up doing the never-had-time-to-do things. He's even kept that promise every one makes to himself—to do a little writing. He has had an article upon his observatory published.

Former Residents to Have International House Party

The International House association, composed of former residents of the house, will give an intermezzo dance and garden party at International house, 1414 East 59th street, Saturday evening. William Diez is president of the association's board of directors.

St. Thomas the Apostle Society Plans Luncheon

The Tabernacle Society of St. Thomas the Apostle church will hold its 16th annual luncheon meeting Tuesday in the Windermere East hotel. Guest speaker will be Msgr. T. V. Shannon. Mrs. Walter Duffy, 5447 Kimbark avenue, is president of the group.

BEVERLY HILLS HOUSEWIFE WINS LOGAN ART PRIZE

Award One of Many in 10 Years of Painting.

Florence Ezzell Stevenson, the Beverly Hills housewife who has been acquiring some of the top flight art awards of this region during the last decade with her paintings of flowers, last week added another trophy to her collection of prizes.

Florence E. Stevenson. [Sketch by J. Ernest Brierly.]

Her decorative "Phantasy," a still life study of vibrant color, distinguished by the delicate reflection of a Japanese figurine in a green glass flower container, took the Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize for oil paintings at the spring salon of the Chicago branch of the National League of American Pen Women. The donor herself pinned the blue ribbon on Mrs. Stevenson's canvas.

With the closing of the Chicago salon last week in the Drake hotel, the prize painting was sent to Springfield to be hung in the Abraham Lincoln hotel while the state convention of the American Pen Women is in progress.

Paints Action Pictures Too.

Her Logan prize painting is true to the type of still life studies in which Mrs. Stevenson has developed her talents. "I frequently paint portraits and action pictures," she has remarked, "for no other reason than for the sheer joy it gives me to get back to work on my flower studies."

She was born and reared in the south. She grew up with a knowledge of the lore of flowers. But the soft sentimentalism characteristic of most floral pictures is banished from her canvases by bold execution and brilliance of color. She definitely disassociates her work from the schools of ultramodern art, however, sharply differing from their techniques. In art circles she is classified as a modern realist.

Mrs. Stevenson was a student at Athens college in her native state of Alabama when she first began a serious study of art. She continued her painting at Tuscaloosa Conservatory of Art and Music. She was the youthful head of the art department at Tuscaloosa when she met and married Earle Dodds Stevenson, a northern clothing manufacturer.

Her Paintings Often Exhibited.

Then when the Stevensons came to Chicago to live, there was a 10 year period of family raising and domestic interests during which the paint tubes dried out and the brushes were idle. But a day came when, prompted by the old urge to apply color to canvas, the young matron turned out a portrait of her two sons and their dog, "just for fun." The picture attracted attention.

Mrs. Stevenson became a member of the All Illinois Society of the Fine Arts. She entered the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts at the prompting of Mrs. Carl Werntz. Within two years she had presented two "one man" shows and her pictures were being exhibited at numerous galleries and salons. The Literary Digest printed one of her studies on its cover page. So likewise did Art World. Other of her pictures were reproduced in the art department of the Christian Science Monitor.

Wins Gold Medal.

In 1937 th All Illinois Society of Fine Arts gave Mrs. Stevenson its gold medal. The subject of her prize picture was a simple, homey begonia.

There is on permanent exhibit in the Rosenwald Museum of Science and Industry a six foot canvas by Mrs. Stevenson which first hung in the hall of science at A Century of Progress.

The home of the Stevenson family is at 9411 Longwood drive.

Appeal for Books.

An appeal for books for the library of the South Side Boys' club, 3947 Michigan avenue, only Chicago club for needy colored boys, has been made by B. B. Church, director. Call Boulevard 3803.

Their Golden Year

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Hoekstra, 15916 Prarie avenue, South Holland, celebrated their golden wedding recently. Both born in the Netherlands, the Hoekstras have lived in and near Chicago since they came to America in 1887. They have three daughters, two sons, and eight grandchildren. Mr. Hoekstra worked for 25 years in the assessor and collector's office in Calumet.

BEALE SCHOOL PUPILS PLANT 500 GARDENS

Busy Area Dotted with Vegetable Patches.

Pupils of the Beale school, which is located in one of the city's busiest neighborhoods outside the loop, are talking farm talk these days. Five hundred of the 1,177 pupils have gardens which they planted several weeks ago.

The neighborhood around the school, which is at 61st and Sangamon streets, is dotted with tiny patches of lettuce, petunias, radishes, asters, and onions. The youngsters from second thru eighth grades have planted 2,000 packets of seeds.

Besides their own plots, the youngsters are tending a little strip of ground between the school fence and graveled playing area along 61st street. Into this piece of ground go all plant contributions such as violet and snapdragon plants, a little bush, a tiny tree.

In addition to the garden project the school has launched a special campaign to keep the neighborhood free of papers. "We're trying especially hard to help the householders across the streets from us," says Miss Catherine M. McGuire, principal. "It is really difficult to maintain a good lawn opposite a school. The children do forget themselves and run on the grass, and there is debris. Now we're trying to prove that those conditions aren't necessary, and we think our neighbors' lawns show that we're cooperating."

ST. JAMES CHOIR SCHOOL TO HAVE RECITAL SERIES

Nine events are on the commencement week program of St. James Choir school of St. James Methodist church, 46th street and Ellis avenue. The opening program will be a vocal recital at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, featuring solos, duets, and sextets in Harris hall.

Other events this week are a program by the advanced piano students this evening in Harris hall; an academic demonstration with open house for the faculty tomorrow evening; an organ recital by advanced students Tuesday evening in the sanctuary; an operetta, "Hansel and Gretel," Wednesday evening in the children's department in Harris hall; a junior piano recital Thursday evening in Harris hall, and three short plays Friday evening in Harris hall.

The baccalaureate service will take place at 11 o'clock next Sunday morning in the church, for which all the music was written by the theory and harmony class, and a commencement banquet will take place at 7 o'clock Monday evening, June 9.

Welfare League.

Election of officers will be held at the monthly meeting of the Park Shore Welfare league tomorrow at the Hotel Shoreland. Awards for the cards tournament this year also will be given out by Mrs. J. P. Higginson, 7745 Saginaw avenue.

SEWAGE WORKS EXPANSION TO AID WEST AREA

11 Million Project Changes System.

Work is being rushed on the $11,633,427 expansion of facilities of the west and southwest side sewage treatment works, it was announced last week by Ross A. Woodhull, president of the sanitary district.

His announcement came soon after the United States Supreme court had refused the state's plea that it modify its 1930 decree to permit a temporary increase in the lake diversion flow thru the Illinois-Michigan waterway while the enlargement was being accomplished. It is estimated that the building program will require about two years.

Contracts already have been awarded for $4,494,427 of the work, or 39 per cent of the whole, Woodhull said. Most of the remainder of the project, to cost an estimated $7,139,000, or 61 per cent, will probably be let late next fall, he indicated.

Forecast Less Odor.

As the work progresses, there should be a gradual improvement in conditions along the waterway, where residents are suffering discomfort because of the odors given off by incompletely treated sewage. This problem became acute after the Supreme court decree cut the lake water diversion flow to 1,500 cubic feet per second. At one time it was as high as 10,000 cubic feet per second.

The state had asked the Supreme court to increase the 1,500 cubic feet per second minimum to an average of 4,500 cubic feet this year, and to an average of 5,750 cubic feet next year. This additional flow, it was estimated, would be sufficient to dilute the partially treated sewage from the big west side plant at Pershing road and Central avenue enough to remove most of the objectionable odors. The only hope of attaining this end now lies in the plant enlargement now underway, engineers said.

Add Settling Tanks.

William H. Trinkaus, chief engineer for the district, outlined what is being done to augment present treatment facilities for the south and southwest side plants [which also treat sewage from Des Plaines valley towns as far north as Des Plaines].

Work now under contract will provide new final settling tanks in the southwest plant, immediately to the west of the west side plant, as well as additional sludge concentration tanks. Work soon to be let will add more settling tanks, additional aeration tanks, and a conduit line between the two plants.

Incompletely treated sewage is being discharged from the west side plant, Mr. Trinkaus said, because the Imhoff method of treatment is in use there. This method removes only about 50 per cent of putrescible matter from sewage.

Utilize Better Process.

Another widely used but comparatively new method, the activated sludge process, removes up to 90 per cent or more of the matter that causes bad odors. When the present enlargement program is completed, the west and southwest side plants will be giving complete activated sludge treatment to 99.5 per cent of all sewage originating in the jurisdiction of the sanitary district, Mr. Trinkaus said.

The switch from the Imhoff to the activated sludge principle was begun in 1930. The Imhoff method was decided upon for the west side plant when it was first planned in 1923 because the then new activated sludge method had never been tried on a large scale, and was protected by airtight patents, since expired, which would have required enormous royalty payments. Recent experimentation has demonstrated the superiorities of the activated sludge type of treatment, the engineer said.

Work to be done this year will enlarge the capacity of the southwest side works to 500,000,000 gallons of sewage a day. The construction to follow immediately will push that capacity up to 900,000,000 gallons a day, or more than sufficient to care for the anticipated needs of the west and southwest areas for years to come, the planners estimate.

Joliet Suffers Most.

Residents of Joliet and Lockport at present are the chief sufferers from the sewage problem along the deep waterway. Ever since the Supreme court decree reduced the lake diversion to 1,500 cubic feet per second at the end of 1938, sludge from the Chicago treatment plants has been collecting in the Brandon road pool in Joliet.

Here it remains indefinitely, because of the sluggish current, decaying and giving off miasmatic fumes that are particularly objectionable on warm days.

Most of this sludge will be removed when the new plant capacity is completed. Then, the engineers believe, the canal will gradually clean itself and within a few years the source of the odor will have disappeared.

Mr. Woodhull declared that Chicago is doing more than any other large city in the treatment of its sewage, on which $165,100,000 has already been spent. The sanitary district researchers are constantly striving for improvement in treatment methods, and have made noted progress, he said.

No Dogs Get 'Hot Seat' If Ruby's Around

Ruby Watson.

If Ruby Watson, 14 years old, had never gone to the Hinsdale dog pound, life in Hinsdale would be quite different for dogs—and for Ruby's mother. Ruby has soft brown eyes, black curls, and lives at 633 North Washington street with her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Watson. She was 11 years old when she visited the dog pound.

It all happened one warm day in June. Ruby and her chum, Dorothy Hormel, came across a black and brown dog whimpering over a wounded paw. The girls swooped down on him with soothing words. Then they took him to the corner policeman. The policeman took him to the dog pound and Ruby trailed along, pulled by the expression in the dog's moist eyes and the dejected droop of its floppy ears.

Sentenced to Death.

"What are you going to do with him?" asked Ruby of John Johnsen, head of the dog pound.

Said matter-of-fact John Johnsen, "If no one claims 'im in two weeks we electrocute him."

Then he added, "We can't keep him forever. There's a limit to how long we can keep runaway dogs, and two weeks is the limit."

Mrs. Watson remembers the day that her daughter came home from the dog pound as she remembers a sharp pain.

A little girl had seen the cruelty of life.

The next day Ruby Watson and her friends appeared at the dog pound on a mission of mercy. "Give us a chance," they begged. "Before you 'lectrocute the dogs, let us try to find them a home."

"It's all right with me," said Mr. Johnsen, "you can take one at a time."

Dogs Granted Reprieve.

That day the First Aid to Animals club was born. It had four members. There are still four members, but they make up for the slim membership with stout hearts. Each week Ruby, along with Laura Reeves, Merlita Forsythe, and Barbara Friend, go to the dog pound and look over the animal that is doomed to die.

The Watson basement is often crowded. The Watson's own dog, Wimpy, really leads a dog's life. Frequently Wimpy has to be wormed. Regularly he has to be de-loused, scrubbed, and put on special diets. "Every time we take in a stray," says Mrs. Watson, "our dog catches something."

Ruby's mother has been called on to weep over the sad story of Tambo, Snowball, Snuffer, and Mickey, who was 7 years old and had tumors. One dog was rescued from his electrocution the same day that Ruby's friend, Karen, was having a birthday party. The First Aid to Animals club had an idea.

The stray dog was scrubbed and brushed. A bright red ribbon was tied around his recently saved neck. A card was attached which read: "Happy Birthday to Karen."

"Karen's mother put a wet blanket on that idea," mourned Ruby.

Print Dog Newspaper.

The club members publish a newspaper which they sell for 5 cents a copy. Proceeds buy food for their dogs. The paper, Doggie Snoops, is filled with information on the care, feeding, and correct treatment of pets. "We give our dogs a name," says Ruby, "and we tell their stories in our newspaper." The paper is mimeographed on a school machine.

"When nobody else takes the dogs we go see Mrs. H. O. Matile," says Ruby. "Mrs. Matile is a very kind woman. She is outstanding. She has six dogs and fifteen cats."

Lodging for Transients.

The clubroom is in the Watson basement and there a special bedroom for transient dogs has been prepared. The mattress on the bed was personally inspected by Ruby and proclaimed the epitome in dog comfort. In the clubroom is a card catalog record containing the case histories. The First Aid to Animals club checks up on the foster homes.

One card holds this record: "Snuffer—part Scottie, part ?— Given a home with Mrs. Matile. Later took a paralytic stroke. Now dead of a natural death."

E. H. KRAFT ELECTED TO HEAD HAWTHORNE TELEPHONE PIONEERS

E. H. Kraft.

E. H. Kraft, 4021 Central avenue, Western Springs, recently was elected president of Hawthorne chapter of the Telephone Pioneers of America. He succeeds G. E. Toohey, 152 Riverside road, Riverside, in heading one of the largest chapters of the Telephone Pioneers' association in the country.

With 2,500 members, Hawthorne chapter draws its membership from men and women who have completed 21 years of service in the telephone industry.

The West Side's Umbrella Man and Scissors Grinder Arrives

As regularly as the coming of summer, the umbrella man makes his tour thru the streets of the west side. He pushes his work shop before him and his hat bears the brunt of bad weather. The man with the scissors grinding machine and the umbrella man in private life is Pasquale D'Agostino, 77 years old, 2238 Washburne avenue, the father of 14 sons and daughters. His work shop on wheels is more than a half century old and attracts the attention of another generation, four kindergarten pupils over at St. Patrick's academy, 2300 Washington boulevard. Strapped to the cart is a bundle of umbrella ribs. The four young moderns who look at a veteran workman are, left to right, Joan McMahon, 2428 Jackson boulevard; Marlene Derrig, 8 North La Verne avenue; Jack McConnell, Oak Park, and Clemmons Dernbach, 4441 West End avenue.

Malden Plans Welcome for Returning Son

Frank L. Wood.

When Frank L. Wood and his friends arrive in Malden, Ill., for a visit next Sunday the population of the town will be increased by more than 50 per cent. This will happen because Mr. Wood has such a large number of friends.

When Malden welcomes back one of its home town boys who made good, they are not paying tribute to a war hero or a politician. Mr. Wood is a quiet spoken man with silver hair and a policy for peace and humanity. For 44 years he has been instructor of the Wesleyan Bible class which meets Sunday afternoons in the Olivet Methodist church, Keeler at Adams street.

This is his distinction along with the fact that many denominations and creeds are represented in his class, that members who have moved away are on his correspondence list and that his "Hall of Far Places" in his home at 306 South Hamlin avenue, is a private collection of curios from Sunday school pupils who now live in all parts of the world.

100 Chicagoans to Go.

Because of his record as a Sunday school worker Malden's population of 250 will turn out for a service in the Methodist church. The Wesleyan Bible class and former members from Princeton, Peru, Moline, and Savannah will come to Malden by automobile to attend the service with Mr. Wood.

The 110 mile trip will be taken by more than 100 Chicagoans on Sunday morning. They will meet at a designated place near the village and form a parade thru the lanes of trees and quaint tidy home. Only one home has been built in the town in the last 40 years.

Neighbor will meet neighbor outside the church for a song fest before the service begins. Members of the Wesleyan class who will take part in the church service are Lawson and Lewis Cooke, twin members of the cornet and clarinet duet; Mr. and Mrs. J. Luther Jones, and Albert Thomas Price, singers. Mr. Wood will preach on "A Changeless Fact in a Changing World."

Plan Memorial Tree.

At the end of the service the congregation will move outside where a tree will be planted in memory of the visit. The pastor's wife, Mrs. Oliver W. Jones, will recite Joyce Kilmer's "Trees." Mrs. Ernest L. Hayford, class president, will dedicate the tree to the church. William A. Haggard, vice president, will read a scripture lesson and the closing prayer will be given by Harvey W. King, associate teacher of the class.

The women of the congregation will serve a complimentary dinner after the service and the party will return to Chicago.

Mr. Wood was invited to bring his class to Malden by the Methodist church pastor. He has visited his home town only four times since he has lived in Chicago. When the veteran Sunday school worker reads the scripture at the morning service in his old home town he will read from the New Testament presented to him at Christmas in this church before the same altar in the same place.

It's June—Month of Brides

Besides its gift of roses, June brings brides and wedding veils and organ music. One of the earliest picture-book brides of this summer is Mrs. J. Clinton Youle, the former Cherie Jeanne Eadie of Lombard. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Douglas Eadie of Glen Ellyn. Her recent wedding was held in the College Church of Christ, Wheaton. Mrs. Youle and her bridegroom both attended Wheaton college. Mr. Youle, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Youle of Wheaton, is a news editor for a broadcasting company. They will make their new home in Lombard.

TEACHERS LIST TEN SENIORS FOR CLASS BALLOT

Graduates to Elect Popular Choice.

What makes a star pupil in high school? Is it algebra formulas, dead languages and reams of essays, or party dresses, winning smiles, and pretty manners? This year the faculty and their fellow students have been asked to decide.

Last week principals and faculty members of the six west side Catholic high schools nominated the 10 they considered were stars of their senior class. They picked the students who publish the year book, write the school news, play in the bands, sing in the choruses, and delight teachers by always knowing their lesson.

This week the seniors in each of the six high schools will elect the No. 1 star out of this faculty-nominated list of 10. On Sunday, June 15, THE TRIBUNE, thru the columns of the Metropolitan section, will introduce the boys and girls to Chicago, will tell what they think about school and the world, and what they are going to do about their futures.

The 60 students listed today are the west side's Catholic leaders. They are the ones currently slated to be the successes and crowd the alumni roles with honors to come. They are young and just beginning, and they call their graduation day commencement.

Two of the six west side high schools are girls' schools. They are Providence, located at 119 South Central Park boulevard and St. Mary's school, 1031 South Hoyne avenue. One of the six, St. Mel High school, Madison street and Kildare avenue, operated by the Christian brothers, is an accredited ROTC school and its symbol is the eagle with wings spread for flight.

St. Patrick academy, also conducted by the Christian brothers, and located at 122 South Desplaines street, excels in commercial work. An older school is St. Ignatius, at 1076 Roosevelt road, and known as one of the Jesuit's halls of learning. St. Philip High school, 3141 Jackson avenue, uses for a motto: "A Boys' School for Boys." Nominees by the faculties in the six schools are:

Keeney, Callahan Seek Two Year Post.

Partisans of the two candidates for the 37th ward council seat added the finishing touches last week to the campaign. The special election will be held Tuesday. The winner will be the alderman of the Austin ward until the next regular election two years hence.

The strength of the regular Democratic organization was behind Francis E. Callahan, while the G. O. P. ward units supported former Ald. Albert F. Keeney.

Aldermanic elections technically are nonpartisan, and so the candidates do not run under party labels. However, the winner usually owes his victory to a party organization.

Plans Full Time Job.

Callahan is promising the voters that he will continue the policies of former Ald. Roger J. Kiley, Democrat who resigned last year after his election to the Superior court bench.

It is his contention that an alderman should devote full time to his job, and promises to do so if elected.

Callahan is an alumnus of Northwestern university and the Chicago law school. He was formerly secretary to the general counsel of the Santa Fe railroad, and later served with an investment banking house on La Salle street. Before taking his present post as superintendent of city sidewalks he was chief deputy clerk of the Probate court. He lives with his wife and family at 1447 Massassoit street, and has lived in the ward for 21 years.

During the first three years of Ald. Kiley's service in the city council, Callahan was in charge of the alderman's office on Lake street.

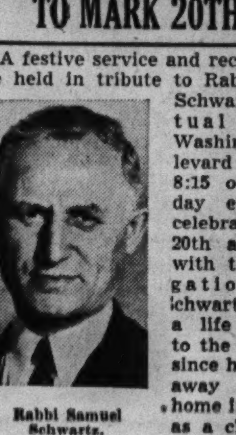
In Business 46 Years.

Keeney has conducted a west side real estate business for the last 46 years. He was alderman of the old 27th ward from 1899 to 1903, and in 1906 was elected state representative from the 7th senatorial district. He is president of the regular Republican ward organization. He lives with his wife at 5849 Race street.

One other vacant council seat will be filled in Tuesday's special election. County Commissioner Fred J. Fischmann is unopposed as the candidate for the 24th ward post left vacant by the resignation of Ald. Jacob M. Arvey, now serving as an officer with the 33d division.

RABBI OF WASHINGTON BOULEVARD TEMPLE TO MARK 20TH YEAR

A festive service and reception will be held in tribute to Rabbi Samuel Schwartz, spiritual leader of Washington boulevard temple, at 8:15 o'clock Friday evening in celebration of his 20th anniversary with the congregation. Rabbi Schwartz has lived a life dedicated to the synagogue since he was sent away from his home in Hungary as a child to attend the Yeshivah, a Talmudic school.



Rabbi Samuel Schwartz.

Dr. Julian Morgenstern, president of the Hebrew Union college in Cincinnati will preach the sermon at the service to be held in the temple, Washington boulevard and Karlov avenue. Rabbi Jacob Singer, Rabbi George Fox, and Rabbi Felix Levy will participate in the service. There will be representatives of the 20 confirmation classes blessed by Rabbi Schwartz present at the reception.

CHURCH TO MARK 100 YEARS TODAY IN PLATO CENTER

Memorial Washington Reformed Presbyterian church of Plato Center, six miles west of Elgin, based on the tenets of the Scotch Covenanters, today will hold its centennial celebration with Dr. George Livingston Robinson of Chicago as the speaker.

Special music will be furnished by the Westminster quartet of Elgin. A memorial flag pole and flag will be dedicated and patriotic services will honor soldiers who rest in the adjoining cemetery.

After several years of services held in the homes of the McCornacks, the McQueens, and the Sheddens, John W. Morrison, a prairie missionary, organized the church in 1841. Timbers for the first church built in 1844 were hewn from the woods nearby. Laths and shingles were cut by hand. A sun dial placed over the door has recorded the passing of the hours for a century.

Members of the centennial committee are Mrs. Lavina Moree McKee, Mrs. Sarah Rosborough McDonald, and Mrs. Irene McCornack McQueen. Pearl Hood Rayburn is secretary of the committee.

NOW— more Chicago Tribune sales power for you — EVERY DAY OF THE WEEK!

• The editorial qualities which build greatest interest among readers produce the best returns for advertisers.

On week days the Tribune delivers from 590,000 to 630,000 more total daily circulation than other Chicago daily newspapers. On Sundays it delivers from 270,000 to 730,000 more than delivered by other Chicago Sunday newspapers.

Right in metropolitan Chicago, Tribune net paid daily circulation is 450,000 more than delivered by other Chicago daily newspapers—more than any two other Chicago daily newspapers combined.

On Sundays, the Tribune delivers in Chicago and suburbs from 385,000 to 460,000 more than other Chicago Sunday newspapers—more than the other two Chicago Sunday newspapers combined.

When You Can Have More, Why Take Less?

Every day you do without Tribune sales power, you pass up opportunities which easily can be yours. There is no need to pass them up when Tribune rates per 100,000 circulation are among the lowest in America.

Ask a Tribune representative or your advertising counsel to help you plan a program built around the Tribune which can help you get your share of the increased volume available in this market.

APRIL SET A NEW ALL TIME HIGH FOR THE MONTH IN TRIBUNE TOTAL NET PAID DAILY CIRCULATION!

Averaging well over 1,000,000 net paid, Chicago Tribune total daily circulation during April set a new all-time high for the month.

It was the eighth consecutive April to register a gain in Tribune net paid total daily circulation—an increase of more than 290,000 since April, 1933.

As higher industrial activity steps up the tempo of Chicago's trade, Tribune circulation growth delivers new slices of buying power for advertisers.

AUTOMOTIVE AND GROCERY PRODUCTS—For convenience items or for high-priced specialties, the results prove that you sell more when you build your Chicago sales drive around the Tribune. General grocery advertisers and automotive advertisers place more of their budgets in the Tribune than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

DEPARTMENT STORES—To maintain the store traffic and the sales volume which their huge establishments require, Chicago department stores place in the Tribune more of their advertising appropriations than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

TOTAL RETAIL—The Tribune is the medium on which this market is accustomed to base its buying. This is a fact proved by Chicago retailers who, whether they sell to men or to women, place in the Tribune more of their advertising budgets than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

GENERAL ADVERTISERS—When you use the Tribune you get balanced, market-wide coverage which penetrates into every neighborhood and suburb of Chicago. Recognizing this, general advertisers place in the Tribune more of their budgets than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

WOMEN'S APPAREL—Thru the Tribune, every day of the week, you reach Chicago's largest constant audience of women. Demonstrating this fact is the advertising practice of Chicago retailers who place in the Tribune more of their appropriations for women's apparel advertising than they place in any other Chicago newspaper.

4 MUSIC EXPERTS TO MATCH WITS ON MUSIC QUIZ

Four experts in music and its related fields will attempt to answer puzzlers sent in by the public on "Your Music I. Q." on W-G-N from 8:30 to 9 p. m. tomorrow. Pierre Andre will be master of ceremonies.

The first expert will be Maurice McGehee, director of Sharps and Flats, a choral group which is associated with Chicago's Urban League chorus. The second will be Siegmund Levarie, instructor in music at the University of Chicago.

From the Glass Hat of the Congress hotel will come Jean Browne, featured vocalist at this night spot. She will be expected to handle questions on popular music. Raymond Henagow, assistant editor of the Lincoln-Belmont Booster, will be the fourth.

Walt Disney to Tame Charles McCarthy Tonight

Walt Disney, who has done a pretty good job of taming one little wise guy, by name Donald Duck, will try his hand and wit at cooling down another famous brash youngster, Charlie McCarthy, when he is guest of Edgar Bergen at 7 p. m. tonight over WMAQ. While Bergen and Disney talk about their brain-children, Charlie will be making eyes at Ruth Terry, pretty singer and screen actress, who also will be a guest on the program.

W-G-N Starlet

Mary Small, 19 year old singer who in spite of her youth has become one of radio's favorites, is starting a new series of fifteen-minute weekly musical variety programs on W-G-N and the Mutual network tomorrow. Blue-eyed, brown-haired, winsome, Mary got her start in radio on the old Rudy Vallee show.

For the first program in the W-G-N-Mutual series, titled "Imperial Time," she will sing "Ol' Man River" and "I Understand."

FIND MARRIAGE LICENSE SHOWS HAVE BIG APPEAL

Women Enjoy Quin Ryan Interviews.

If you know a woman who doesn't like to talk about marriages and brides, you know the woman who isn't a steady listener to Quin Ryan's W-G-N program, "Marriage License Bureau Romances," aired at 1:30 p. m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from the office of County Clerk Michael J. Flynn.

Picking four couples at random from the large throng at the counter of the world's busiest marriage license bureau, Ryan interviews them with heart-to-heart questions. How they met, what their plans are, how and where he proposed, are among the many human interest questions Ryan puts to the would-be-weds.

Interviews Blind Pair.

In the six years the program has been a W-G-N feature no story has had more appeal than the recent case of a blind girl and her nearly blind husband to be. The bride-to-be, Dorothy Fevrus, wrote to Ryan and asked if she and her future husband could be interviewed on his program. They were invited to take part in the show and during the interview the listening public learned that the girl's fiancé could only do odd jobs. As a result of the broadcast hundreds of people attended the girl's wedding and the couple was swamped with wedding gifts.

Ryan recalls one couple who had saved three hundred pennies to pay for their license.

Describes Marriages, Too.

About once a month the broadcasts follow a couple into the marriage chambers of the courthouse and Ryan presents the couple's wedding.

Altho some men interviewed on the program have admitted that they are getting married to beat the draft, many others have told Ryan that they are leaving for camp a day or two after the wedding. These young men have made no attempt to avoid a year's service.

FORMER MAYOR OF BOYS TOWN ON CITIZENS HOUR

Youth to Be Named to Roll of Honor.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A former mayor of Father Edward Flanagan's Boys Town, the famous institution near Omaha that has been the subject of several motion pictures, will be interviewed on the Citizens of Tomorrow program over W-G-N at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday. The youth is Sam Turner, an 18 year old redhead, who will arrive here tomorrow to start work at the Stevens hotel as a mail clerk. The hotel executives heard about his excellent work at Boys Town and decided to give him a job.

Turner besides being interviewed will be named to the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll for his record at Boys Town. Philip Maxwell, who conducts the program, will interview him and cite his accomplishments along with those of George DeWitt, 17 years old, senior class president of the Burlington, Ia. High school, who also makes the Roll of Honor.

W-G-N will be the local outlet.

Boris Karloff to Star in Edgar Allen Poe Thriller

Boris Karloff, famous bogeyman of stage, screen, and radio, will star in one of Edgar Allen Poe's grimmest stories, "The Fall of the House of Usher," during the Inner Sanctum Mystery program at 7:30 p. m. today over WLS. The story concerns identical twins—a boy and a girl—who feel the same pains, read each other's thoughts, and have the same actions. The boy finally kills his sister, but she returns from her tomb to seek vengeance.

FOGARTY RENEWS OLD FRIENDSHIPS IN 'ASK IT' QUIZ

Having Time of Life with W-G-N Show.

Paul Fogarty.

With all the headaches that result from producing a radio show, Paul Fogarty, W-G-N producer, is having the time of his life staging the "Ask-It-Ball" quiz programs, broadcast from various army posts and navy stations at 7 p. m. Saturdays on W-G-N. Fogarty, who joined the army in 1917 and retired in 1923 as a captain, is meeting old friends and making new friends every week as he tours with the show.

Ask-It-Ball follows the general theme of baseball with the soldiers or sailors answering questions on 15 subjects ranging from sports and movies to geography and the army and navy. Correct answers pay from $1 to $4 to the man who answers the question and count from a single to a home run for the team.

Fogarty was on active duty at one of the camps that is taking part in the program. He served as a bayonet instructor at Camp Grant in 1920. During his period of service he also visited many of the other units that are now playing Ask-It-Ball.

Graduating from Notre Dame in 1917, Fogarty went to the officers training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis. Receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in the infantry, he was sent to numerous camps as an instructor in bayonet drill and calisthenics.

Leaving the army, Fogarty went to Culver, where he became an instructor in military science. After this period of military life he retired and entered private business.

He is the author of the comic strip "Draftie," appearing in many papers. He has produced numerous radio shows over W-G-N and other stations and is the composer of the popular song hit, "Betty Co-ed."

BLAIR WALLISER TAKES VACATION TO SOUTH SEAS

The unusual hobby of collecting islands is partly responsible for the three week vacation itinerary of Producer Blair Walliser of W-G-N who has left on a plane-steamer jaunt covering the islands of Hawaii and Samoa and Tahiti, in the South seas.

Walliser, whose wish is to visit every island in the seven seas, took a plane for the west coast to board the S. S. Mariposa on the first leg of his vacation.

He plans to mix a little work with his island hobby by taking a course in celestial navigation on the trip as a prerequisite for a commission with the United States coast guard. He has been given permission to stand watch and shoot the sun and stars with the navigators of the two seagoing ships that will carry him.

Walliser has already visited many islands in the Atlantic, Pacific, and the Gulf of Mexico.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, June 2.

Sow seeds of hardy plants. The young can be transplanted into rows in a sunny spot by July. The plants will develop and be well able to withstand the winter without injury. Sowing the seed thinly will make transplanting unnecessary; in fact, all kinds of seed should not be sown to thickly.

The pruning of spring flowering shrubs should be done after they are thru blooming because the branches that bore the flowers can be cut away without injury and new growths will be forced into strong growth with abundant buds. Forsythia, bridal wreath, Van Houtte's spirea, shadbush, and many others require this treatment.

Tuesday, June 3.

Keep edges of walks and beds well trimmed. Cultivation should continue to keep down the weeds and give full opportunity for the plants to grow. However, where perennials grow close together care must be taken not to injure the roots. Mulch these plants about July 1 and avoid excessive cultivation and the necessity of frequent watering.

Plant tuberous rooted begonias in a shady location [not too dense] in a leafmold soil. Under similar conditions may be planted fancy leaved caladiums. Both are good for window boxes in the shade. Plant bedding plants.

Young, vigorous plants of annuals will furnish flowers much earlier than seed sown now. The petunia is a good example. Dust hollyhocks frequently with dusting sulphur or bordeaux mixture.

Wednesday, June 4.

Plant tender waterlilies. Use a rich soil and do not overplant. Give full sun. An application of liquit manure to peonies will give larger blooms. Plant dahlia roots and place stakes at the same time. Plant about three feet apart. Sow portulaca in sunny places.

The four o'clock is one of the best annuals to grow in restricted or congested city areas. It makes a good hedge plant. Plant a few of the new morning glories from started, potted plants.

Thursday, June 5.

Home gardeners having outdoor space will find that the house plants will do much better if placed outdoors. Palms, ferns, and similar plants should be in shade, altho some palms, like the date palm, will do well anywhere.

Staking the taller growing perennials is essential. Asters, delphiniums, helenium, dahlias, and others will look unkempt if allowed to grow at will.

Friday, June 6.

Cut back the old flower stalks of the iris and do not permit the plant to form seeds. Transplanting may take place after flowering. Use good sized divisions. Cut back the leaves to six inches. Do not plant too deep. Do not plant bedding plants while the soil is dry; water the plants thoroly before planting.

Saturday, June 7.

Sow sweet corn now. Sow again in 10 days for a late crop. Mulch both sides of the sweet pea row with decayed manure, grass clipping, or other material; watch for aphids and spray with tobacco or Black Leaf 40. Spray potatoes with arsenate of lead the minute a potato beetle is noticed.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

SHOWER STALL CAN FILL ODD NOOK IN MANY A HOME

Complete Unit Available for Easy Placing.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There need be nothing expensive—any more—about a shower stall installation in the home. Still less expensive is the shower over the tub. Showers can start at the bottom, in your basement, or at the top in your attic.

A shower has been called the great American institution, the nation's morning pickup. There is nothing really new about it, since an ancient Babylonian king modernized his palace some 5,000 years ago and installed a shower stall for his own use. His plumber was wise enough to insist on a waterproof floor with a drain made of clay tile, and it was built a trifle large—some 15 feet square—since slaves had to do the "showering." Servants instead of pipes sprayed water over the king in those by-gone days.

Wide Range of Prices.

New showers and stalls aren't limited to royalty or to the rich, for an everyday basement can have a stall. Nice, neat leakproof unit assemblies are on the market, in a wide range of prices. A shower can be installed over an existing bathtub without tearing out the walls, or one can take advantage, perhaps, of an unneeded closet and make it over into a shower and dressing room.

There are cabinets which are independent of the walls of a room and for this reason are especially fine for modernization work. And these cabinet shower stalls, whether de luxe or of inexpensive gavanized steel with duck curtains, are grand places to relax when the temperature soars and vacations are a long way off, or far in the past.

Stalls Are Durable.

These modern stalls come tailored to fit almost any wall or corner and they are manufactured for hard knocks and the ceaseless demands of every day living.

There is shower equipment for all family ages, from 8 months to 80 years and water tight shower inclosures can be set down in your home, self-sufficient units, to stay with you for keeps.

Receptors can be of rubber, of porcelain enamel and compositions. There's a receptor which has been given a nonslippery feature by a special method of infusing certain ingredients into the porcelain receptor coating. So that whether your stall floor is dry or wet, it isn't slippery.

Now Easily Cleaned.

Shower heads are designed to save water by directing it all at the bather and at the same time aerating it so its effect may be soothing. And many of the new shower heads are easily cleaned if and when they show signs of clogging.

From the newest shower equipment to match the chrominum trimmings on your swanky plumbing fixtures and the newest cabinet showers of tile, glass, and porcelain enamel, to the simplest utility fixtures and stalls of galvanized steels there are units available for all needs and occasions and purses and places.

JUNE 1, 1941

Season of 1940-'41 Proves Healthy One for Chicago Theaters

By Cecil Smith

According to the method of reckoning historically employed by this department, "Accent on Youth," arriving at the Selwyn theater on Tuesday, will be the first new entry in the 1941-'42 theatrical season. Memorial day, or the week-end nearest to it, is always used for statistical purposes as the dividing point between the old dramatic season and the new.

In spite of periodic artistic slumps and occasional signs of weakness at various box offices, the theatrical year of 1940-'41 was a reasonably healthy one, with the theaters occupied a little more of the time than in 1939-'40. The Blackstone theater enjoyed the year's greatest prosperity, for 51 of the 66 weeks chalked up by "Life with Father" fell within the season just ended. The Grand Opera house, open 41½ weeks out of 52, was the city's second busiest playhouse. The Harris, Selwyn, and Erlanger all tied for third place with 27 operating weeks, the Studebaker was occupied for 19 weeks, and the Auditorium has played host to "Hellzapoppin," its only legitimate attraction, for the last three weeks of the period under consideration.

On June 1, 1940, the loop theater district suddenly took on a completely deserted aspect. "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "The Little Foxes," both highly successful if completely contrasting attractions, were wiped out by an unprecedented streak of bad business, apparently caused by public depression over the shocking turn of events in Europe during the month of May. Only "Life with Father," so superbly performed by Lillian Gish and Percy Waram and so endearing in every nostalgic detail, was able to survive and prosper thru June—and on, nearly until another June.

We waited until the middle of July before the season's first new entertainment arrived. Al Jolson, succumbing to an irresistible desire to appear before an audience again after nine years away from the legitimate stage, produced a lavish musical comedy entitled "Hold On to Your Hats." Mounted at a cost exceeding $100,000, the show was tried out in Detroit for a fortnight and then brought here for six weeks before the New York première.

"Hold On to Your Hats" still lingers in memory as one of the happy events of the season. Altho Mr. Jolson still retained his old-time showmanship and audience appeal, he did not commit Ed Wynn's error of endeavoring to carry the entire burden himself. Martha Raye, a familiar comedienne in the films but not on the stage, proved to be a brash and merry person. Raoul Pene du Bois' settings and costumes were exceptionally handsome, and Catherine Littlefield's choreography brought forward many fresh ideas in popular dancing.

• • •

The engagement of "Hold On to Your Hats" was enlivened by many offstage exchanges between Mr. Jolson and his former wife, Ruby Keeler, who also was originally in the cast. In the middle of the Chicago run Miss Keeler left the company and was replaced by the charming Eunice Healey.

"Hold On to Your Hats" was succeeded on the last day of August by "Too Many Girls," a George Abbott musical production with a highly successful New York record. In spite of a brace of bright songs by Rodgers and Hart, attractive costumes by Mr. du Bois (who obviously had more money to spend in "Hold On to Your Hats"), and a group of eager and talented young performers, "Too Many Girls" languished for three discouraging weeks and departed. A suave but superficial show, it had neither the forthright robustness of humor nor the stellar personalities to attract a Chicago audience.

• • •

Somehow the early fall season got off to a slow start. "The Male Animal," arriving early in September, suffered in less degree from the apathy of a public which had refused to take "Too Many Girls" with any enthusiasm. Inasmuch as both plays were set in college locales, the suspicion arose that the theater public of Chicago is not much concerned with higher education. Certainly the strong plea for academic freedom presented between the comic lines of "The Male Animal" seemed to strike no responsive chord, despite the winning and natural per- (Continued on Page 2.)

With the departure of "Life with Father" Chicago's longest run show is now "My Sister Eileen," which, after 15 weeks, is still a favorite with the town's playgoers. One of the comedy's lovely actresses is Marcy Wescott (above), who plays the part of Eileen Sherwood. The comedy is being presented at the Harris theater.

Little-Girl-Hair-in-the-Eyes is known around the Paramount studios as Veronica Lake, and folks are saying that she has a future. You can see her in "I Wanted Wings" at the Chicago.

AH-HH-H! We're peeking in on a proposal! Says he to she—"Will you marry me?" You'll know the lady's answer when you see Anna Neagle and John Carroll in the new RKO musical comedy—"Sunny." It's at the Palace theater.

formance of Elliott Nugent. "The Male Animal" lasted for 11 moderate weeks.

Toward the end of September an irrepressible group of youngsters from Hollywood took over the Grand Opera house with a topical revue entitled "Meet the People." For 12 weeks thereafter we beheld the remarkable spectacle of an unbroken procession of theatergoers enthusiastically applauding a semi-amateur, terribly uneven, and economically staged little production, not worthy of comparison with "Too Many Girls." It must have succeeded because everyone in it was so young. If the skits and routines were not really fresh, at least they gave the illusion of freshness because the performers had never done them before.

• • •

"Ladies in Retirement" was the first serious play of the season, and now that the season is over it remains one of the year's truly memorable experiences. Flora Robson's portrait of the spinster who murdered an innocent old lady and sealed her corpse in a brick oven possessed an uncanny exactness and power of projection. In one of the best supporting casts within memory Isobel Elsom gave a delightful and sympathetic portrayal of the ex-chorus girl who was Miss Robson's victim, and Estelle Winwood surpassed herself as Miss Robson's goofy sister, in love with her telescope.

"Ladies in Retirement" was followed at the Harris by a play of similar title but enormously different mood, "Lady in Waiting." Gladys George, a giddy if somewhat limited comedienne, made her first appearance in several years as the heroine of the comedy adapted from Margery Sharp's "The Nutmeg Tree." As a former variety actress thrust into a social environment more austere than any she had been used to, Miss George found all the laughs there were. The comedy was rather thin, however, and its audience was exhausted in three weeks.

Two Pulitzer prize plays were presented in Chicago during the season, altho the second of these, "There Shall Be No Night," did not receive the award until some months after its Chicago engagement. William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," however, came to Chicago in late October covered with medals from both the Pulitzer committee and the New York drama critics' circle.

This was Chicago's first taste of Saroyan, and not everybody liked the flavor. Despite the dramaturgical deficiencies of the play—which was not really a play at all, as every one agreed, but a kaleidoscope of little episodes and vignettes of character—the warmth of Mr. Saroyan's love for every member of the human race created a rare and happy mood for those who were willing to share it. Eddie Dowling, in the central rôle of a philosophic drunkard, contributed one of the most perfectly conceived performances of the year.

Ruth Chatterton's revival of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" spent seven restless weeks in Chicago between November and January, occupying no less than three different theaters. Miss Chatterton's Eliza Doolittle, growing from a Cockney flower girl into a lady capable of refined conversation and perfect diction, reëstablished her as one of the undoubted first actresses of the American stage. The supporting company was uneven, but the production was a distinguished one, and should have been included in the Theater Guild subscription list in place of Ruth Gordon's "Here Today."

This latter effusion pushed "Pygmalion" from the Selwyn into the Erlanger. "Here Today" was a frothy comedy which almost made the grade back in the '30s. For some reason Miss Gordon, one of the most accomplished and delightful comediennes of the stage, continued to regard its dated script with affection, and wished to appear in a revival of it. To me it was the second most boring event of the theatrical season's surpassed in meaninglessness only by "See My Lawyer."

• • •

A week before "Here Today" arrived, the Shuberts brought to the Harris a musical version of "Tonight or Never," entitled "Night of Love." Marguerite Namara, one-time prima donna of the Chicago Opera association, gave a rich and luscious characterization of a middle-aged diva who enjoyed meddling in the lives of younger people. Admittedly the show lacked both distinction and modernity and I found myself in a minority when I admitted that I enjoyed it very much and thought its backstage operatic jokes quite funny. Apparently I am just a pushover for anything connected with opera. At any rate, "Night of Love" went to New York and fell flatter than it had here.

A week before Christmas the labor union group known as Labor Stage rescued the Studebaker theater from disuse and presented "New Pins and Needles" at $1 top [$1.50 week-ends]. A witty, urbane, well directed musical revue which never took itself too seriously, "New Pins and Needles" deserved the profitable 17 weeks it spent here, and it was enjoyed by all except a few rather violent people who managed to read subversive political doctrines into it. It hadn't any, but since it had a left wing reputation it was sometimes rather harshly prejudged.

• • •

The champion musical comedy of the year, "Du Barry Was a Lady," arrived at the Erlanger on Dec. 22, forcing Miss Chatterton to move to her third theater. The financial success of "Du Barry Was a Lady" is a familiar story, and Bert Lahr had good reason to leave at the end of 11 weeks with a good opinion both of himself and of Chicago. His mincing vulgarian of a King Louis remains a classic of vivid, economical and aristocratic buffoonery. So overwhelmingly amusing was he, indeed, that few people stopped to notice that "Du Barry Was a Lady" was in other regards not the best musical of the year, or that the costumes and settings began to look pretty ratty as time went on.

And so our retrospective summary has arrived at the Christmas holidays, which mark the halfway point of our official theatrical year. Next Sunday we shall pause to reflect upon the plays of the winter and spring season.

Notes of the Theater

The last theatrical first night for some time—perhaps for the entire summer, unless "Gay Divorce" comes out this way—will be that of "Accent on Youth" at the Selwyn theater Tuesday evening. Notice, by the way, that the theater has been changed, for the Blackstone was the house originally announced.

Luther Adler, last seen here in the title part of the Group theater's memorable performance of Clifford Odets' "Golden Boy," will be costarred with his wife, Sylvia Sidney, whose fame up until now has been greater in motion pictures than on the stage. This will not be Miss Sidney's first stage appearance in Chicago, no matter what you read on this page last Sunday, for Claudia Cassidy, who has never been known to be wrong, remembers seeing her early in both their public careers in a play called "Crime." The original New York cast of "Crime," in 1927, included Kay Francis, Kay Johnson, Chester Morris, Kent Douglas, and Guthrie McClintic!

The present tour of "Accent on Youth" opened in Syracuse, N. Y., on May 2, and has moved west by way of Toronto and Detroit. The cast includes James Gregory, Oscar Stirling, Dorothy Libaire, Clyde M. Waddell, Valerie Valaire, Philip Arthur, and John Triggs.

Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay, producers of "Arsenic and Old Lace" at the Grand Opera house, are to be roundly congratulated for rescuing Laura Hope Crews from a movie career of 12 years' duration, and persuading her to appear as Abbey Brewster, one of the two kindly ladies with a weakness for poisoned elderberry wine. Miss Crews' last previous Chicago stage appearance was in "The Silver Cord," in 1926. Before then she had played here in such successes as "The Great Divide," "Her Husband's Wife," "Blackbirds," "The Werewolf," with John Drew in both "The Tyranny of Tears" and "The Chief," and with Henry Miller in "The Havoc." During her Hollywood career Miss Crews has occasionally come back to the New York stage, without going on subsequent tours—in Clare Kummer's "Her Master's Voice," in the Cole Porter musical "Jubilee," in "Yr. Obedient Husband" [with Fredric March and Florence Eldridge], and in Katherine Dayton's "Save Me the Waltz." Miss Crews is featured in a current movie, "The Flame of New Orleans," with Marlene Dietrich. She is a native of San Francisco.

Five members of the Chicago company of "Life with Father," which closed a week ago, have transferred to the Detroit [Dorothy Gish-Louis Calhern] company: Peter Jamerson, who may graduate from the rôle of John to that of Clarence; Margaret Randall as Annie; David Jeffries as Harlan, the youngest of the Day sons; Jimmy Roland as Whitney, and Richard Feldman, who understudies the part of Harlan. All are expected to return to the Chicago company when the cast reunites for next season's tour.

The 1941-'42 plans of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society, while still tentative, are much more definite than a week ago. While subscribers are enjoying "Arsenic and Old Lace," at the Grand Opera house, as their sixth play of the present season, they may also look forward to the prospect of all or most of the following plays next season: Katharine Hepburn in a new play by Philip Barry, author of "The Philadelphia Story"; Helen Hayes in Maxwell Anderson's "Candle in the Wind"; Fredric March and Florence Eldridge in Sophie Treadwell's "Hope for a Harvest," which nearly came here this spring; Maurice Evans in Shakespeare's "Macbeth"; Rose Franken's "Claudia"; and Jane Cowl and Peggy Wood in John Van Druten's "Old Acquaintance."

In addition to the 10 cities already operating under the subscription plan, the Theater Guild is adding Indianapolis and Toronto next season. As might be expected, Chicago led the roster of Theater guild cities last year [with the exception of New York]. There are 9,341 subscribers here. Boston provided close competition, with 9,066. The season just ending is said to have been the most successful since the Theater Guild organized its touring circuit in 1927.

National Theater Conference fellowships, carrying awards of $1,000 each, to be used for study, were awarded to nine men for the year 1941-'42. The winners in this region are George F. Blair, Bloomington, Ind.; Richard Moody, Urbana, Ill.; Jack L. Hatfield, Indianapolis, Ind., and Charles A. Leavay, Ann Arbor, Mich. All will further their knowledge of the non-commercial theater by studying at theaters of their choice. The fellowships are made possible by a $25,000 three year grant of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Critic Gives Resume of the Theater Hits

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—Eight of the ten best plays of this last theater season still are playing on Broadway. I have just been checking them. Of course, when I call them the ten best, the choice is arbitrarily Mantle's. Other equally well informed playgoers have disagreed with me, and that, this still being a democracy, is their proud privilege.

Of my ten selections only Elmer Rice's "Flight to the West" and George Kaufman's "George Washington Slept Here" have been withdrawn from Broadway. The Rice drama, being pretty heavy fare for the summer trade, and being definitly and outspokenly anti-Nazi, and therefore frankly controversial, is not likely to be revived over the barn theater circuit and may not be toured next fall. The "George Washington" comedy, on the other hand, already is a prime favorite in the summer books. I recently had word that the Bucks County theater in Pennsylvania will start its season on June 6 with this comedy, and with Charles Butterworth, Hollywood's sad-faced comedian, playing the part Ernest Truex created in New York.

Of the other eight, the two prize-winning dramas, Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine," and Emlyn Williams' "The Corn Is Green," still are drawing crowds, even against the opposition of an early heat wave.

• • •

Miss Hellman's drama is as definitly anti-Nazi as was that of Rice, but the issue in this case is more human than political. In "Flight to the West" Mr. Rice exposed a Nazi spy and turned him over to the English authorities in Bermuda. In "Watch on the Rhine" Miss Hellman reveals the plight of a native German who has dedicated his life to the eradication of Nazlism in Germany and the world. He is briefly in America with his American wife and three children and, standing in danger of being sold out to the Gestapo, is forced to strangle his betrayer to aid his escape.

The emotional appeal of "Watch on the Rhine" is centered in the family life of the hero rather than in his devotion to a cause. The final scene of the play, in which the father says farewell to his children, is the scene that sends audiences dim-eyed from the theater and the scene that probably has done more than any other to guarantee the popularity of the drama, that and an exceptional performance by Paul Lukas as the father in question.

• • •

Ethel Barrymore has had a great deal to do with the continued success of "The Corn Is Green," and still will be doing right by that play a couple of years from now. The Williams drama also is a splendid play on its own account and, any time Miss Barrymore is tired of playing it, will unquestionably continue successfully in stock and on the screen. This, you will recall, is the story of a high-minded English school teacher who has a hand in shaping the destiny of a young Welsh coal miner with an urge for learning.

"Native Son," the Richard Wright-Orson Welles dramatization of Wright's book, which stood first in the running before Miss Hellman's drama and William Saroyan's fantastic comedy, "The Beautiful People," came suddenly into the picture in late April, still is attracting audiences, altho mostly in the lower priced seat sections. This is a "people's drama" in the sense that it is concerned with a democracy's responsibility for the lives and character deterioration of its underprivileged citizen groups. The better-offs find it a disturbing bit of propaganda, altho emotionally moving.

• • •

The Gertrude Lawrence "Lady in the Dark" combination is as potent a box office draw as ever it was. Gertrude could go on playing it thru the summer undoubtedly, but she hasn't the strength. Therefore she will withdraw from the Moss Hart comedy in July and rest until September. Being devoted to Britain's cause, the actress has made Clipper plane reservations for a flight to England. She planned to devote her summer to war work at home. Now she has been advised that the work she has been doing in America is of greater immediate importance than anything she could do in England, where the supply of idle entertainers is abnormal, and she has been persuaded to delay her trip. She will, she says, continue her war work and rest between benefits.

Gertrude Lawrence.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" continues as another of the box office favorites. There has not been an empty seat, Crouse and Lindsay, who produced the play, assure me, from the second week of the run that began in early January. This Joseph Kesselring comedy has no less than 21 backers, and they are prepared to spend their summer dancing on the sands of many beaches.

Yet, for all its success, there still is a divided audience reaction at the "Arsenic and Old Lace" performances. The story of the two dear, simple, little old lady murderesses who delight in putting homeless old men out of their misery by poisoning them, sets one part [the larger part] of its audiences laughing hysterically, while the other part gets no further than tolerant smiles and abortive giggles.

• • •

"My Sister Eileen" also is a comedy success that may hold up thru at least a part of the summer. The appeal of the Ruth McKenny stories, as Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov have adapted them to the stage, is more local than general. The background is that of Greenwich village, which means more on Broadway than it would in Des Moines. But the comedy extravagances following the adventure of two girls from the west, living in a basement village apartment while looking for jobs in New York, are sound. The girls contact a variety of amusing persons, including a section of the Brazilian navy, before they get their jobs.

"Claudia" is another of the quiet successes of the year. Most people speak of Rose Franken's comedy with enthusiasm in their first reference, and follow immediately with a tribute to Dorothy McGuire's fitness for, and appeal, in the same part. Miss Franken is of the opinion that there are few Claudias to be found among the available ingenues and, if she is right, Miss McGuire, who comes from Omaha, Neb., is entitled to a big slice of credit for the play's success. She is strongly backed, however, by Donald Cook, who last week won a theater club citation for his performance as the husband, and Frances Starr, who, as you should remember, is a bulwark of strength for any cast.

• • •

This leaves Owen Davis' "Mr. and Mrs. North" as the tenth of the list to be accounted for. This is a bright, believable and quite casual family murder mystery. It also started in January, and has been doing nicely ever since. I suspect one reason is the solid simplicity of its foundation. Mr. and Mrs. North, away over a week-end, return to their apartment and shortly discover a dead man in the broom closet. Few playgoers would ordinarily think of such a thing happening to them, but few would deny that it might happen, and if it did, what would they do?

The season's theater entertainment has, at least, been varied. Four of the ten selected plays are definitly serious, "Watch on the Rhine," "Native Son," "Flight to the West" and "The Corn Is Green." Three are semi-serious, "Lady in the Dark," "Claudia," and "Mr. and Mrs. North." And three fairly riotous, "Arsenic and Old Lace," "My Sister Eileen," and "George Washington Slept Here." It is, I believe, a representative list.

CHICAGO PLAYBILLS

OPENING:

"Accent on Youth," revival of the comedy by Samson Raphaelson, with Sylvia Sydney and Luther Adler; Selwyn theater; opens Tuesday.

CONTINUING:

"My Sister Eileen," adaptation of Ruth McKenney's book by Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov, with Audrey Christie, Marcy Westcott, Philip Loeb, and Guy Robertson; Harris theater; 16th week.

"Arsenic and Old Lace," comedy, by Joseph Kesselring, with Eric von Stroheim, Laura Hope Crews, Effie Shannon, and Helen Twelvetrees; Grand Opera house; 9th week.

"Hellzapoppin," revue, with Eddie Garr and Billy House; Auditorium theater; fourth week.

Drama Notes

"Tobacco Road" actually closed in New York last night, after a record-breaking run of 3,180 performances. According to the press agent, business had not fallen off. "It's simply that we have no more records to shatter," he said. The squalid southern tragedy opened on Dec. 4, 1933, and has occupied three different theaters. Five actors appeared as Jeeter Lester—Henry Hull, 233 times; James Barton, 1,899 times; James Bell, 305 times; Eddie Garr [now in Chicago in "Hellzapoppin"], 120 times; and Will Geer, 623 times. A road company has just completed its sixth season of touring, with John Barton as Jeeter, and will begin its seventh season in Los Angeles on Aug. 25.

The Actors' Company of Chicago, whose theater is at 218 South Wabash avenue, will present "Kind Lady" as the last play of their season. Six performances will be given, beginning on Friday evening.

Only 11 per cent of the Theater Guild subscribers are asking for refunds, despite the fact that "Arsenic and Old Lace" had been running for seven weeks before the subscription period began. Evidently many are electing to see it for a second time.

Palmer House Books Band of Skinnay Ennis

By Will Davidson.

Yoo Hoo! Skinnay! C'mon over . . . and see what the Palmer House has lined up for the Skinnay Ennis debut show in the Empire room June 26.

Not that your music and your voice that sounds like the top of the fourth flight of stairs—only prettier—aren't enough, but just to make it a cinch they've lined up a tobasco sauce revue starring Rosario and Antonio. They're the kids from Seville who left Spain before the war became Franco and earnest, and have since been doing their flamenco routines in the surtax bracket night spots. "The Three Pitchmen" about whom I know nothing except that they are comedians; Johnny Mack, a tap dancer; and the South American singer, Carlos Ramirez fill out your show. Miss Merriel Abbott's girls are working hard on an "Angel" routine to fit in with your songs, and an equatorial rhythm number. Just a hint. If you want to really make the show a hit get Maitre Fritz Hagner to do a turn. He's a trouper dooper.

• • •

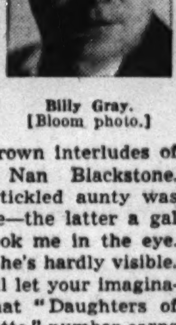
The Bismarck at last has broken the eminently successful Kassel-Levant-Keller cycle, and announces with considerable excitement that Jimmy Joy brings his band into the Walnut room June 10. The Joyous occasion of the 15th anniversary of the new building that now houses the half century old hotel. Joy brings along Betty Sue Burns and Art Lund as vocalists, and the floor show will feature the holdover favorites, Maurice and Maryea. The Jane Hadley girls will have new summery routines.

• • •

Remember the tall, dark honey who took over Frances Williams' rôle in "Life Begins at 8:40?" Well, she's coming to the Drake Tuesday night for two short weeks. She is Adrienne—once known as the baby of the Met, because her mother was Margarete Metzenauer, famous contralto. Adrienne blends classics and popular music in her unusual repertoire. With impeccable Ramon Ramos giving her his usual suave accompaniment, it should be an attractive presentation.

• • •

A little girl with a great big whirl is stealing the show at Harry's New Yorker. She is Darlene Walders, amazing acrobatic sprite with all the fresh, clean charm of a Walt Disney centaurette. And she was a life saver for my old aunt from Dubuque who had been expending a lot of energy stuffing cotton in her ears during the dark brown interludes of Billy Gray and Nan Blackstone. Another act that tickled aunty was Claude and Andree—the latter a gal who can almost look me in the eye. She's six four, and he's hardly visible. They dance, and I'll let your imagination run riot. That "Daughters of the Floradora Sextette" number earns a laurel for the Muriel Kretlow dancers, altho aunty said the Floradora girls never wore THAT sort of costume. May Lewis, charming young singer, Arne Barnett's crack little band, and Al Milton's rhumba unit fill out the evening.



Billy Gray.

I'm a little unhappy about Billy Gray, who is a grand natural comedian. His Helen Morgan skit is hilarious, on the naughty side, and he has talent for uproarious comedy of the ad lib type. Maybe he just looks at us in the audience and decides we're a bunch of sticks that need to be planted in dirt.

When a chemist wants to perfect a solution he sometimes needs only to add the tiniest drop of something very vital. Head chemist Fred Evans of the Chez Paree talent bureau added little Judy Starr to his good but heavy show and look—the whole thing bubbles and sings along like a contented teakettle. Judy is a darling and her songs are refreshing. After his disastrous flight into the terpsichorean stratosphere, Jack Cole has come down to the cafe floor again and, good news, has beautiful Florence Leslie back with him in his East Indian numbers. Paul Whiteman and John Boles, two old-timers who know what it means to be famous, go along steadily pleasing the customers. No, pleasing is not the word—they send them into ecstacies.

• • •

Art Kassel, with lovely little Marion Holmes, brings his band into the Aragon Tuesday for two weeks. It should be a happy engagement for Art, for he has lots of friends.

The Trianon greets a new band from the west on Saturday when Marvin Dale comes in from Hollywood. Lawrence Welk closes Thursday, and Ray Herbeck plays a one nighter Friday.

• • •

That Art Jarrett smoothies show at the Blackhawk is stepping up its pace constantly, and friends of Hal Kemp are sighing with nostalgic delight as many of the old tunes come back in typical Kemp style. The Robinson twins, as lively as their hair is red, are on the bill now, and they fit the picture beautifully.

• • •

The Rhumba Casino opened too late for review this week, but they had a sellout crowd, with something like a thousand advance reservations before they jerked out the telephone. The place is an amazing architectural adventure that must be seen to be really appreciated.

• • •

Boswelling the Bistros: Al Fuller, the happy adjective bender of the Palmer House, is doing a gallant comeback at Passavant hospital. . . . Comfort Harris, who did a neat turn with Paul Jordan's orchestra during its one night stand at the Hotel Sherman, is singing at Ye Olde Cellar. . . . A singing Spanish film star is topping and stopping the show at La Fiesta cafe. He is Juan Jose Martinez Casado. What! No middle name? . . . . The daring young lady who leaps from a speeding motorbike to a trapeze in Riverview park's motordrome show is pretty Joan Spalding—at 23 a circus vet of 12 years. . . . .Del Courtney had a nice compliment the other day. The 20th Bombardment wing, GHQ air force, based at Fort Douglas, Utah, wired him they'd formed a Del Courtney club. Swing Commander Courtney.

Vaudeville

Willie Shore, who acted a few weeks ago in "See My Lawyer," is a headline attraction of the current State-Lake theater stage show, entitled "The Laff Parade of 1941." Other features, several of which have been brought to the loop from an engagement at Michael Todd's north side Theater-Cafe, are Prof. Lamberti, the comic xylophonist; the Eight White Guards; Ben Yost's Hussars of Harmony; Lalage, girl aerialist; Don Hooten, cowboy humorist; Dolly Arden, control dancer, and Bea Mathews, parader. The picture is "Free and Easy," with Ruth Hussey and Robert Cummings.

The Chicago theater stage show is divided into two parts this week, a "Gaucho Fiesta" and a "Polish Village Festival." In the latter a troupe of 40 entertainers will be headed by Sigmund and Ludmila Rossiliano, who recently danced at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Others in the show are the Singing Commanders, the Lime Trio, Jack Hoist and Milady, and the Chicago theater ballet. The screen attraction is "I Wanted Wings."

An Oriental extravaganza is offered to Rialto theater patrons this week, with Amy Fong as the star. The roster of performers includes June St. Clair, Marie Cord, Renee, and Country and Brenna. On the screen Basil Rathbone may be seen in "The Black Cat."

Ravinia Festival of 26 Concerts to Begin on June 28

Noted Soloists and Conductors Will Be Heard

By Edward Barry.

This is an attempt to answer in advance a multitude of questions about Ravinia in general and the 1941 Ravinia festival in particular. If any question of yours is neglected here, it means that I do not know the answer.

Ravinia park is a great tract of lawn and woodland lying between Sheridan road and the Green Bay road about 20 miles north of the loop. Here, early in the century, was an amusement park which offered a pleasant summer objective for excursionists on the North Shore electric. There were great, cool picnic areas, a baseball diamond, a theater, and, I believe, a merry-go-round.

Later, serious music got a foothold at Ravinia and soon changed the character of the park almost entirely. Louis Eckstein, owner of the tract, produced summer opera in the little pavilion in the woods, and maintained so high a quality that the name Ravinia came to be one of the most magical of musical words. This opera era extended, roughly, from 1919 to 1932. In the latter year the cold tentacles of the depression reached even secluded Ravinia park.

• • •

From then until 1936 the park was left in undisputed possession of the birds and the bees. During those years the project of reviving Ravinia was a continually recurring topic of conversation among North Shore people, but it was not until the spring of 1936 that an energetic committee took over and actually did something about it. It was decided not to attempt opera, which is frightfully expensive, but to present the Chicago Symphony orchestra in a series of concerts under guest conductors. To make the project possible, Mrs. Eckstein, widow of the owner, donated the use of the park.

The necessary guaranty fund was raised, the festival went on, and the public came delightedly back to Ravinia. So successful was the season that the guarantors received back at the end of the season a substantial part of the sums they had advanced.

The following seasons repeated the pattern of the first with only minor changes. It was found that the Ravinia festival filled an actual musical need in that it brought to Chicago a vast number of conductors who are not available during the winter season, but whose style and approach were in every way worthy of study. Among those who conducted the orchestra at Ravinia during the years 1936 to 1940, inclusive, were Ernest Ansermet, Hans Lange [later he was made associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra], Fritz Reiner, Vladimir Golschmann, Sir Ernest MacMillan, Hans Kindler, Artur Rodzinski, Eugene Ormandy, Eugene Goossens, Willem Van Hoogstraten, Sir Adrian Boult, Nicolai Malko, and John Barbirolli.

Soloists were used sparingly at first, but it was soon found that the public demands them and they were supplied. In the main, they were the same people who glorify our winter concert halls, but there was an additional pleasure in hearing them amid such unusual surroundings.

As to répertoire, the directors of the Ravinia festival have fallen in with the traditions of summer music by not asking their audiences to digest much new or difficult music. The staples of the répertoire have been such things as the first eight symphonies of Beethoven, the four of Brahms, Tschaikowsky's last three, the Weber overtures, and the regular excerpts from the Wagner music dramas. And some works which are regarded as too hackneyed for winter concerts regularly find place on Ravinia's programs.

• • •

The 1941 Ravinia festival will consist of 26 concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra [two of them under Frederick Stock, the rest under guest conductors] and four concerts by the Budapest string quartet. There will be soloists at several of the symphony concerts and either a soloist or a guest artist at each of the string quartet concerts.

The festival will begin Saturday evening, June 28. It will end Sunday afternoon, Aug. 17. Concerts will be given each Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Stock's two appearances are on June 28 and 29. The guest conductors, with their dates, are as follows: Sir Thomas Beecham, July 1 to July 13; Nicolai Malko, July 15 to July 20; Carlos Chavez, July 22 to July 27; Georg Szell, July 29 to Aug. 3; Pierre Monteux, Aug. 5 to Aug. 10.

The soloists so far announced are Rudolph Firkursny, pianist; René Leroy, flutist; Gitta Gradova, pianist; Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, and Helen Traubel, soprano. The first two will appear in the first and second weeks, respectively, under Sir Thomas Beecham. Miss Gradova will play under Mr. Malko's direction during the third week. Mr. Menuhin is scheduled for July 24 and 26, when Mr. Chavez will be in charge, and Miss Traubel will take part in the last two orchestral concerts of the season—Aug. 9 and 10—under Mr. Monteux's direction. Only one of the Budapest String quartet's assisting artists is known at the present writing. He is Leonard Shure, pianist, and he will appear with the quartet on Aug. 14.

A surprising proportion of this year's conductors are new. Neither Beecham, Chavez, Szell, nor Monteux has ever before conducted in the Chicago district. And the remaining conductor, Malko, was new only last season.

Of the soloists, the most interesting would seem to be Miss Traubel. This is partly because she has been absent for so long, partly because she has won a great reputation for herself in the east since her last Chicago appearance. She is an American, and a specialist in Wagnerian rôles.

Naturally, there is almost no information available yet on the actual music to be presented. Mr. Firkursny will play the Dvorak concerto, Mr. Leroy one of Mozart's, Mr. Menuhin probably the Beethoven and the Mendelssohn. It is known that Dr. Stock's second program [that of Sunday afternoon, June 29] will consist of music acceptable to children.

• • •

Ravinia's week-day concerts begin at 8:30, Sunday concerts at 4. Admission to the grounds and the use of one of the 2,600 unreserved seats outside the pavilion costs 75 cents. The rule is first come, first served on the unreserved seats, and on big nights there is always an overflow onto the lawns. Indeed, many persons prefer the lawns even when there are plenty of unreserved seats. By the way, there is to be a new note of luxury this summer in the unreserved seats. Some 600 of them will have arm rests. These have been brought down from the old Ravinia grandstand.

A reserved seat inside the pavilion ordinarily costs an additional 75 cents. However, for certain special events a higher charge may be made.

To persons who plan to attend several concerts, the festival association offers a book of 18 coupons which may be used either for general admissions or reserved seats. Since the purchase price of the book is but $10, this effects a considerable saving.

How to Get to Ravinia

Ravinia park can be reached either by the Green Bay road or Sheridan road. The former is preferable, because the parking area on the west side of the park is much larger and better arranged than that on the east. However, in very wet weather, the east parking lot [reached by Sheridan road] is the safer.

The North Shore electric operates trains to Ravinia's gate from the loop and the north side.

The Ravinia concerts are presented by the festival association, a group of public spirited citizens who not only assume the very heavy administrative work connected with the project, but also guarantee and persuade others to help guarantee the financial stability of the festival.

TO OPEN SUMMER FETE

Frederick Stock will conduct the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Ravinia park on June 28. This concert will begin the seven week north shore festival.

Current Music News

The Philharmonic String Quartet will give a series of three chamber music concerts in the Goodman theater on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, and Jan. 25. The series will be sponsored by the Lake View Musical society, which, under the presidency of Mrs. Harrison H. Havner, is making a constructive effort to fulfill the purpose stated in its charter, "to stimulate musical interest in Chicago." Founded in 1895, the society has given constant support to the Chicago Symphony orchestra and the Woman's Symphony orchestra, and has distributed scholarships to the amount of $10,000. This is the first time, however, that the society—or any other women's musical club in Chicago—has undertaken to sponsor a chamber music series. Hans Lange is serving in an advisory capacity. The members of the Philharmonic String Quartet are John Weicher, Robert Quick, Walter Hancock, and Dudley Powers.

The St. James choir school, located at St. James Methodist church, 46th street and Ellis avenue, plans an elaborate program of commencement week events, under the direction of Bethuel Gross. Musical and dramatic programs will be given each evening from tonight thru Friday, with a vocal recital this afternoon as the opening event. Next Sunday morning, at the baccalaureate service, all the religious music will be drawn from works composed by members of the school's theory and harmony class, and members of the organ and conducting classes will be in charge of the music of the service.

Florence Kirsch, well known Chicago pianist, will be soloist with the Illinois Symphonic ensemble, Leo Kopp, conductor, in Kimball hall tomorrow evening. Miss Kirsch will play the solo part in Bach's first concerto in D minor. John Ireland's Concertino Pastorale for string orchestra is the first of four contemporary novelties in Mr. Kopp's unusual program. A second novelty, Sir Ernest Macmillan's "Two Sketches on French Canadian Airs," was heard at Ravinia under the direction of the Toronto composer-conductor, but has not been played downtown. Peter Warlock's Serenade for Strings, also new to Chicago, is by the composer of the better known Capriol Suite. The program also includes the Chicago première of the Divertimento No. 2, in A minor, based upon Hungarian folk melodies, by Leo Weiner. The detailed program follows:

The six winners of the Society of American Musicians student contest for pianists will appear in recital in Kimball hall on Friday evening. The following winners have been named: Senior section, Patricia King and Blanche Goldstein; junior section, Joan Alizier and Ruth Moss; primary section, Richard Sternasty and Irene Eckert.

Stavro Chiapi, Greek-American tenor, will give a song recital in Fullerton hall, the Art Institute of Chicago, tonight.

The Christiansen Choral School will hold two sessions this summer—from June 29 to July 11 at Ferry Hall, Lake Forest, Ill.; and from Aug. 3 to 15 at Penn hall, Chambersburg, Pa. The instructors will be Dr. F. Melius Christiansen, retiring director of the St. Olaf College choir; his son, Olaf Christiansen, who succeeds him as director next fall, and Peter Tkach of the Minneapolis public schools.

New Music Compositions.

Two compositions are printed in the April, 1941, issue of New Music; Richard Donovan's Serenade for oboe, violin, viola, and cello, and Harrison Kerr's Study for unaccompanied cello. Mr. Donovan teaches in the Yale university school of music and is associate conductor of the New Haven Symphony orchestra. Mr. Kerr, a native of Cleveland, is now living in New York where he is active as secretary of the American Composers Alliance and as executive secretary of the American Music Center.

Critic Urges a Revision in Music Teaching

By Cecil Smith.

Each year at the beginning of June this column strives to attain a high moral and intellectual plane by addressing a baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of Chicago's music schools, conservatories and music departments. Within a fortnight or so some hundreds, or perhaps thousands, of freshly trained musicians of all kinds will depart from school, sheepskins in hand, in the hope and expectation of making places for themselves in the professional world of music.

In a time of unlimited national emergency and unprecedented international calamity it is hard to narrow one's thoughts down to a specifically vocational theme. But if our immediate task is the physical defense of democracy, then our ultimate goal—which is all that will be significant in the long future—is the preservation and enhancement of the values we believe to be worth retaining.

• • •

In the world of music, as in every important realm of human enlightenment, this country is suddenly and permanently faced with a challenging new responsibility. The almost wholesale evacuation of Europe by the best creative artists—with startlingly few exceptions—has made the western hemisphere, and principally the United States of America, the center of musical endeavor and accomplishment. We are the new repository of past musical treasures—the music of Mendelssohn and Ravel and Mahler and all the other composers, living or dead, who either have been disfranchised and discredited or probably soon will be. This is the one strip of land in the world where the music of all composers, regardless of race or politics, may be heard without fear or prejudice. And this is the place in which the music of the future will come to full flower, if music is not to perish from the earth.

The future of music in this democracy of ours will be charted principally by teachers and schools. To those readers who expect to devote their lives to teaching, therefore, and to those who already are teaching, these remarks are especially addressed. I am calling this morning for a high vision of musical education in days to come, a revision of educational aims so far-reaching and so drastic that music teaching may truly justify itself thru difficult days ahead, and on into a happier period of fruition and realization.

We have been having too much machine age education. Future historians may with justice look back upon the last 25 years of American musical education as a technological era—an era in which crafts and skills have been glorified, and in which intellectual substance and emotional meaning have often been largely overlooked.

Too many people can play the piano well nowadays. Too many people are skilful violinists and cellists and orchestral arrangers and choral conductors. There seem to be almost as many musical craftsmen as garage mechanics, and too much music is performed with all the precision of a good mechanic working upon a recalcitrant camshaft.

Only one thing is seriously neglected in contemporary musical education, and that is music itself. By attending almost any high school any one who is not tone deaf—and some who are—can learn to sing in a chorus or play in an orchestra or band. Any one, whether tone deaf or not, can usually "take music appreciation," listening to phonograph records, discovering that folk songs are often written in three part form, and risking acquaintance with a few superficial but persistent critical untruths, such as that Mozart's music is greater than Haydn's and that Cesar Franck's music is very, very spiritual.

Up to now scarcely any wholehearted attempt has been made, even in most of our colleges and universities, to understand the physical, psychological and expressive nature of music; the dynamic facts of the history and growth of musical technique, as these may be discovered in critical analytic study of musical scores of all periods and places; or the deep cultural significance of music as a representation of man's whole social outlook in different times. Nor is any satisfactory attempt made to alter the museumlike nature of musical study, and to discover that the music of the present is quite as real and true as the music of the 19th, or the 18th, or the 16th century.

Naturally, in an ideal future democracy the musical crafts and the tools of professional musical competence will be taught to all with special aptitude for them. But music itself—the sense and meaning and value of music as significant human expression—must take a dominant place in every educational curriculum. In this ideal time pianists will wait until they have something to say musically before they depress a single key in public. Composers will learn humility and work patiently to come into command of the necessary tools of expression, instead of scrabbling madly for premature performances of half finished works. Colleges will stop being little conservatories for dilettantes, and will discover their legitimate task of interpreting the art of music as an important branch of humanistic study. Conservatories will teach more musical substance along with crafts and teaching methods. Universities will abandon both meaningless archeology and inadequate composition curricula, and will devote their energies to an attempt to find out what music means and how it got that way.

Need I say that there is nothing personal nor specific in any of this, and that nobody need object to this rosy educational dream unless it evokes some present twinge of conscience? Basically, all of this amounts to a simple generalization: In 1941 we are musically active, but not sufficiently musical. Let us who are or aspire to be educators coöperate in bringing forward a future generation of musicians with the light of knowledge in their eyes and the warmth of understanding in their hearts.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Leopold Stokowski brings his All-American Youth orchestra of 100 players to the Civic Opera house tomorrow evening. The concert, which will be Chicago's last major musical event before the opening of the Ravinia season, June 28, is a benefit for the Chicago Lighthouse for the Blind.

Leopold Stokowski.

Mr. Stokowski describes his 1941 youth orchestra as "better in every way than the 1940 group." The present tour began in Atlantic City on May 11 and finishes in Hollywood on July 5. From July 7 to 10 the orchestra will make phonograph records.

The program for tomorrow night's concert is as follows:

Fugue in G minor....Bach
[Orchestrated by Leopold Stokowski.]
Symphony No. 1, C minor....Brahms
"Decision," from the ballet "City Portrait"....Henry Brant
Prelude and Love Death, from "Tristan and Isolde"....Wagner

Two music schools have chosen Sunday afternoon, June 15, as the time for their annual commencement exercises. At the Studebaker theater the Chicago Conservatory Symphony orchestra, directed by Ludwig Becker, will accompany soloists in piano, voice, and violin, and play music by students of composition. Honorary degrees will be conferred upon Gladys Swarthout, noted American mezzo-soprano, and Richard W. Grant. At the same time in Thorne hall the annual commencement exercises of the Boguslawski College of Music will be held, with appearances by artist students in piano, voice, violin, and dramatics.

Piano pupils of Chicago and vicinity will compete in the eight annual national piano playing auditions, to be held at the Stevens hotel on Wednesday, under the supervision of Franklin Stead, general chairman. Dr. Carl Beutel of Detroit will serve as judge. More than 15,000 piano pupils thruout the country are taking part in these national piano auditions.

The Columbia Broadcasting system has ordered a 30 minute chamber opera from Randall Thompson, former director of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. The commission is made possible thru the coöperation of the League of Composers, who are undertaking to stimulate the composition of small, practical American chamber operas. It is hoped that Mr. Thompson's opera will be adaptable to the needs of college and university performances.

Verdi's "A Masked Ball" will be presented by the American Opera company tonight in the Fine Arts building. The cast includes Lillian Bensen, Clara Confare, Frederick Rudin, Martin Boughan, Lillas Raymacker, Stanley Klosowiez, Herbert Mork, and Al Lewis. John Alten will conduct.

The American guild of organists will hold its second biennial convention [its 19th general convention] in Washington, D. C., from June 23 to 27. Among the concert organists to be heard in recital will be Joseph Bonnet, noted French virtuoso; Walter Blodgett of Cleveland, and Catharine Crozier of Rochester, N. Y. Visitors to the convention will see rare Elizabethan musical manuscripts in the Folger Shakespeare library and will examine the huge resources of the Library of Congress. The membership of the guild exceeds 5,000.

Summer courses in conducting and opera, to be known as the "Malko Workshop," will be instituted on June 23 at the Central Y. M. C. A. college school of music. In addition to Nicolai Malko, who will conduct the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Ravinia the week of July 14, the staff will include Max Rudolf, European conductor and opera coach, and John Daggett Howell, baritone of the Chicago Opera company.

Another novel summer course will be given at the Chicago Musical college, when Leyah Lucatsky, Chicago dancer, offers five weeks of intensive training in the modern dance. Miss Lucatsky has studied with Martha Graham, Hanya Holm, Doris Humphrey, and Charles Weidman.

"Quartetto Vagabondo," an opera by G. Pietri, will be presented next Sunday evening in Holy Trinity auditorium, 1443 West Division street. Santa Grande and Josette [formerly Josephine] La Placa, sopranos, will be in the cast, and Felice Moniaci will conduct.

Popular Recordings

If you've never heard Matty Malneck and his superb little band play Matty's gorgeous arrangement of "The Anvil Chorus" you have missed a treat. But you need miss it no longer, as Columbia has it on record No. 36140. Matty really mixes this one—beautifull authentic interludes, capricious moments of swing, and then that entrancing diversion into "Ya, Ya, Said the Little Fox." The other side is a more serious version of "An American in Paris."

Columbia also has what should be a popular new album—"Show Boat" with Helen Morgan, Paul Robeson, James Melton, and Victor Young's orchestra giving us the old favorites. Jive fans will like Okeh's pressing of Cab Calloway doing "Hep Cat's Love Song" and "Ebony Silhouette."

A currently booming novelty, "The Hut-Sut Song," featuring the King Sisters, is Bluebird's top offering. It's a wacky bit of Swedish double-talk. Freddy Martin also has a Bluebird version of it. You can be pretty sure of liking the New Friends of Rhythm's arrangement or "Coo, Dimny, Coo," with Buster Bailey assisting, on Victor; Shep Fields' "I Found a Million Dollar Baby,; on Bluebird; and Sonny Dunham's lazy day "Throwin' Pebbles in the Millstream," also Bluebird.

Study Made of Federal Grants to Michigan

By the Rev. John Evans.

For perhaps the first time, a study has been made of federal expenditures in administering various functions of a state. The study was made by Claude R. Tharp of the University of Michigan bureau of government, and has been published in booklet form under the title, "Federal Expenditures in Michigan."

"In 1913," Mr. Tharp points out, "total expenditures in Michigan for state and local government from federal, state and local sources amounted to nearly $51,000,000. Of this total the local government furnished 74.5 per cent; the state 25 per cent, and the federal government 0.5 per cent. By 1939, total expenditures reached $541,000,000 with the local government paying 31 per cent, the state 34 per cent and the federal government 35 per cent."

There also has been a shift in the use of federal funds since 1913, Mr. Tharp points out, when more than one-half the federal allotments were spent for public welfare, with education ranking second, and conservation third. No aid was received for highways in that year. By 1939, statistics show that, of these four functions, highways ranked first, public welfare second, conservation third, and education fourth.

The Detroit, Mich., board of education recently approved a move to establish a Wayne University Press similar to the presses of Yale university, Harvard university, and the University of Michigan.

The Press, which will edit, publish, and distribute scholarly works and similar materials, will be supervised by an editorial board of seven members of the faculty appointed for five-year terms by Dr. David D. Henry, executive vice president. Two functions were listed in the proposed outline of the organization. First, the Press may coördinate under responsible direction, numerous scattered publishing activities now existing within the university, and second, it may provide an agency for the publication of text books, class aids and other materials which appropriately bear the university's imprint.

The trustees of Hope college, Holland, Mich., recently announced the college has been granted a building permit for the construction of a new science hall. It will replace the old Van Raalte hall. Ground will be broken for the $100,000 building during the meeting of the general synod of the Reformed Church in America, which will hold its meeting at Hope college from June 5 to 10. Dr. Edgar F. Roming of New York City is president of the synod this year and will be in charge of the annual meeting.

"Higher Education, a Guide to Students in the Selection of a College or University," by Dr. John Evans, is now available. The booklet may be purchased from the Chicago Tribune's Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street at the cost of 25 cents direct, or 28 cents by mail. Dr. Evans, education editor of the Chicago Tribune, will answer inquiries concerning educational problems.

Eight Pictures Are Chosen as April's 'Best'

APRIL'S BEST PHOTOPLAYS.
THAT HAMILTON WOMAN
DAYBREAK FLIGHT FROM DESTINY
CITIZEN KANE PENNY SERENADE
THE GREAT LIE WOMAN'S FACE
THE GREAT COMMANDMENT
Honorable Mention: You're the One, Invisible Ghost, Sarajevo, The Flame of New Orleans.

By May Tinee.

Good Morning!
We have, this morning, quite an array
Of "bests" to offer in resumé.

• • •

"That Hamilton Woman" has Vivien Leigh, with Laurence Olivier to with her play. Lady Hamilton she, Lord Nelson he—and their tragic romance unreels for thee. The film's well directed, staged and played. An attempt to see it should be made.

"Citizen Kane"—with Orson Welles the tale of a newspaper tycoon tells. "Interesting," "different,"—"bizarre," too—were adjectives used in the film's review. . . . As a "museum piece" I thought it scored. But at times, I'm afraid I was rather bored.

"The Great Lie"—WAS great. Bette Davis is in it. And Miss Mary Astor plays ball every minute. George Brent is the man whom the ladies both wanted, whose debonair image their memories haunted. Both gals in "The Great Lie" do par-ticipate. For more information you'll have to just wait—till you see this fine movie—it's really a honey! And worth every cent of your admittance money.

• • •

"Flight From Destiny" — Thomas Mitchell is featured in this photoplay that is different and splendid in many a way. It's gruesome but good —and go see it you should. There's one ir-ref-u-table fact. That Mr. Mitchell can surely ACT!

"Daybreak"—This French production with Jean Gabin possesses the satisfying sheen lent a film by brains behind it—tisn't always that we find it. Tragical the piece, but clever. Lets loose of your interest never. Gabin's now o'er here to act. Got a brand new Fox contract.

"Penny Serenade"—I thought, one of the best pictures wrought in the forge of Hollywood. It is really AWFULLY good. Irene Dunne and Cary Grant with their acting just ENCHANT. Other players fill the bill. Like 'em one and all you will. As to story and direction—well, they may not be perfection—BUT when other films have faded—you'll be "Penny Serenade"-ed. [This does get worse and worse, doesn't it?]

• • •

"A Woman's Face"—Presents Joan Crawford in the best thing she has done, and I come to advise that each and every one, hie you to see this gripping photoplay—it's craftsmanlike, engrossing—the tops in every way.

"The Great Commandment"—was worth your attention in myriads of ways—but flopped because "folks don't like religious plays."

I have finished, by heck,
With this pitiful wreck
Of verse that's no doubt giv'n you a pain in the neck.
See you tomorrow.

Buffet Luncheon Service Is Boon to Wilting Shoppers

Children Are Self-Reliant, Courageous

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

(Copyright: 1941: By News Syndicate Co. Inc.)

How some people have met and handled what seemed, at the moment, almost insurmountable difficulties in the bringing up of children, often helps others to overcome similar problems. With this idea in mind let me tell you about a family which lived near us some years ago.

Jack was 8, Ronnie 7, and Billy 5 years old when their father died in the spring. His malady was a lingering one and virtually all savings had had to be used for doctors, medicine, and the hundred other items that go with such an illness. Their young mother was faced with the serious problem of bringing up these three youngsters and of earning a living for herself and them.

• • •

She was naturally independent and was determined to keep the family group intact. She obtained a position in a nearby city and then talked with the two older boys, telling them just what she had to do in order for them all to remain together, and what she would have to expect from them. It would be up to Jack and Ronnie, not only to look after the house and do the marketing, but to take care of themselves and be responsible for Billy, and to always be at home when she arrived at night. If anything really serious came up they were to go to a kindly neighbor who had offered to assist whenever needed.

Nothing catastrophic happened. By the fall the children had become used to being on their own, and accustomed to the routine of looking after the house and themselves. When school opened they were there, clean, well fed, happy youngsters.

Naturally, things didn't always run smoothly. The boys didn't always agree among themselves or with the neighboring children, but on the whole they managed well.

• • •

I talked with this mother some months ago about those years and she told me:

"When I look back I wonder how I ever dared to try such an experiment, but I guess sheer necessity forced the issue. Fortunately, Jack was a quiet, level-headed boy for his age and seemed to sense my predicament. He certainly shouldered responsibility, helped at every turn, and watched over his brothers.

"They were difficult years and often it took all my strength and courage to keep going. When the children were ill, I had to have some one with them, but the occasions were rare and never lasted long. Housework, washing, ironing, mending, baking, and arranging meals, especially lunches for the boys, kept me busy until long past midnight every night. Since I could not allow the children to have other boys in the house during my absence, I managed to keep Saturday afternoon and Sundays free for them and their friends. That, I think, was one of the important things that kept our family life intact and helped us all over the hurdles."

Hazel Weaver, John Fobes to Be Married Saturday

Miss Hazel Weaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bernard Weaver of Fork Union, Va., and John E. Miss Weaver attended Westhampton college in Virginia. Mr. Fobes is a student at the Fletcher school of law and diplomacy, in Medford, Mass., where he and his bride will be at home after Sept. 15, while he continues his studies for another year.

FASHIONS AS I SEE THEM

By Judith Cass.

A more original piece of costume jewelry than one which Mrs. Harold F. McCormick wears would be hard to find. It consists of two little golden "scuffles" with diamond trimming. She often places the pin in a little navy blue "beanie" she wears, because "my husband does not like such plain hats," she explained. Mrs. McCormick prefers tiny hats in Chicago, especially since the wind took a favorite of hers and whisked it down the boulevard so far that she did not even try to run after it. Mrs. McCormick looks especially well in tailored suits, and almost always in the daytime she wears one of them. . . . Miss Pauline Palmer is wearing an entrancing little hat this season. It is a white pancake with a big bunch of soft purple, yellow, and white pansies almost covering the front of it. Her brother's wife, Mrs. Potter Palmer III., has one that, from a distance, looks much like Miss Palmer's, but up close it may be seen that the trimming consists of a bunch of pussy willows. Both young women have black street dresses with peplums which they sometimes enliven with these white hats. . . . Pussy willows must be popular with the Palmer family, for Mrs. Palmer senior has a large, brimmed, navy blue straw hat which has a bunch of the soft, furry little flowers at the front. Mrs. James Ward Thorne has a new hat that is most becoming. It consists of two huge roses, one of palest pink and the other of a soft blue. They are held to her head by a band of the pink. Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed arrived at the Arts club the other day wearing a nose veil over her beautifully arranged hair, and carrying what appeared to be a bunch of bright red geraniums. A second glance revealed that it was a hat in her hand, the most delectable hat we've seen in days. It had a tiny white base almost entirely covered with the flowers, the same sort of gorgeous geraniums that were blooming in the greenhouse at Mill Road Gardens when we visited that wonderful estate recently.

Mrs. Harold F. McCormick. [Hurrell of Hollywood Photo.]

Mrs. Wallace E. Conkling, wife of the Episcopal bishop of Chicago, presented a striking appearance at a luncheon meeting of the English-Speaking union, at which her husband was the guest speaker. She is a handsome woman with raven black hair which she wears pulled smoothly down from a center part. Her complexion is tanned, and she has naturally pink cheeks, for she wears no makeup at all, nor does she smoke, apparently. Her dress and matching silk coat at the luncheon were of pale beige, ornamented by a luscious rose at the neckline. Her hat was of beige straw, trimmed with beige grosgrain ribbon around the crown and around the brim edge. Any one with less vivid coloring would find it difficult to wear such a monotone costume, but on Mrs. Conkling it was stunning. . . . Mrs. Byron S. Harvey cut a dashing figure at the same luncheon party. Swinging from her shoulders, over a tailored suit of brownish gray, was a black cape. Her hat was of dark brown, trimmed in gray. Its brim curved down in front to such an extent that it was difficult to see her face. Mrs. Frank A. Hecht Sr., mother of the union's new president, wore a black and white print silk ensemble and a brimmed hat of fine black straw, trimmed with black silk flowers. Her daughter-in-law wore a print of strawberries on black. . . . Mrs. Alfred P. Shaw carries a big paper bag, neatly folded, in her handbag on rainy days, for she finds it much easier to remove her large, natural straw hat, trimmed with a navy and white polka-dotted scarf, and put it in the bag, than to carry an umbrella. Rain doesn't spoil her coiffure, for her hair is short.

Mrs. Byron S. Harvey.

"Fashions as I Used to See Them" put the Key club into an uproar last Sunday night when a quintet of women presented prize gowns of 15 to 30 years ago. It was interesting to notice that those which were smart 15 years ago were the strangest looking today; those of 25 years ago weren't so bad. Mrs. Nathaniel Lane started the hilarious parade in a beige satin afternoon gown, "a bag," some one called it, with an extremely low waistline. Really a sort of kneeline it was! Ladies in those days had no waistlines and they covered their entire heads with their Paris hats. Mrs. Lane's was a wide brimmed, deep crowned affair that almost hid her pretty face. . . . Mrs. Paget Cady who, as Emily Bissell, was a belle before she was married in 1926, pulled her usual chic upcurled hair into a frizzy bob of days gone by, and modeled some of her trousseau gowns. They were greeted with roars and cheers, for they also are of the vintage of long, shapeless bodices and extremely short skirts. Mrs. Cady also wore a Theda Bara evening gown, loaned by Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, whose daughter, Mrs. Watson McLallen, was one of the mannequins, but who is too slight to wear her mother's sophisticated black silk and lace gown. Mrs. Cady dramatized it to the Nth degree, posing with a cigaret in a long holder in one hand, and a highball in the other. . . . Mrs. James Waller Rogers, the former Jane Linn, wore a Paris creation of steel gray and dark gray chiffon, heavily beaded, that she had had during her debut year and that her husband confided "was the most expensive dress she ever owned." The audience Sunday night shrieked with amusement at it, and at the long feather boa she had entwined about her shoulders and arms.

Mrs. Paget Cady.

Mrs. Lane recalled the days of our girlhood when she appeared in a bathing suit. A large beret, which covered her hair but wouldn't protect it from getting wet, a long navy blue tunic, bloomers that showed below the tunic, and long black cotton stockings made up this ridiculous bathing outfit. Ridiculous today, but right in style in those long ago days before the war, when women displayed no bare skin except lower arms and hands, face, and a bit of neck. . . . Mrs. Ballard Moore, a belle of Washington as Olyve Graef, was perhaps the funniest of all, in an extremely short dress of wheat colored chiffon and a jacket of scarlet, elaborately beaded. The skirt was made of many wisps of chiffon that gave it a gypsylike appearance, but there was nothing gypsyish about the wide silver cloth band that encircled her forehead, or the enormous red feather fan that she carried. "That's the way she looked when I married her," exclaimed Noel Flint when attractive Mrs. Flint appeared in a pale beige dress and coat with a stole of martens around her neck and a huge black hat pulled down over her hair. "I like that hat better than the ones they wear today," volunteered a masculine neighbor, but we hastened to disagree with him. . . . Mrs. Flint, Mrs. Moore, and Mrs. Rogers closed the show by appearing in three old-fashioned white cotton nightgowns that belonged to Mrs. Cady's mother, Mrs. Arthur Bissell. They were high necked, long sleeved, and definitly opaque, very different from the scanty, transparent bits of lingerie that are called nightgowns today. The three mannequins had their hair done up in paper curlers and carried lighted candles, but they had no cold cream on their faces, for women did not go to bed glistening with cream the way they do nowadays. . . . "Let's persuade St. Luke's to have this show as a feature next fall," collaborated Mrs. McLallen, a member of the St. Luke's fashion show committee, and Walter Frazier, who is to design the stage setting for the show to be given on Oct. 21 in the ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

The Appetizing Fare Revamps Weary Spirit

By Rea Seeger.

Shoppers are eaters, too. While a lot of them can wrap themselves around anything, there are plenty who are fussy about comestibles. After a shopping binge you can either recuperate with a dinner of gargantuan proportions, or you can pick daintily at a sandwich and sip a cup of tea to revamp yourself. One Chicago spot we found promises much for the mind, soul, and strength of a wilting shopper. It's a buffet luncheon idea replete with lots of salad bowls, deviled eggs, crisp crackers, small but appetizing sandwiches, and everything you could dream about for desserts, from cooling ices to cake and the whipped cream glories for those who do not watch the waistline.

• • •

You arm yourself with plate and walk around the bountifully covered table and take what you crave. There are color and color combines temptingly arrayed to tickle your eye and palate. You are urged to take second helpings, and if that isn't hospitality for a very modest sum, what else do you want? On chilly days there are huge pots of rich soups; on hot days there are mounds of cooling fruits, quantities of succulent salads with all kinds of dressing. There are long plates of cheeses, round platters with sliced cold meats, equally large circles full of all sorts of pickles, olives, cottage cheese, and slivered vegetables. Here is a picnic array while you shop. It's also a grand find for the busy career girls, for they can dash in, serve themselves, and be out in record time.

• • •

Any distinctive ensemble invariably owes its individuality to unusual costume accessories, bags and gloves, a belt, or a matched set of either gloves and belt, or gloves and bag. Color, too, is tremendously important. There is a clever shop in Chicago where you can even have straw dyed to match some particular shade of dress, also fabric gloves and belt. It's a helpful shop, where bags may be made to order, bags relined, zippers repaired, and virtually anything in a bag made to suit your demands. They'll make straw bags, fabric bags, bags of wool, silk print, or linen and cotton. Any size is obtainable, and any shape. The finished results are outstanding, nothing amateurish.

Belts and gloves are other possibilities. You bring in the size and length, material [if you wish], or they will advise or even furnish materials to go with your costume and, in a short time, you will have the finished articles ready subtly to accent a dress, suit, or ensemble.

• • •

Fabric gloves may be ordered in any color, for the staff of the shop will dye them to match anything. It's one of those heaven-sent aids to exacting shoppers. The fees are according to the workmanship required, and the size and the materials used, or not used. The zipper repair service alone will make this shop famous. "Stalled" zippers, zippers off the track, and zippers that have zipped themselves out of life or energy are replaced and guaranteed to give smooth service. If you have a pet bag that needs a new lining, this is the place to send it for new interior decorating. All this at very reasonable fees, too.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Now you can buy your after-bath dusting powder by the mitten instead of the box! The mitten, of downy pink fabric, sifts out the powder at the merest pat against the skin. The powder itself is feather-light, and scented with wild rose.

Some one made a survey last year, asking women of all ages, all incomes, and all tastes what beauty aid they'd best like as a gift. Guess what the answer was! Dusting powder! You could have knocked us over with a swansdown puff when we heard that one. Somehow we'd never thought of dusting powder as something women actually yearned for. We knew they liked it, but we never dreamed their little hearts ached for it!

They like it, we discovered, for two reasons. The first is that the possession and use of it helps them feel luxurious. The second is that it aids and abets daintiness. So we really shouldn't have been surprised that it ranked high among their beauty preferences.

• • •

We know of one dusting powder, in a new and different kind of package dress, that they'll go a little mad about. It's in the scent of wild rose, than which nothing is more romantic, and you don't buy it by the box. You buy it by the mitten!

The mitten is of a velvety fabric, in a delectable shade of pink, interlined with a water resistant stuff so that you can plunge damp fingers into it. The powder sifts out at the merest pat, and the advantages of patting powder on instead of fluffing it on with a big puff should be pretty obvious. You don't scatter it all over the room.

• • •

The mitten has a tab near the wrist so that you can hang it decoratively and usefully in boudoir or bath. But if you're a traveler and find those big boxes of powder too much to cope with, you'll love this because it tucks so easily into an overnight case.

This is a perfect gift, but an even more perfect possession. It's appealing to the eye and a delightful little thing to use. The fragrance is the kind that sends you into raptures, very sweet and ultrafeminine.

For information, telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0200, or write her care of the Chicago Sunday Tribune, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

New Window Treatment for Summer Days

By Claire Winslow.

There are numbers of ways of making your house look cool inside, even during the hottest summer weather. There's the matter of rolling up heavy rugs, for instance, and having them cleaned and stored till next fall, putting down in their place fibre floor coverings or those good looking rugs made of Chinese rush squares. Then, of course, there are the small miracles worked by slip covers of gayly flowered or striped wash fabrics.

But among the cleverest tricks to make a room seem cool and airy on a hot day is the one that concerns itself with the windows. Heavy dark red draperies are enough to raise one's mental temperature any day. So are many other lined and deep toned draperies that are suitable for winter but hot and stuffy in summer. So, why not take them down and put them away?

• • •

In their place hang thin, diaphanous curtains. If the woodwork in the room is white these curtains can come right down to the floor, but if it is dark the effect is not so pretty, as the woodwork will show thru. Therefore, it's best to have the curtains end at the window sill or at the lower edge of the window frame in such a case.

Materials for these summer curtains are numerous. There's celanese voile, always delightfully cool looking and available in white or pale colors. There is a material that looks like chiffon but that is woven with a rayon thread and wears very well. This is charming in summer bedrooms and in dining rooms. And there is a rayon organdy that is new and very lovely.

• • •

Then there are the old stand-bys, the lace nets. These curtains can be bought ready made and are easy to keep looking crisp and fresh. A swish in lukewarm suds, a thoro rinsing with a light starch in the last water, and the job is done. They'll dry quickly on a curtain stretcher and can be hung at the windows the same day, looking just as when they were purchased.

Of course they can be ironed instead of stretched, but the saving in time and energy when summer heat makes hours over a steaming ironing board unbearable is reason enough for using a stretcher. Also it does a perfect job of keeping corners square and hems straight and unrippled.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

By the time June arrives there is much to be done in the way of painting and brightening up spots around a house or apartment. Did you know that there is an enamel on the market which is so sturdy as to resist steam, grease, fruit juices, hot water, and even alcohol?

* *

Also there is a liquid compound available which can be applied to a window pane and give it a "frosted" look. This liquid is brushed on and a frosted window pane contributes a bit more privacy to a room, if privacy is desired.

* *

There will be many rooms treated with pine paneling the next few months and if you wish a light, gay finish for the wood, you can give it a Colonial-maple shade and sheen. This finish is not hard to achieve and at the end can be rubbed to a dull, soft finish and then waxed.

And if you have an ailing concrete floor that is in need of attention, there is a floor patching compound especially suited for such work. A quick working compound, too, since the floor can be patched one day and used the next.

Lingerie Confections for Summer, 1941, Are Romantic

Adviser Calls a Forum About OfficeRomance

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1941: By News Syndicate Co. Inc.]

We are going to ask for an open discussion on this ever-present problem of the young girl and the married man.

We can't tell you how often there comes a letter similar in tone to the one we present herewith, which embraces the problem fully:

"I work in an office for a man who is married to a woman he does not love. When he married her, he tells me, he was not in love with her.

"I started to work for him about seven months ago, when I was 21 years old. And since I started to work for him he has been watching my every move. He tells me that he has liked me from the first moment I stepped into his office.

• • •

"One evening he asked me to work late, and around seven he asked me to take dinner with him. I didn't want to accept, but he persuaded me into it and I went. I had a lovely time that evening, just listening to his domestic problems. And that was when he first told me how much I meant to him. He also told me about his wife and how wrong he was in marrying her when he did [at an early age].

"Suddenly he broke down and told me he cared for me. In fact, he said that he loved me. He asked if I felt that way about him. I was stunned, of course. I liked him as a boss only. I told him. I never gave him a thought outside of that. I have been going around with a boy my own age for quite a while, you see.

• • •

"Well, when my boss took me home that night, he asked if he could kiss me. I said it was wrong. But he kissed me just the same, and that changed my whole feeling for him. I am afraid now I AM in love with him.

"He's been away for a month now and calls me up on business and I find myself waiting for that daily call at the office. I think I am in love with him. How can I be sure? I never met his wife, but from what I hear from others she must be nice. I wouldn't say she's nice to him, but she is nice on the whole.

"What would you do if you were in my place?—Worried."

• • •

Answering the young woman first, we would say there's only one decent thing to do and that is to leave her present place of employment. Get a new employer! One who isn't cad enough to take out a young girl and weigh her down with tales about his misunderstood position at home. There is no other decent course open to the girl.

Of course, we wonder why any young woman has to be told that this is the one course open to her if she wants happiness out of life. If she is old enough to support herself, she is old enough to know where those stupid office affairs end. She'll sacrifice that young man who, being more nearly her own age, has real happiness to offer.

• • •

Too, we would suggest that our young woman get acquainted with her boss' wife and see for herself what sort of woman she is. That often reveals the man in a true light.

However, our query to you, reader, is why are girls allowed to grow up without a better moral code to protect them against illicit friendships of the sort?

A less reasonable question we put to you for consideration is, why do men keep on pouring their troubles, phony or real, into receptive ears?

We welcome discussion of the theme.

Your Stars ★ Today ★

By WYNN

Sunday, June 1.

Today's reactions, mentally and physically, tend to be rather shaky; if you feel disturbed, relax and wait; no time to sound off or take chances. Week ahead offers numerous improvements in large ways, but with minor irritations.

Inevitables.

When mankind has been ignorant, selfish, and willful to a certain extent, he has pushed back the tide of progress to a point where it is stronger, heavier than his power to keep it there. The tide of progress then pushes back upon him. This may be an orderly acceptance of inevitables, or it may be a war. It is whatever mankind chooses it to be—usually a war—but the lesson is always learned.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead, from today, your birthday, brings gains thru relations with other folk—merit and receive. Back yourself now, push forward. Do everything personally. Danger: March 10-25.

Tomorrow.

Avoid quarrels and sense of injustice, at least postpone rash action.

Designed to Fill Trousseau Chest

A—Trousseau gown made of crinkled chiffon in Grecian manner. Over bodice and around midriff is inset band of soft satin. • B—Ensemble of satin combined with shirred chiffon. Bodice of gown is shirred chiffon embroidered in appenzell design and color. • C—Handkerchief trim is cleverly worked on this gown and negligee. Circular insets of lace dyed to match gown. • D—Summer negligee which may double as dramatic dinner dress. Of snowy white clinging jersey, it has color contrast in long fringe trim. • E—Thin, coarse patterned lace makes airiest of house coats. The lining is blending chiffon to match lace. • F—Beautiful companion set expressly made for the bride, a bias-cut nightgown of satin with yoke of Alencon lace, and house gown made like a wedding gown. • G—Another bridal nightgown of shining satin with curved yoke made of bands of point d'esprit lace and satin. • H—Matched trio of nightgown, slip and panties of satin trimmed with fine lace.

Brides-to-Be Will Welcome Sheer Beauties

By Rea Seeger.

All they need around the romantic summer collections of filmy lingerie, dramatic house coats and negligees are cooing turtle doves and festoons of lovers' knots to complete the atmosphere. Brides-to-be, especially, will be tempted beyond reason, by the 1941 confections in shimmering satin, crêpe, floating yards of chiffon lace, clinging silks and jerseys, all the fine handwork, and inspired design featured in each luscious creation destined to fill trousseau chests.

• • •

White is most important among the collections, white whether you are a prospective bride or a summer shophound sleuthing about for lovely, thin, new loot to see you decoratively thru a summer at home or on vacation. Next is delicate shell pink; after that, a heavenly shade of blue; and then yellow. Nightgowns are exquisitely flattering, with the loveliest of lace trim. Matched sets of robe and nightgown feature the same fine, shadow-thin lace and the same gleaming, white bridal satin. Or you can find the same duet idea worked in shell pink, the benevolent shade of blue, or yellow. Lace is particularly popular this summer. Sometimes it is of cool white, at others dyed a delicate pastel to match the material, and again a natural or bistre tint against white in the almost forgotten French style of accenting white.

Chiffon stages one of the greatest fashion revivals in the last few years. Yards of off-white, or chalk white, or white with a pale pearl tint make breath-takingly beautiful gowns and negligees. Slinky, sugar white jersey makes the most stunning of house gowns, the kind that are eagerly sought as double duty affairs for either house lounging or informal dinner dresses. Comparatively coarse patterned lace is used for tailored house coats in aquamarine, in shell pink, and in off-white. Most of them are lined with chiffon.

• • •

One of the most exciting collections of beautiful nightgowns ever unpacked is ready for the rush of shoppers. Fine lace makes entire bodice tops, or dainty point d'esprit lace is used in bands to make flattering tops. Shoestring shoulder straps, in clusters of two or three, make others resemble the finest and most alluring of French lingerie. Bridal sets of French panties, costume slip and nightgown make flawless gifts from all the indulgent relatives. The lace and the satin are the same in all three pieces.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps but not value. The Stamps and Coins advertising column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

This cover from Charles Broad of Chicago shows one of the new National Parks issues of Japan. This issue, the sixth of the parks sets, shows views on the island of Formosa.

Altho 47 foreign countries and colonies had participated in the New York World's Fair by issuing stamps, only four countries assisted San Francisco in this manner in the celebration of the Golden Gate International exposition. In the case of Nicaragua, which has been mentioned in a previous article, the two sets of stamps which were issued for domestic and international air mail use served a triple commemorative purpose, for they recalled the visit of President Somoza to Washington in addition to mentioning the two world's fairs.

Three designs were used for the Nicaraguan stamps. That used for the 8c, interior, and for the 50c, international, shows President Somoza addressing the house of representatives in Washington. This design is inscribed in error, "El Presidente A. Somoza ante el Senado Americano, Mayo, 1939. Buenos Vecinos." The second design shows the United States capitol and was used for the 32c, interior, and for the 25c and 65c of the international set. The third design shows the tower of the Golden Gate exposition and the trylon and perisphere of the New York Fair in panels at either side of a portrait of President Somoza. This was used for the 4c, 16c, and 80c of the interior set and for the 30c, 90c, and 1 cordoba values of the international set. The exact date of issue is not available, but it is believed the stamps were placed on sale during the first half of December, 1939.

Salvador on April 14, 1939, was the first country to release stamps for the Golden Gate exposition. These were for air mail use and show a view of the Golden Gate bridge with an airplane above the left tower. In the upper corners are the arms of Salvador and of California. Three values, 15, 30, and 40 centavos, are included in the set.

On June 12, 1939, Indo-China released a set of four postage stamps in connection with this exposition. The single design shows a view of the Mot Cot pagoda at Hanoi, and bears an inscription relating to the exposition. The denominations were 6c, 9c, 23c, and 39c.

Two sets of stamps, one for ordinary postage and the other for air mail, were placed on sale on June 16, 1939, by Ecuador. The set for ordinary use shows a view of Mission Dolores in San Francisco, and consisted of six values, 2, 5, 10, and 50 centavos and 1 and 2 sucres. The air mail set shows a suspension bridge over a mountain and its seven values were the same as for the ordinary postage set with the addition of a 5 sucre stamp. In the inscriptions used in both designs the words "Golden Gate" appear as "La Puerta de Oro."

In addition to the offices in Newfoundland which were mentioned recently, army base postoffices are now in operation in Bermuda and in Trinidad. These offices are branches of the New York postoffice just as is the case for all offices on naval vessels, etc., in Atlantic waters.

The official name of the office at Bermuda is "American Base Forces, A. P. O. 802, Bermuda." The original order of April 17, establishing this office placed it on board the army transport Château-Thierry and made it effective April 18, 1939. This order was modified about three days later to show the office established in Bermuda.

On April 28, 1941, effective on the same day, the order establishing the office "American Base Forces, A. P. O. 803, Trinidad, B. W. I." was published.

When addressing individuals at either of these stations, the writer should give the name and rank of the addressee, the full designation of the outfit to which he is attached, followed by the proper A. P. O. number, and complete the address with the phrase "American Base Forces in Bermuda," or "Trinidad," as the case may be.

Marine detachment offices in Antigua, Trinidad, Jamaica, and St. Lucia, will be listed in a future article.

V. LeYoung Ardiff, 4037 Roscoe street, member of the International Seapost Cover club, will accept up to 25 covers from any collector for mailing aboard merchant marine vessels on the high seas with subsequent cancelation and official indorsement as Paquebot mail by port of arrival postoffices. Twenty covers should be franked by 3 cent United States stamps, and five should be without stamps. Foreign stamps will be affixed to the latter in order to receive United States Paquelot indorsements. Send 25c to pay for the foreign stamps at 5c per cover and an additional 25c for forwarding at 1c per cover. Deadline June 10.

Lincoln Memorial university, Harrogate, Tenn., has published a series of 30 Lincoln photographs in the form of poster stamps. The photographs used were selected by Frederick H. Merserve from his famous collection of prints and negatives and reproductions have been faithfully made. Each poster stamp measures 1¾ by 2¼ inches and bears below the portrait a facsimile signature of Lincoln, the name of the photographer, the city where the photograph was taken and the date.

An attractive album is furnished with the set of stamps and this contains historical notes in connection with the space provided for each particular portrait. The poster stamps and booklet are published by R. L. Parkinson of Chicago and Stewart W. McClelland of Lincoln Memorial university. A copy of this valuable contribution to Lincolniana may be obtained for $1 by writing to Dr. McClelland.

Among the many publications of the Japan Tourist library is an interesting volume of 128 pages which describes and illustrates all the postage stamps of that country. The stamps are listed in seven sections: Regular issues, Commemorative issues, National Park stamps, New Year stamps, Air Post stamps, Semipostal issues, and Military stamps. Appendices list the unissued stamps designed in connection with the wedding of the crown prince, the stamps of the Japanese offices in Korea and in China, the watermarks on Japanese stamps, the various books which have been published on the subject.

This publication of the Japanese government railways is priced at 35 cents in America and is distributed by P. D. and Iole Perkins, 1620 Mission street, South Pasadena, Cal.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

(Copyright: 1941: By Ely Culbertson.)

There are two popular conceptions of bridge experts. The first, distinctly overflattering, holds that an expert can make aces out of deuces, and generally perform miracles. The second conception swings to the other extreme. According to this school of thought, an expert is a very ordinary player who, thru chicanery, bragging, and extraordinary luck, manages to convince dubs that he is quite a fellow at the green baize table. The truth, of course, lies just about halfway between these two conceptions. An expert who is not blinded by conceit is quite willing to admit that the chief ingredient in his expertness is not genius but plain, old-fashioned carefulness. This point is excellently brought out in an article by John C. Stablein in the Bridge World Magazine. I quote:

"The real expert knows that success does not usually depend upon being brilliant. Experience has taught him that anything can happen and his constant thought is to guard against unfavorable distributions. By the same token, if confronted with an almost hopeless contract, he will play the hand on the assumption that all the key cards are distributed favorably. This includes the manufacturing of opportunities which give the opponents every chance to err.

"As an illustration of the care used by an expert player to avoid a bad lay of cards, consider the following deal:

"North, dealer.
"Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH

"North opened the bidding with two no trump and South responded with three spades. North bid three no trump and South bid four spades. South felt that the hand would play better at the suit contract, which indeed it does. This bid was passed all around. West was hopeful of defeating the contract but knew that a double would be foolish.

"West led the queen of diamonds and dummy's king held the trick. The bewildering array of high cards would lull the average player into a feeling of security. The hand seemed sure for four or five odd, depending on the spade break. But this declarer was one of those chaps who take nothing for granted. He saw that four trumps bunched with East would create no problem. But the play of the ace of spades would set up three trump tricks for the opponents if the suit was bunched in the West hand.

"After some reflection declarer led the five of spades from dummy and when East showed out, let it ride to West's ten. His analysis had pointed out that this play was insurance against what actually happened, and could incur no hazard. An untimely ruff would do no harm, because after that the outstanding trump could be drawn with only three total losers to the deal.

"West's jack of diamonds return was won with the ace. Care is still necessary. If a diamond is ruffed and a spade is pushed thru West's holding, the declarer will wind up without enough trump control to do the needed work. But this declarer, who had started well, continued the good work. He played the king of hearts, West won and fired back a club. This was taken by the queen and a diamond was ruffed. Then the trump was led, covered by West and won with the ace. A trump lead, won by West, left South with two high trumps. No return by West could prevent the declarer from ruffing himself in, drawing the adverse trump and claiming the balance of the tricks."

Suit establishment or cross-ruff, which? That is a question which often arises. When the hand is not a true cross-ruff type, it is usually better to so develop the deal as to leave both roads open.

Bridge Problem.

There are no trumps and South leads. North and South are to win five tricks against any defense.

Solution: South leads the eight of spades, on which East gives up the nine. North leads the seven of hearts, which West wins with the jack, winning the next two tricks with the jack and ten of clubs. This forces West to give North two heart tricks, on which both king and ace of clubs will have to be discarded.

If West will not win the seven of hearts, South holds the trick with the ten and leads a diamond. Then he ducks both East's spade leads, forcing the club lead from East at the end.

Contract, four hearts by South; no adverse bidding.

West led the king of diamonds. A club was discarded from dummy and the ace won. Declarer decided to play the hand on the basis of establishing the spade suit. So the ace of spades was laid down. When the jack fell, South decided that the trump suit would bear investigation and was shocked when East showed out. In the faint hope that the spade suit might break and that the defense would slip somewhere along the line, declarer played the jack of clubs. But the defenders could hardly err as the cards lay and the contract was defeated.

The declarer was unfortunate in finding such a bad break in both hearts and spades, but more thought given to the discard from dummy at trick one might have proved illuminating. The lack of reëntries in dummy, other than trumps, should have warned declarer that a cross-ruff would probably be better than to predicate the whole future of the hand on establishing the spade suit. Hence the discard, while unusual, should have been made from the long spade suit. After winning with the ace of diamonds, an immediate club return would have practically cinched matters. If the suits broke favorably, success would be easy, and even with the bad lay of cards, it may be noted that such tactics would prevail against any possible defense.

Cold Punch Is a Favorite for Summer Gatherings

Cooking Editor Gives Recipes for Iced Drinks

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1941: By The Chicago Tribune.]

There'll be a cold punch at almost every June party of any size, be it a bridal shower, wedding reception, garden party, or gathering of the clan. Some of it will be served from lovely glass punch bowls, and some of it probably will be poured from the spouts of battered picnic coffee pots. Chill, refreshing and pleasant to taste, punch of all kinds is going to be popular this summer.

Iced tea and lemonade, while they aren't punches in the strict sense of the word, will be two favorite beverages for large gatherings. [If we're strict in our definition of punch, we'll have to make it an alcoholic beverage composed of five ingredients, so let's not be strict.]

LEMONADE FOR 25.

- 15 lemons [2⅓ cups of juice]
- 1¼ pounds [2½ cups] sugar
- 4½ quarts water
- 5 pounds ice

Cook sugar with a quart of the water until dissolved. Chill. Add lemon juice, rest of water, and ice.

ICED TEA FOR 50.

- 1¼ cups orange pekoe tea
- 6 quarts boiling water
- 8 quarts cold water
- Ice

Tie tea loosely in cheesecloth bag, allowing plenty of room for it to swell. Pour the fresh boiling water over the tea and let it steep for three to five minutes, no longer. Chill, add cold water, and serve from pitchers half filled with ice. Serve with lemon slices.

Here's a real party punch with a tea base. Fresh pineapple and strawberry juice [made by adding water to crushed strawberries, cooking until soft, and straining] give it a summery flavor.

SUMMER FRUIT PUNCH.
[10 quarts.]

- 1 pint grated fresh pineapple
- 2 pounds sugar
- 3 cups boiling water
- 1 pint hot, strong black tea
- 1 pint strawberry juice
- Juice of 8 lemons
- Juice of 6 oranges
- 7 quarts cold water

Cook pineapple, sugar and boiling water for 15 minutes, and strain. Add tea and chill. Add fruit juices, cold water, and pour over ice in a punch bowl. Use sliced strawberries and a few pieces of pineapple as garnish.

FRESH PINEAPPLE WINE PUNCH.
[Serves 30.]

- 1 fresh pineapple, cut in shreds
- 1½ cups sugar
- 1 orange, sliced thinly
- ½ cup Madeira wine
- 3 bottles Rhine wine [or similar type]

Place pineapple and orange in a bowl in layers with the sugar. Pour Madeira over the fruit, cover tightly, and chill for eight hours. Turn into a punch bowl and add chilled Rhine wine.

GRAPE PUNCH FOR 50.
[50 punch glasses.]

- 4 cups sugar
- 1 gallon water
- 1 quart lemon juice
- 3 cups orange juice
- 1 quart grape juice
- About 7 pounds ice

Make sirup of sugar and one quart of the water. Cool. Add strained fruit juices, remaining water, and pour over ice in punch bowl.

Remember the sleeveless dress we all thought was so smart 'way back in the middle 1920's? Those long-waisted, short-skirted dresses, worn at the time with helmet hats, seem pretty funny in recollection, don't they? Fashion designers today, however, are recalling the style for active sports. Essentially, these dresses are the jumper parts of jumper dresses, with the blouses omitted when one is dressed for tennis or golf. For the street and social occasions, simply add a tailored or puffed-sleeved blouse to match or contrast, and you've a jumper costume.

The three models suggested today are varied in type. One is buttoned down the front. The second has a flared skirt and snug bodice. The third is side-buttoned.

Style No. 2844 is designed for sizes 14 and 16, and 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inch bust measurements.

Style No. 2831 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20.

Style No. 2826 is designed for sizes 12, 14 and 16, and 36, 38 and 40 inch bust measurements.

June 1, 1941.

Universal day—A little dull perhaps compared to the rest of the week-end.

June, universal month—Not only will this month bring out a great deal of news, ideas, and suggestions, but also will bring in a note of improvement in the appearance of things. People will feel more like dressing up, perhaps shopping for gay items that they think will cheer them up, and in general they will be more conscious of personalities. There may be a tendency to inflation of hopes as well as finances. Some may indulge in pleasure or go on a spending spree as a release from the tension of the last month, and may take a more light hearted view of the situation. The thing to avoid is accepting rumors undiscriminatingly. Remember that there will be a great deal said and written this month that will blow over and be forgotten because much of it will be froth, gossip and propaganda.

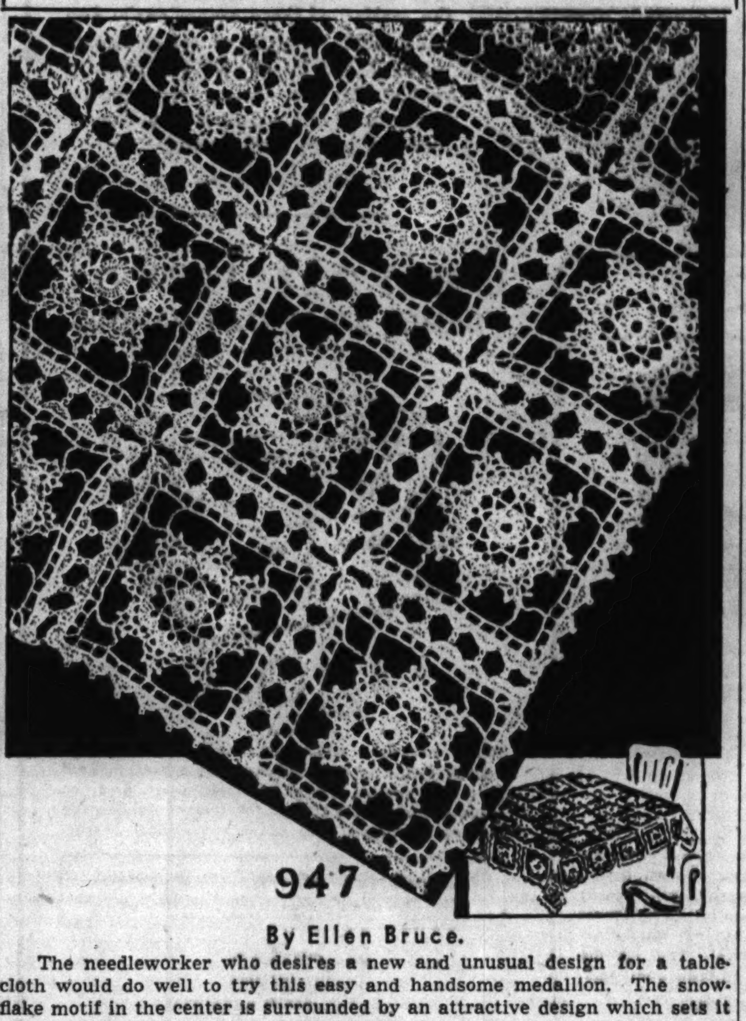
Snowflake Medallion Motif



By Ellen Bruce.

The needleworker who desires a new and unusual design for a tablecloth would do well to try this easy and handsome medallion. The snowflake motif in the center is surrounded by an attractive design which sets it off in individual squares, and these, when joined, form an interesting geometrical pattern. This pattern is recommended for quick and simple pickup work. A number 30 thread may be used if a runner or dresser scarf is desired.

For instructions in crocheting the snowflake medallion for the tablecloth, No. 947, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Lady of the House

Whitsunday.

The seventh Sunday after Easter, a festival commemorating the descent of the Holy Spirit upon the Apostles, ushers in Whitsuntide, the week, or especially the first three days, after Whitsunday. It coincides with the day of Pentecost, the solemn Jewish festival held on the fiftieth day after the second day of the Passover, in celebration of the ingathering. This was sometimes called the Feast of Weeks and the first fruits of the harvest were offered.

A parochial feast formerly held in England to raise funds or just for merriment went by the name of Whitsun ale. It seems that the chief characters in these Whitsun ales were the Whitsun lord or the Whitsun lady, which makes me think all this is not so obsolete as it sounds. Witness our own penchant for "queens" or "kings" of this and that and almost everything.

Yards in a City.

A city is made of long-legged skyscrapers hiding the sky and endless concrete sidewalks covering all the ground. I like to swing along the blocks of busy streets; I like to stand in the shadows of tall buildings, or look down upon the world from out their shining eyes. But I cannot bear to live with chunks of lifeless wood and stone all day. I need a bit of living, growing things. The friendly touch of leaves that reach, flowers that nod and smile, grass that shoots up, a tree that whispers. I need living things to keep me alive.

Cities have yards, too, little plots of garden around a house, that keep a city alive, where children can play. I need a yard to come home to. It reminds me of the woods, the forest, the fields, all the rest of God's lovely world.

I need a yard. I hope the day never dawns when there are no more yards. Scattered across it, they are the pieces that hold the crazy quilt of a city together. Thank God for yards in a city!

MARGUERITE ZRALEK.

Recollections.

Judge Bolton's back yard joined ours but there was a high picket fence between. That spring his lawn was so thick with dandelions that it looked like a carpet of gold. I used to look thru the fence wistfully. As I hadn't begun going to school I played a good deal by myself.

One day I noticed a couple of loose pickets and it wasn't long before I had tugged them aside and slipped thru the fence. It nearly took my breath away to pat the pretty flowers and smell their faint fragrance. I held one under my chin to see if I loved butter but, of course, I couldn't see myself. I hadn't picked more than two or three when the judge appeared at his back door. I had seen him before and was afraid of him. He was so tall and dark and always dressed in a black suit with a Prince Albert coat. He wore a high hat and his brushy whiskers looked like General Grant's.

He called out, "Go home, little girl, I will not have children in my yard." I scrambled thru the fence and ran into our house, crying.

The next day I saw a man nailing the loose pickets and for weeks I was afraid to play in our own back yard.

LITTLE GIRL OF THE EIGHTIES.

It's June!

And the high tide of summer coming up. June that "may be had by the poorest comer," since "no price is set on the lavish summer." And so far, no tax.

When summer takes her "flowery throne, with roses red and harebells blue," the little roads are calling, calling you. To pastures blanketed in green and gold . . . rolling fields of promise . . . redwings teetering on slender green lances of young cattails spearing up thru old marsh grass . . . blended, added greens signaling a new start full of hope and purpose . . . ancient house of white washed enduring stone . . . wild apple tree in a thicket of hawthorn and choke cherry . . . fat bumble bee blundering up a roadside bank shaded with fairy umbrellas of May apple . . . distant rolling hills . . . far shimmering horizon where deep blue of water meets misty blue of sky . . . banner of trailing smoke from a peaceful ship on peaceful business bent.

Fishing Lady.

If some of the army of fishermen invading Wisconsin along about this time each season will drive far enough to the north, they may encounter a young lady of 81 who for the last 50 summers and more has not failed to cast her bait into the tumbling waters of the Brule, made famous by several fishing summers of the late President Coolidge.

"Bare Midriff" Sweater

By Jean MacDonald.

This good looking knitted sweater, which exposes the midriff, is designed to be worn with sports or evening clothes. Shorts are the complement to this sweater when it is worn for sports, while a long, full, gypsy evening skirt is the "must" companion piece for evening occasions. Knitting this sweater may be accomplished in three or four days of consistent knitting, and it is fun to create. Fine angora, or two or three ply wool, may be used.

For instructions in knitting the bare midriff sweater, No. 953, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Announcement of Broken Troth Calls for Tact

By Helen Bartlett.

The whole idea of broken engagements is an unhappy one. No matter how philosophical you try to be about it, it is an embarrassing and often heart breaking experience, and one which most persons would wish to avoid for personal as well as social reasons. It is a situation which requires the greatest tact and diplomacy if it is to be handled gracefully.

No matter how unpleasant an ordeal it may be, however, it is better to go thru it and admit having made a mistake and suffer the misery involved rather than to go thru with the plans to marry, only to postpone for a year or so the inevitable disaster. That isn't smart and it isn't fair. It is much more serious to change your mind after you are married than before.

The less said about such a difficult situation, the easier it is to bear and the sooner forgotten. Friends and relatives, if they are tactful and possess good sense, will not broach the subject or ask personal questions. They probably will be eaten up with curiosity, but it is really none of their business and it should not be permitted to be made a topic of general conversation. The news that the engagement has been broken will have to be made public, of course, but fuller explanation and reasons why should be left unsaid in every case. Certainly no fingers of blame are to be pointed by either the young woman or the young man.

If the invitations to the wedding already have been sent out, they must be recalled. The guests must be notified and, may we repeat, without explanation, subterfuge, or slurring remarks about the young man. The best way of recalling the invitations is to send a printed card to all the guests worded in this manner [printed because time is short and engraving takes too long]:

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peterson announce that the marriage of their daughter
Helen to Mr. Harold Taylor
will not take place

Both parties are expected to return all letters, photographs, and gifts of intrinsic value which have been exchanged. The engagement ring, by all means, is sent back to the man. Any wedding presents which have been received, and shower presents, too, should be returned to the donors. Letters will have to accompany such presents.

Do you fumble for words when you introduce persons? Learn the simple rules of introductions and avoid embarrassment. "The Etiquet of Introductions," by Helen Barlett, Tribune etiquet editor, gives full instructions. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

Homemakers Will Name Committee to Aid Defense

A committee to meet all emergency defense demands will be appointed by the Chicago and Cook County Homemakers' association at its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon at the La Salle hotel. Mrs. Fritchey will report on the recent consumer and marketing conferences in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Emil Mueller will be hostess at the meeting, which will be open to all women.

The new board of directors of the Cook County League of Women Voters will make plans for the coming year at its first meeting. Tuesday from 10:30 o'clock thru luncheon, at Mrs. Walter T. Fisher's home in Winnetka. Mrs. Raleigh W. Stone is the new president.

You Can Bleach Your Skin to a Lighter, Prettier Hue with Mercolized Wax Cream

FASHION indicates the return to favor of fairer, softer skin. Ever in stride with the latest mode, Mercolized Wax Cream lends its subtle bleaching and beautifying action to help you win a fashionable, lighter, lovelier complexion. Mercolized Wax Cream hastens the natural shedding of the dull, surface skin and uncovers the fairer, softer, smoother underskin. The action takes place so gradually that the actual flaking process is not visible. But soon you become aware of the improved appearance of your complexion. Start bleaching your skin tonight using Mercolized Wax Cream according to directions and you will be pleased.

REMOVE FACIAL HAIR with PHELACTINE DEPILATORY—Phelactine not only takes off the surface hair, but actually extracts the portion embedded under the skin, leaving no fuzz or stubble. It can be applied quickly and easily in a few seconds. Not a cream or powder. Has no obnoxious odor. You will like Phelactine.

TRY SAXOLITE ASTRINGENT, the DELIGHTFUL SKIN FRESHENER. It is a quick acting, refreshing aid for daily care of the skin. Saxolite reduces excess oil on the surface skin; and its contracting action temporarily tightens the skin tissue. Simply dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and pat this lotion briskly on the skin several times daily.

CHICAGO—[To the Home Building Editor]—It looks to us as if some of our chromium plated fixtures are rusting, and I thought chromium didn't rust. What can we do?

Zionist Organization Is to Have Annual Conclave

The proposed Jewish army in Palestine and other problems confronting that land will be discussed at the 42d annual conference of the Zionist Organization of Chicago, Wednesday at the Hotel Sherman. Rosenberg, president, will report on the past year's activities, and officers will be elected.

China Anniversary Party.

The china anniversary of the Lake City Woman's club will be observed on Wednesday with a luncheon and card party at the Svithiod Singing club, 624 Wrightwood avenue. Mrs. John R. Harmon heads the club for the coming year.

BETTINA BEDWELL SAYS:

You probably wouldn't remember, but the calico wrapper, as venerable in American life as the coonskin cap, was one of the main props of the home scene in this country around 1900, and the calico wrapper, or something very close to it, is news this summer. Made in chintz, with beaded ruffles around the neckline, wrappers are cool, practical and pretty for private life. Dotted swiss is another material that makes a hot weather wrapper to slip on for breakfast. It's as cool and refreshing as iced orange juice. Any of the lightweight cottons, at which our fabric makers are so expert, is meat for the designer of the wrapper.

There's no special rule about the cut of this kind of home gown, altho all I've seen are open down the front and may or may not be fitted. They wash and iron flat, and are very easy to keep in the fresh and sweet condition that is the mainstay of their beauty.

Cedar Point at Lake Geneva Is a Beauty Spot

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

Research into the history of Cedar Point, one of Lake Geneva's most attractive shore sectors, discloses old Chicago names and exciting events that are recalled nowadays only by the oldest inhabitants of the region.

Nowhere on the lake is the splendor of nature more pronounced than on Cedar Point, the thickly wooded peninsula that juts out from the north side of the lake forming the eastern boundary of Williams bay. More than one hundred Chicago families have summer homes on the peninsula, several with estates comprising large acreages and others contenting themselves with cottages set in smaller lawns and gardens.

• • •

One of the most charming of the many lovely homes on this shore is Wakewood, the white Cape Cod cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Wakeley of Kenilworth. The house is a year round structure with an unusual feature in that one unit can be closed off from the main building and used as a winter week-end house. The Wakeleys are devotees of both summer and winter sports with accent on yachting as testified by the gleaming array of silver trophies in Wakewood's living room. Most of these were won by Barbara, the Wakeley's subdebutante daughter.

Thruout the house there are many interesting touches reminiscent of early New England, including the natural finish maple woodwork, the divided or Dutch double doors, the original Currier and Ives lithographs, and the quaint pewter candle brackets with shieldbacks. The latter were used in olden times to protect walls from smoke when real candles were set in the sconces instead of electric globes. The narrow winding staircase to the upper floor is another picturesque early American feature, while in Mrs. Wakeley's room the toile de Jouy of which the window drapes and chair cushions are made might have come out of an 18th century room in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Perhaps in just such a house once lived Mr. Wakeley's illustrious ancestor, Gen. Lewis Morris of revolutionary war fame and signer of the Declaration of Independence.

• • •

The gardens at Wakewood are especially lovely, and one of the pleasantest spots from earliest spring to latest fall is the wild flower border. Appropriately, the most prolific of the spring blooms is the snowy "wake robin"—trilium to the botanists—and among the latest autumn beauties is the celestial blue fringed gentian, now one of America's rarest wild flowers.

The trees at Wakewood also are particularly noteworthy as in addition to the numerous native oaks, hickories, black walnuts, and maples, there are many unusual varieties such as the Chinese gingko, chestnut, coffee tree, and various rare evergreens. These are from the nurseries of The Boulders, the estate of Mrs. Wakeley's parents, the Harry A. Wheelers. The Boulders is located a few miles north of Wakewood on the high ridge between Lake Como and Lake Geneva, and adjoins Kemah, the Albert W. Harris estate. Mr. Wheeler is an arboriculturist of considerable reputation and has won special renown for his successful work in crossing the beautiful American elm tree with the hardier Chinese elm. Mr. Wheeler took up tree culture as a hobby many years ago and now devotes most of his time to the work.

Altho Mrs. Wakeley has been a summer visitor at Lake Geneva since her childhood, Wakewood itself is only 10 years old. In the early days of the century the property was part of the Frederick Wolff estate, which later was the country place of another prominent Chicago family, the James G. Cozzens. In fact, the wooded tract west of Wakewood's outdoor dining room was once the Cozzens' driving park for exercising their many horses. The Cozzens' summer home, Tarry On, located several hundred feet east of Wakewood, is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Laurence B. Hamlin of Chicago and Elgin. Recently they greatly enlarged and improved the old house, making it altogether charming. Booklovers especially find it easy to "tarry on" at Tarry On as Mr. Hamlin's library is one of the finest at the lake. The Hamlins also have a home at Winter Park, Fla.

• • •

Another of the larger estates at Cedar Point is that of Ignaz Schwinn. The house is an attractive modern version of a comfortable Victorian villa in soft rose colored brick. While most of the houses on the peninsula are new, and all of them pleasantly individual, ranging in style of architecture from conservative English country house or colonial to ultramodernistic, there is one house that is even older than Tarry On. It is larger than most of its neighbors and interesting to the historian not only because of its age, nearly 50 years, but because it was the summer home of the Herbert A. Beidlers, another well known Chicago family, long since gone from the lake, but not forgotten by the older lake shore residents.

In 1890 Jacob Beidler, Chicago lumber magnate, purchased 121 acres at Cedar Point. [Mr. Beidler's $80,000 home, still standing at Jackson boulevard and Sangamon street, was one of the important homes erected in Chicago in the late 1860s.] Apparently the Cedar Point property was never used by Mr. Beidler as, according to local history, he disposed of it the following year, 1891, to his kinsman, the late Herbert A. Beidler. The latter erected a handsome large home on the shore and named it Alpine Villa.

In the same year he launched a beautiful steam yacht which for a time beat all speed records on the lake. The yacht has long since gone, but the house, a yellow stucco with hospitably wide verandas and the stained glass windows considered the height of elegance in the '90s, is still standing seemingly as staunch and sturdy as when built. It is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Moore of Chicago. [The Herbert A. Beilders were cousins of the present Francis Beidler family of Lake Forest.]

On the shore path between Wakewood and the Schwinn properties stands an ornate black iron turnstile gate, an interesting relic of the World's Columbian exposition, brought from Chicago after the fair in 1893 by Mr. Beidler.

Before the Beidler régime, Cedar Point was part of the Nathaniel K. Fairbank estate, and previous to that it was owned by Maj. Edward B. Meatyard, a prominent citizen of St. Louis. In 1874 Maj. Meatyard built on the point a very elaborate summer home, copy of a famous German castle. In 1886, after Cedar Point had been purchased by Mr. Fairbank, altho still occupied by Maj. Meatyard, a man named J. F. Lyon declared that a choice strip of land along the shore was not included in Mr. Fairbank's deed. Mr. Lyon further stated that this bit of land had never been sold by the government, and he himself put in a claim for it, built himself a shack right on Maj. Meatyard's beautifully landscaped front lawn, and ran a pier out into the lake alongside the major's handsome docks.

Mr. Fairbank insisted the land was his, and a small army of employés from his summer home near by combined with another regiment of gardeners, coachmen, and house servants from the major's castle proceeded to demolish the shack and the pier. Mr. Lyon straightway rebuilt both structures and again the Fairbank-Meatyard troops went into action. Old residents relate that the battle continued for several weeks and furnished a great attraction for the local populace and summer visitors. Then the case was brought to court. Mr. Fairbank received a clear title to the property and the mysterious Mr. Lyon departed.

• • •

The historic spot where the battle once raged was later the site of the first Lake Geneva Yacht clubhouse. This was about the turn of the century, long after Maj. Meatyard's castle had burned. At present the Glen S. Reids' attractive early English House of Eleven Gables marks the place, and their pier is set on the old yacht club cribs. The yacht club now has its headquarters directly across the lake on the south shore.

The Reids, like many of the summer residents in this section of Cedar Point park, live in River Forest. Perhaps inspired by ghosts of the old yacht clubhouse, Elaine, 15 year old daughter of the family, is decidedly nautical and her numerous cub yacht trophies are accorded a place of honor over the fieldstone fireplace. Adding to the decorative effect are the blue ribbons won by her brother, Allan, in field and track meets at Northwestern Military and Naval academy, where he is in his senior year.

Other Chicagoans who have cottages at Cedar Point are Dr. and Mrs. Arthur G. McNeil, the Arthur Furlongs, the Emil A. Baumbachs, Dr. and Mrs. J. K. Hawks, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Phister, the Joseph Klickas, the Stanley Howells, the E. E. Perkins, the Charles O. Fetschers, the John Englands, the Robert J. Sterlings, Alfred A. Pedersens, and Dr. and Mrs. William A. Schwab.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

Sun suits for toddlers must have three features: Just enough, not too much or too little coverage; freedom of movement and comfort; and attractiveness. This last named quality is not to be littled, because youngsters these days know what is smart in fashion, and, whether in baby talk or not, demand it! Today's pattern creates a buttoned - down-the-side sun suit with sturdy shoulder straps. The remnant counters may well be consulted for materials, since toddlers' tiny clothes require so little fabric. Simple, ready made edgings of almost any type may be employed as trimming. There's a companion bolero for protection after sufficient sun rays have been absorbed.

Style No. 2884 is designed for sizes 1, 2, 3, and 4.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! City Is Center of This Week's Society Events

By Judith Cass.

The passing of Memorial day and the arrival of June brings the longing for country life well to the fore. Most of the events on the calendar for this week, however, will keep participants in town, or bring them to town.

The Civic Opera House will look much as it does during the height of the winter opera season tomorrow night when Leopold Stokowski and his All American Youth orchestra plays there. The Chicago Lighthouse for the Blind will receive the proceeds from the evening of music. Members of its board of directors are planning dinner parties galore to precede the concert, and some of this and last season's debutantes will act as ushers.

The John Alden Carpenters, the Byron S. Harveys, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Connors, the Theodore Garys, the Paul Godehns, and the Louis Watermulders are some of those giving dinner parties. Miss Dudley Winston, Miss Jane Lee, Miss Sally Hyde, Miss Modrea Mullen, Miss Merrill Hubbard, Miss Anne Daughaday, and Miss Patricia Cathcart are the young women who will usher and sell flowers.

The Chicago Junior league is having a gala party on Tuesday afternoon that will bring its suburban members in town, for what woman can resist inspecting a new home? The league's party is to be a housewarming in its new and stunning quarters in the Ambassador hotel. Adding pleasure to the party is the fact that husbands have been invited, too. The hours are from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Tuesday will be a busy day, for the Illinois Federation of Music clubs is having a silver and white breakfast at the Woman's Athletic club. The white breakfast was initiated last year in memory of Mrs. Theodore Thomas. Silver has been added this year in celebration of the federation's 25th anniversary.

Various clubs in the federation will compete in setting tables for the party. Judging their efforts will be Mrs. Frank G. Logan, Mrs. Percy B. Eckhart, Mrs. Warren W. Shoemaker, Mrs. Loyal A. Davis, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Mrs. Charles S. Clark, and Mrs. J. A. Harvey, and Mrs. Alma K. Anderson of Wisconsin.

The show will be the largest Milles one ever assembled in Chicago.

The speaker will be Laurence Sickman, who is curator of oriental art at the William Rockhill Nelson Gallery of Art in Kansas City. When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, May 28, 1893.

Dear Julia: A feast of good things in the field of entertainment has been set before us in the last 10 days. Will and I never miss attending the Daly plays, when that fine group of actors is here, and this year we chose "Twelfth Night," as we had never seen Ada Rehan in this Shakespearean play. I was a little disappointed in her reading of Viola's lines, which she gave in almost a declamatory manner, when they should come forth in an impulsive fashion, to my mind. And then, I thought she didn't have the right meaning in one line—the famous one in which, in answer to the duke's question about her imaginary sister, she replies: "She sat, like Patience," etc. Miss Rehan paused after the word Patience, thus: "She sat, like Patience, on a monument," as if to imply that the disappointed lady sat, as did Patience, on a monument, instead of just resembling that personified virtue. O, well, perhaps it was a trivial thing, but it seemed to me rather unintelligent. However, Miss Rehan is always well worth seeing.

Mrs. Henry W. Beecher.

Coaching parties to the World's Fair grounds are all the rage here. Martha Jr. was in one such party last week given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Knott. The start was made from the fashionable Virginia hotel on Rush street and the ride was along the boulevards to the fair grounds, where they had dinner at the German building. Sandy was invited, of course, but his practice is now so large he has little time for pleasure, and a new baby coming to Chicago annoyingly arrived at that time. It was a sore disappointment to his devoted wife. Mr. and Mrs. J. Harley Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand W. Peck, and Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap Smith were among the delightful people who made the trip with the Knotts.

As Will and I drove along Michigan avenue we saw another gay party setting forth, Harry and Harlow Higinbotham evidently the hosts, while Lawrence and J. F. Heyworth and Ferd Peck Jr. were guests. It looks like very good fun, but we sober older people are not invited, as it's a young folks' sport.

I found entertainment, too, in the dress symposium of the National Council of Women meeting in Central Music hall this week. The ladies on the platform were all dressed either in the clinging robes favored by the ancient Greeks, or in short dresses—ankle length—which the pioneers in this reform movement would like us all to wear. Rachel Foster Avery, for instance, wore a Syrian dress reaching to the top of her pretty high shoes. Mrs. May Wright Sewall of Indianapolis called attention to this and similar dresses, explaining that they were intended for street wear only and would be exchanged for dainty, shimmering, trailing robes when the shelter of home was reached. Will's comment, when I described the costumes I had seen, was: "By the Lord Harry! I should hope so!"

Mrs. Sewall's declaration that the fundamental principle of dress should be appropriateness can't be gainsaid, but O, dear Julia, there were some terrible examples of costuming on the stage! As time passes I presume there will be better designs. The gowns I saw today were certainly an improvement on the bloomer costume, worn by suffrage leaders in an earlier day. The idea of dress reform is advancing to success, I am sure, for a statement was circulated with many important names on it—names of ladies who express their belief in common sense dress for women. Among the signers I noticed the names of such women as Clara Barton of the Red Cross movement, Lady Henry Somerset, temperance advocate; Harriet Beecher Stowe [tho I presume she signed some time ago, as she is now incapacitated]; Marietta Holly ["Samantha Allen"]; Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, Margaret Sangster [of Harper's Bazaar], and many other prominent persons.

Women are becoming more independent, surely. Your loving friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Ada Rehan was to the theatergoer of the nineties what Helen Hayes is to the public of today. As I heard Miss Hayes last week recite the lines quoted, "She sat like Patience on a monument," I could understand how Martha Esmond would have felt vexed at a pause after the word "Patience." It would spoil the meaning. Would Martha have liked Malvolio with a cockney accent? I think not.

A "When Chicago Was Young" Party.

At a buffet luncheon in an old west side mansion, 1938 Adams street, lately restored by the new owners, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Conlon, Mrs. Conlon asked her guests—many of them descendants of Chicago pioneers—to write a "Dear Julia" letter, in which the spirit of this column should be preserved and some incident of early Chicago related. The prize—a copy of "The Elegant Eighties"—was won by Mrs. George Lorimer Johnson, 325 South Damen avenue, with a letter telling of the rescue of George Alexander Smith and his friend, Allan Pinkerton, from the wreck of a sailing vessel in which they were coming to America from Scotland in 1846. The ship's cargo included many tubs of butter which floated, bearing up the passengers until a vessel arrived to rescue them.

Mr. Conlon, as host, did not compete, but was moved to write a "Dear Julia" letter describing a spinning wheel, now Mrs. Conlon's, but once owned by the Leander McCormick family.

Beside the letter contest, Mrs. Conlon offered her guests puzzles about Chicago. If you'd like one of these, "Hidden Streets of Chicago," to use at a party, send stamped addressed envelope to Herma Clark, Care CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

"DON'T WEAR YOURSELF OUT APARTMENT HUNTING!"

"Go directly to the addresses offering what you want by making up your inspection list from the apartments offered in the Tribune want ad section."

A few minutes in your easy chair can save you hours on the street—when you plan your apartment hunt with the aid of the rental columns in the Tribune want ad section.

These columns give you word pictures of apartments thruout Chicago and suburbs—more apartments to rent want advertising than you will find in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

Before you take one step from home, make up a list of addresses to visit which you know in advance will offer something definitely within your range of interest.

By going directly to such addresses, you save the travel and stair-climbing you ordinarily waste when you walk the streets and choose at random, crossing threshold after threshold only to find apartments which could not possibly suit you.

Remember, it is so much easier to run up and down the Tribune rental columns than it is to run up and down the streets. And the end-result is so much more satisfactory.

To end your apartment hunt happily, begin it in the Tribune want ad section—today.

Save Time

Apartments to rent want ads are listed in the Tribune (1) by numbers of rooms and (2) by locations in the city and the suburbs. You can turn at once to the grouping which lists apartments in just the size and location you prefer.

Save Energy

With a list of addresses which you know in advance are most likely to offer the facilities you want, you waste no energy climbing stairs to look at apartments which could not possibly interest you.

Get Satisfaction

To make sure you overlook no worthwhile apartment value, choose from the rental columns in the Tribune, which prints more apartments to rent want advertising than all other Chicago newspapers combined.

SERVING CHICAGO FOR 93 YEARS

APARTMENT OWNERS! RENTAL AGENTS!

Right in Chicago and suburbs the Tribune delivers 450,000 more daily circulation than other Chicago daily newspapers. On Sundays it delivers from 385,000 to 460,000 more circulation in metropolitan Chicago than other Chicago Sunday newspapers. Federation Is Challenged by New President

By Betty Browning.

The 2,000,000 members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs were presented with, perhaps, the greatest challenge in their history by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, their dynamic new president, at the close of their golden jubilee convention last week-end at Atlantic City, N. J.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst.

Will clubwomen, Mrs. Whitehurst demanded, accept the responsibility of organizing women's participation in national defense, a responsibility that is theirs by right of years of community leadership? Or will women sit back and wait for the government to conscript them?

• • •

Mrs. Whitehurst urged the club leaders at the convention "to start a crusade, a crusade to preserve our representative form of government, to combat fifth columnists, and to prepare our country and our people to defend themselves."

"Let us go back to our states, call all women's groups together, and organize them for national defense," the tall, striking, new president cried. "Select a coördinator for each county and large city in your state. Have all of the women's organizations work with you."

• • •

The program to be undertaken by the women, Mrs. Whitehurst suggested, should emphasize training in first aid, home nursing, nutrition, health, consumer problems, and community recreation. Classes, she said, should be provided to teach women how to take their places in agriculture and industry, including ground work in aviation.

She also recommended organizing a strong committee on Americanism to preserve the American form of government and to combat subversive propaganda.

A movement to draft women is "under way," Mrs. Whitehurst told the federation board after the close of the convention.

"If women are not organized," she said, "they are going to have to take what is handed them."

• • •

Before the convention delegates, and again in an interview, Mrs. Whitehurst declared that she believes women, as a whole, oppose conscription. Such a move, she stated in the interview, would be one more step in the growing trend of this country toward "some form of socialism or dictatorship."

Mrs. Whitehurst disclosed that she is planning to set forth shortly on a transcontinental tour to rally the federation's 15,000 clubs to the "crusade." It will not be the first time that she has tried to arouse clubwomen to greater civic responsibility, for her fiery speeches calling on the women to "wake up" and turn from frivolous pastimes to the important problems awaiting their attention, have made her previous club career notably unorthodox and newsworthy.

• • •

But Mrs. Whitehurst brings to her new office, and to the leadership of a crusade, more than the gift of oratory. In fact, she rather scorns words. In her acceptance speech she rejected the tradition that an incoming president chooses a keynote for her administration, with characteristic frankness:

"I sincerely believe that we have too many high sounding phrases in this country already and too little action. Every one is talking, but very little is being done. To illustrate what I mean, when Mrs. Dunbar, our outgoing president, selected for her keynote, "Adjusting democracy for human welfare," I thought that it was the finest phrase that could be used at that particular time. At the end of her administration every Pink or Red in this country is trying to adjust democracy so that it will not have any semblance of the representative form of government that we have in mind, but some ideology based on socialism or dictatorship."

• • •

Fearless frankness is one of Mrs. Whitehurst's assets, but she has great diplomatic powers, too, when the occasion requires. Thus, it was generally conceded to be a triumph for her diplomacy that not a single state or national leader raised a voice in protest against the passage of the so-called "convoy" resolution at the convention, altho a great number of "nays" came from the floor on the vote. In fact, the only opposing voice raised in debate was that of an unmarried woman physician.

That even Mrs. Whitehurst herself was astonished by the completeness of her side's victory was indicated by the fact that twice she came forward and asked for a frank expression of opinion, reminding the delegates that the resolution favored going to war, if necessary, to insure the victory of Hitler's adversaries.

• • •

Another stroke of diplomacy on Mrs. Whitehurst's part, announced last week, was the appointment of Mrs. William T. Bruckner of Hinsdale as dean of federation directors, and as such, a member of Mrs. Whitehurst's executive committee. Mrs. Bruckner is the new Illinois director of the General Foundation. As president of the Illinois federation last year she headed the forces which successfully opposed the General federation board's interventionist policies.

Evidence of her diplomacy in a still broader field came to light during convention debate on a proposal to condemn strikes as menacing to the progress of national defense production. "I am married to a producer," Mrs. Whitehurst told the delegates, "but I believe that labor has a right to strike. It is the American way. Let us not imperil the success of our own defense program by involving ourselves in so delicate a question."

• • •

Mrs. Whitehouse is the only woman appointed to the national defense council of the state of Maryland. This is but the latest of a series of appointments in recognition of her talent for leadership. She is the only woman ever appointed to the board of regents of the University of Maryland. She has served this board as secretary, has been secretary of the state board of agriculture, and is a member of the board of trustees of the Presbyterian Home for the Aged, and of the board of trustees of the University hospital in her home city of Baltimore, Md.

It was while she was studying medicine at Johns Hopkins university, as a sequel to having studied nursing during the world war, that Mrs. Whitehurst met her husband, a manufacturer. Her club career started in 1923, when she was a "door keeper" in the Maryland federation.

Cuzco Full of Memorials to Ancient Rulers

[This is the 13th story in a series on South America. The next will appear in an early issue.]

By Mason Warner.

You leave luxuries behind you when you start inland from the west coast of South America. CUZCO, PERU. Cuzco stands 12,000 feet above sea level. One must sacrifice comfort to get there, but the place is so strange and different that bored and blasé globe trotters are glad they made the journey, for in this ancient city, the capital of the vast empire of the Incas, there is much to see and study, if not admire.

Yes, Cuzco is old, very old. It was old when Pizarro's bloody march conquered and subdued the Incas. It was old before the Incas, in the 11th century, with only their own tribes of Quechua Indians began their blitzkriegs to the coast, north, west, and south. The Incas were greedy conquerors and mighty rulers. As tribe after tribe surrendered, the peoples were absorbed into the Inca's socialistic empire and became converts to his religion. All native tongues except one were abandoned for the Quechua language. The Aymara Indians around Lake Titicaca were the only ones to preserve their original language, and it is still spoken today.

• • •

The Incas expanded their territory to include the coastal regions, the high plateaux of the Andes, and the eastern slopes leading down to the jungle country of the Amazon. From what is now Ecuador south to the central part of Chile, Peru, Bolivia, western Brazil, and parts of Paraguay were all under their sway.

If a tribe proved rebellious and continued warlike, its people were simply taken up, root and branch, and removed far away to another land, selected for its similar altitude and climate. Coastal tribes were moved north and south along the ocean shores; tribes midway up in altitude on one side of the Cordilleras were transplanted to a plateau of similar height across the ranges. Living conditions in the new places of abode duplicated as nearly as possible those in the homes the exiles had left. Thus, peace and acquiescence to the rule of the Incas was assured.

Whatever else they were, the Incas were praiseworthy architects and builders, with whatever materials they had at hand. Along the coast are the remains of cities built of only clay and adobe—vestiges of what evidently once were noble buildings, which have withstood the wear and tear of hundreds of years.

• • •

In and around Cuzco, one encounters indestructible monuments to the power and achievements of forgotten rulers. For hundreds of miles in every direction from Cuzco in these high lands of the Andean plateaux are to be found walls and remainders of structures that bear evidence to the art, skill, and workmanship of these early Indians. It is an old story, but I must repeat that huge blocks of granite are so precisely carved and so closely fitted together that one cannot insert a razor blade between them. Cut and placed in irregular patterns, these massive stones have withstood not only time and the elements, but the jarring of earthquakes down thru the ages.

Right in the heart of Cuzco, along its main streets, are Incan walls which are today used as bases for Spanish colonial superstructures. The work of the Indians is so far superior to that of the later-comers as to make comparison odious indeed—or perhaps "odorous" is the better word.

• • •

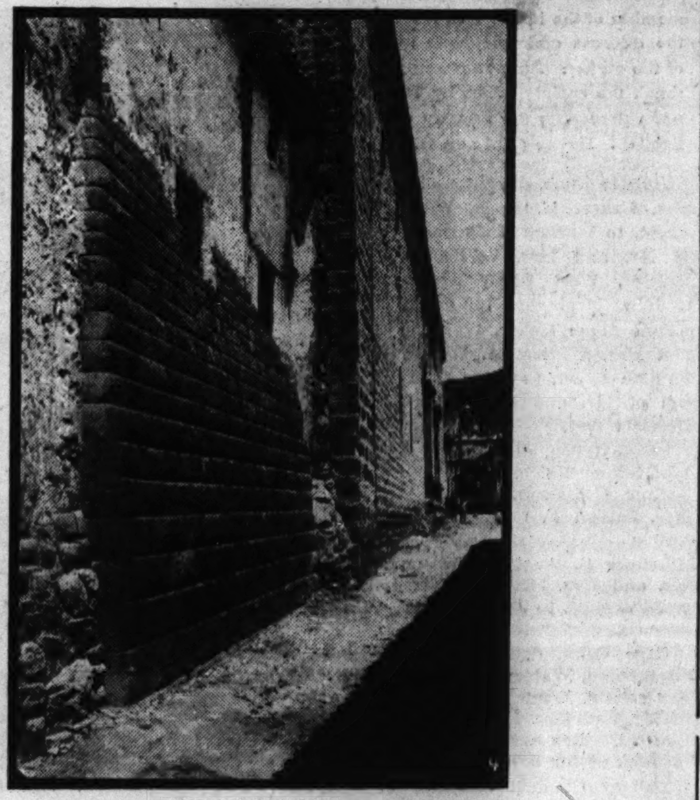
In the center of the city still stand the foundation walls of the Incan Temple of the Sun, said by one authority to be "a structure probably without a rival." The original temple was partly razed by Pizarro's conquistadores, but the outer wall of the holy sanctuary was such a magnificent curve of huge stones, each cut, polished, and fitted to its fellow with such perfection, that it was left standing, and upon it was erected a church of early colonial design. A few of the rooms have been preserved. Today they can be termed chapels with no strain of definition. In the inside walls of each are niches in which could have been displayed images or sacred objects.

Up and down the narrow, cobblestone streets wanders a conglomerate people, singly and in groups. The Indians are in such tatters that there is presented a problem of how the patches hold together. Many of them are chewing quids of coca leaves, the curse of the Andean Indians, for from these leaves is derived narcotic cocaine. It is claimed that the drug keeps the Indians going in high altitudes, enabling them to carry heavy burdens for long distances because of its stimulating effects. Quechua women, as well as men, resort to chewing the leaves for their alleged effect in allaying the pangs of hunger and cold. The drug is to the Andean Indian what opium is to the Chinese peasant.

• • •

The shops are small and dark, showing nothing that appeals to a stranger. While Quechua women may be accused of having a bad habit or two, it must be admitted that they are industrious. Never do they enjoy an idle moment. While walking along, with babies carried in shawls on their backs, they are spinning woolen yarn on little distaffs suspended from a hand thrust forward. When sitting in the sun they are constantly knitting. When guarding flocks out in the country they are either spinning yarn or knitting.

The high and cold altitude, with the hot sun at midday, makes for incongruities in dress. Women wear from four to six skirts, with heavy shawls pinned around the shoulders, and wide and heavy sombreros, yet they go barefooted. The men have no shoes either, but their shoulders are covered with woolen ponchos of bright colors, and they wear earlaps under their broad-brimmed hats.



STILL STANDING.

An example of Incan masonry in Cuzco, Peru. The Incan buildings stand the wear better than do those of Spanish construction. This one is 500 years old.

IN THE BALANCE

no nearer to knowing why she had gone thu the gun room. The door was ajar—it might have been that. She crossed to the door which led into the study and found it a hand's breadth open. There was no sound from the room beyond. She pulled the door a little wider and looked in.

She saw Dale. He had his back to her and his arms about Alicia Steyne. She could not see Alicia's face—only a piece of a white skirt, and her hands locked about Dale's neck and Dale's head bent to hers. She saw no more than she had to see, and turned and came away.

When she reached her sitting room she sat down on the couch and tried to steady herself. A kiss doesn't mean very much. With some men it doesn't mean anything at all. She mustn't make a mountain out of a molehill or think that the world had come to an end because Dale kissed his cousin. No, she wouldn't cheat herself either—it wasn't a cousinly kiss.

But she had hurt his feelings. He had brought her a present. She hadn't liked it, and she had shown that she hadn't liked it in front of Rafe and Alicia. After that, how easy for Alicia to play on the hurt, to use his old feeling for her and blow some spark of passion into a blaze. If she had been there to watch she could not have been more sure of what had happened. She had a sense of justice as delicate as it was rare. It could divide between Dale's fault and her own hurt. She must not cry, because Alicia would see that she had been crying—and she must not let Alicia see, because Alicia hated her. But Dale loved her. Dale had married her, not Alicia. Dale loved her. . . . Her heart turned slowly over. Did he?

Before she had time to answer that Rafe drifted in from the garden.

"All alone, my sweet? Well, that's my luck, isn't it? I've actually missed Miss Cole. Quotation from topical song—'I miss my miss, and my miss misses me.' I wonder if she does. Alternately, 'I kiss my miss, and my miss kisses me.'" He made an excruciating face.

Rafe's Quotations Bring Laugh to Lisle

Lisle found herself laughing.

Rafe's glance flickered over her. She had a momentarily disconcerted feeling that it showed him everything she most wished to hide. But then, after all, it didn't really matter with Rafe. He took everything so lightly that it didn't matter. He even gave her the feeling that what burdened her was too light and inconsiderable to matter to any one. Everything went on the surface with Rafe. What the depths held, or whether there were any depths at all, she did not know.

The flickering glance passed on, touching everything lightly and resting nowhere. Then it came back to her.

"Would you have liked to do this room over for yourself—have everything new?"

She looked at him doubtfully.

"I don't think so. It doesn't belong to me."

She didn't say what she had said to Aimee Mallam, "Dale wouldn't like it." And she didn't say it because there was no need to say it. Rafe's question and her own answer were not on any practical plane, but purely speculative. And that was so well understood between them that Tanfield, with its laws and customs irrevocable as those of the Medes and Persians, and Dale, who was their servant, did not come into it at all.

The fleeting gaze was fixed now. It observed her attentively.

"But wouldn't you like to have a room which did belong to you?"

She said again, "I don't know——" And then, "I couldn't—here."

"But you could have your own part in this room. You haven't added anything, have you? Every one who has had it has added something that was theirs. Why don't you get it new curtains? These will fall to pieces some day."

She shook her head.

"No—they're just right with the room."

She saw him frown, and for a moment the likeness to Alicia Steyne was strong.

"They are right because they are old—is that what you mean? And that makes you a blazing anachronism. Everything in this room is old except us. That's my grandmother's piano—Dale's grandmother, and Alicia's too. The temper comes from her, but she sang like an angel—I can just remember her. And my father brought the carpet back from China—he was in the navy, you know—and she got the curtains to go with it.

"My Great-Great-Aunt Agatha worked that cross-stitch atrocity with the roses, lilies, and shamrocks somewhere about the year of the Indian mutiny. That's her mother in the Empire dress over the mantelpiece—a bit of a beauty in her day. And the bureau was her mother-in-law's. So here you are, surrounded by relics of the past and nothing at all to show for your being here—nothing but Lisle in a green linen dress to show that this is Lisle's own room. Something queer about that, isn't there?"

It was just as if some one had touched her with a cold finger. Her hand went up to her cheek. It was cold, too. She said:

"Don't! You make me feel like a ghost."

He laughed.

"Rather a fascinating thought, don't you think? Not the old ghosts of a past generation coming back to haunt us, but us, all insubstantial and unreal, stepping into their places and haunting them."

He saw her whiten.

"Yes, it feels like that. Tanfield makes you feel like that. That's why I hate it."

There was a sudden change in his face. It had been gently mocking, but now it changed. Something went over it like the shadow that races over water when the clouds are blowing. Color dies and sparkle vanishes. He said in a voice that had hardened:

"Yes, you hate Tanfield—don't you? But I don't know that I should talk about it if I were you. For instance"—he was smiling again and his eyes were bright—"I shouldn't say it to Dale."

Lisle's hands went together in her lap.

"Rafe—you won't tell him!"

He laughed.

"I suppose that means that you haven't told him yourself."

"Of course I haven't. I didn't mean to say it just now—it just slipped out. Rafe, you won't tell him! It would hurt him most dreadfully."

"It might hurt you too, my sweet. Have you thought about that?"

She said, "What do you mean?" and met a look which mocked, demanded, and then mocked again.

"Don't you really know?"

He whistled softly.

"Not very bright, are you, honey-sweet? Not too bright and good for human nature's daily food, as the poet Wordsworth said. 'A perfect woman nobly planned, to warn, to comfort, and command.' Only Dale does the commanding in this house, and I'm doing the warning. That leaves you the sweet feminine rôle of comforter. And if Dale has to let Tanfield go, I don't envy you your job. Have you thought about that?"

Lisle said, "Yes."

"Well, I should go on thinking about it. I gather there isn't much prospect of unloading any more land on to the government. Now if you really put your back into it, I feel you might Delilah old Robson into parting with enough hard cash to keep us going for another generation—peace in our time, you know."

She lifted her eyes and saw that he was not looking at her. He was sitting forward, elbow on knee and chin in hand, staring down at the carpet which his father had brought from China.

"I'm not good enough at pretending," she said. "I've tried, and it's no use—he sees right thru me."

His eyebrows jerked, the kink in them very apparent.

"Not particularly opaque, are you?" His voice rasped on the words.

"You don't know how hard I've tried."

A shoulder jerked too.

"My poor benighted child! Are you as dumb as you sound? You can't try to love, to hate, or to stop loving or hating, or to prevent any one seeing that you love or hate. I expect Robson's got you taped just about as well as Dale has. And that being so, suppose you listen to the gypsy's warning."

"Rafe!"

He leaned forward, pulled her hands apart, and spread them out palm upwards. They were cold and they quivered.

"A dark man and a fair woman—" Lisle made herself laugh.

"That's cards and tea leaves! Hands start with things about the line of life, and the line of heart and all that sort of thing."

His fingers tightened on her wrists. She had the feeling that they were stronger than Dale's for all their slender look.

"Something perfectly frightful happens if you break the psychic spell by talking. There's a dark man and a fair woman, and wedding bells, and a narrow escape—and then—what's this? . . . O, a voyage—a long sea voyage. You're crossing the ocean to the other side of the world."

"I'm not!" said Lisle. She tried to pull her hands away.

"Why did you say that? Do you want me to go away?"

"I thought it might be a good thing if you went."

"To America?"

"A pleasant family reunion."

She said in a breaking voice:

"I haven't got any family."

"Well, I think you'd better—it comes out best that way. Besides, it's in your hand."

She glanced up and met a look she could not interpret. It teased, but there was something else. She said on a quick impulse,

"Isn't there a dark woman in my hand?"

"Do you want a dark woman? All right, you shall have one. She can be one of the reasons for the sea voyage."

Lisle Loses Self-Control Despite a Hard Fight

The color ran flooding into Lisle's face. She pulled and jerked at her hands to get them free.

"Rafe, let me go! I don't like it. Let me go!"

He released her at once. She got up, and stood drawing long, unsteady breaths whilst he leaned back and watched her. She had fought hard for her self-control, but it had slipped.

"Cousins can be very delightful. I think you said that there were cousins. They would have all the charm of the unknown."

She went over to the glass door. There was an effect of wrenching free and then checking—as if an impetus had spent itself. She said without looking round:

"You want me to go?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Least said, soonest mended, my dear."

She did turn round then.

"Why?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"The family reunion—auld lang syne, and hands across the sea."

Lisle's head came up.

"I am to go?"

"That is the idea."

"And Alicia is to stay?"

"That seems to be Alicia's idea."

Lisle turned and went out thru the glass door. There were four steps down on to the terrace. Just before she took the first one she looked over her shoulder.

"I don't think you're very good at telling fortunes," she said.

The events of that evening were to be picked over, sorted out, strained thru a sieve, set aside to clarify, and strained again. At the time they seemed quite ordinary, everyday, and dull.

Dinner was at 8, and over at 8:40. Rafe and Alicia talked. She was brilliant with a new brilliance. Her beauty shone. She wore a green jewel at her breast. Dale drank rather more than usual. Lisle made a pretense of eating. At a quarter to nine when they were having their coffee on the terrace she was called away to see Cissie Cole. Afterward she was questioned and requestioned about this visit of Cissie's, but at the time it was just two girls talking, and both of them unhappy.

Lisle broke the ice by bringing down the green and red checked coat. Even a girl in the throes of an unfortunate love affair can usually extract at any rate a surface pleasure from a new garment. The coat had only been worn three or four times. Cissie put it on, looked at herself in an 18th century mirror crowned with a gold shell and broke into a wavering smile.

The too vivid checks suited her a good deal less than they had suited Lisle. They took the last shade of color from her face and turned the pale blue of her eyes to a watery gray. But all she saw was the coat itself, quite new, and smarter than anything she had ever possessed.

"O, Mrs. Jerningham—it's lovely!"

She took it off carefully and folded it inside out. She wouldn't want to be seen walking away in it, not by that William anyway, but she could slip it on as soon as she got clear of the drive. Some such thought may have been in her mind.

Lisle for her part was thankful for the change in her expression. Cissie had so obviously been sent to see her and was resenting it. But now that reluctant look had gone. She kept one hand on the coat and said:

"It's ever so kind of you. Aunt said you wanted to see me."

There was nothing Lisle wanted less. Her heart was heavy with a sense of Alicia's triumph. She felt beaten and inadequate, but she had to find something to say to Cissie.

"I think she's very unhappy about you," she said.

"She hasn't any call to be! And if she is she's not the only one."

"You mean you are unhappy too?"

Lisle put a hand on her knee.

"Do you think you would like to go away for a little? A friend of mine is looking for a children's maid. She has two little girls, and she wants some one to take and fetch them from school and sew for them. Do you think you would like that?"

Cissie choked into the handkerchief and shook her head.

"You don't think it would make it easier if you went away for a little?"

"And never see him no more?" said Cissie with a sob.

Lisle felt the tears come into her own eyes. Cissie's "never no more" had touched some secret spring of pain.

"What's the good of seeing him?" she said.

"Nothing any good," said Cissie with another sob. She swallowed her tears, stuffed the wet handkerchief inside her dress, and got to her feet, clutching the red and green coat. "It's no good talking about it anyhow, and I must be getting along. You've been very kind, I'm sure—and thank you for the coat."

Lisle went back to the terrace. Only Rafe was there. He looked over the evening paper at her and said in his lightest voice:

"Dale's gone off to a spot of night flying. Alicia's driving him. I'm going for a walk. Why don't you go to bed? You look played out."

She had picked up her coffee cup. She drank from it now. The coffee was cold and bitter.

"Did you know he was going to fly?" she said.

He shook his head.

"A sudden idea. He rang up just now." He went back to his paper. "I think there's going to be a war in Europe, my sweet."

Lisle put down her cup.

"How long is Alicia going to stay here?"

Rafe let the paper fall.

"That sounds as if you thought she had been here too long."

"Hasn't she?"

"Too long—or not long enough." His voice was still light.

Lisle said, "What do you mean by that?" And all of a sudden he was looking at her hard and full.

"Do you want me to say?"

"Yes, please."

His eyebrows went up.

"Have it your own way then. You want Alicia to go. You might have ousted her last week. I don't say you could have, because she's in a very strong position. This is her old home, and it doesn't look too good for the newcomer to try and put her out. Then she has been the unattainable, and is still the unattained. That cuts quite a lot of ice, you know. Still, a week ago you might have had a sporting chance, tho I think I'd always put my own money on Alicia, because she hasn't any scruples, and she's definitely a lot tougher than you are. Anyhow that's neither here nor there. Last week has gone and it won't come back again. Now you'll have to wait till the glamor wears thin, and that may be a good long time. Alicia's a very fascinating woman, and she'd give her eyes to get Dale."

Lisle Feels Deep Hurt After Rafe's Speech

Lisle stood there and listened. His voice was as cold as an east wind. She was so hurt that she felt as if she was bleeding to death, only what was draining away was not blood but hope, and youth, and love. She heard him say:

"It may last a good long time, but it won't last forever. You don't want to stay and watch it going on, do you?"

He got up and came to her.

"Did you ask my advice, my sweet? Never mind, here it is. Europe's going to be a fairly unpleasant place for the next few months. If I were you I'd go while the going's good. Get along out to the United States. If Dale wants you he'll come after you, and if he doesn't, well, it's quite a handy country to get a divorce in."

She stood quite still and looked at him, face colorless, eyes dark and wide. After a moment she said in a quivering voice:

"Why do you all hate me? Why do you want me to go?"

His hands came down on her shoulders.

"Isn't hate a good enough reason in itself? Why, what more do you want? Isn't hate enough? Nasty explosive stuff, you know—liable to go off and blow us all sky high. Don't you know when you're not wanted, my dear? Better clear out while you can."

She stepped back with a blind, shrinking look. His hands fell from her shoulders. She said:

"Do you hate me? Like that?"

Rafe Jerningham laughed.

"O, like the devil, my dear!" he said, and ran down the terrace steps and across the lawn.

WORLD'S GREATEST STORIES

AFTER LUNCHEON ON FRIDAY

By Lois Montross

(Copyright: 1941: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

It was like a prince offering noblesse oblige to a peasant. For a moment the dining room was absolutely silent.

HER second cousin, Henry, of all people, telephoned and asked to take her to luncheon. He seemed surprised when she accepted because Laurie seldom bothered to see him. She was young enough to feel that because he was wealthy and in the banking business Henry J. Shelford was stodgy and perhaps even smug.

All the same she had a pleasant feeling as she saw him enter the crowded hotel lobby and walk toward her with his unhurried, confident step. She noticed a glint of gray at his temples and the first suggestion of heaviness about his conservatively dressed figure.

She, herself, was aware of looking younger and gayer and prettier than he had probably ever seen her. These last weeks she had been glowing with a luminous beauty which startled her own mirror and made people look at her twice wherever she went.

"Well, well!" he said, taking her hand and giving his approval to her trim violet suit and chartreuse gloves and hat. "Spring incarnate, Laurie. Very nice. Very nice indeed."

He would say something like that, she thought with amusement. Spring incarnate, O dear!

The other people around them were loudly chattering a clipped, bold language which poor Henry could never understand. They were the celebrities at the luncheon hour in this small New York hotel. But altho Henry was an alien here she noticed that the head waiter bowed to him with instinctive deference.

Laurie Discovers Vance and Wife at Luncheon

While Henry studied the menu she looked intently all around the room until she discovered Vance with his wife, Georgia. It was well known that he brought her here for luncheon every Friday and that otherwise their social engagements were seldom together. And people remarked how grave and dutiful Vance appeared lunching with Georgia. You would have thought they were business acquaintances in solemn conference. It gave Laurie a peculiar sickish feeling, part anguish and part fascination, to see them together. She could not resist coming here on Fridays—simply to watch Vance across the room, so different, so restrained and absorbed. This evening Laurie would say casually to Vance: "Saw you lunching today." And as always he would laugh and change the subject, leaving her puzzled and curious about Georgia. Yet surely she had every right to know . . .

"I've asked three times," said Henry, "if you'll try the brook trout. So I have ordered it anyway, with new potatoes and peas. . . . There is a dry Martini at your elbow."

"O, nice," she said, smiling hastily.

Henry leaned back against the lounge and smiled, too, in an odd way. It was not his usual slow and honest smile, but secretive, rather, as if he were sadly amused by the world's irony. It made Laurie uncomfortable. She knew he had seen her watching Vance Devlin and his wife and she wondered what her face might have betrayed. She remembered the worldly character in Vance's latest play who remarked: "There are two kinds of women—those who wear hearts on their sleeves and souls in their eyes . . . and clever women." But she thought he should have added, "And women like Georgia." For certainly she didn't belong to either group.

"Did you like 'Torn Cobweb'?" Laurie asked Henry. She was so conscious of Vance being here in the same room that she had to bring him into the conversation somehow, anyhow. She remembered, too, that Henry had known Vance and Georgia long ago, altho naturally his dull business life had made him a stranger to Vance's exciting genius. Henry was the kind of person who causes brilliant people to say: "Old friend of mine! A prince! I must see him!" And then they neglect to see him.

"Yes, I liked 'Torn Cobweb,'" said Henry. Really he was unique. No other New York playgoer could have managed to remark on the comedy without abuse or glorification.

"Can't you modify your verbs?" asked Laurie. "Did you like it 'immensely' or 'rather' or 'terribly' or 'somewhat'?"

"It is a good play," he said, stubbornly mild. "It is well constructed. Vance Devlin always acts impeccably in one of his own plays."

"Impeccably!" she said. "That's superunderstatement for sheer genius, isn't it?"

Henry started to eat brook trout. "No such thing as sheer genius," he remarked. "If you could see thru it, it wouldn't be genius."

She thought that over, undecided as to whether it was stupid or astute. "More than meets the eye—all done with mirrors, Henry?"

"Exactly," he said.

Laurie noticed that two women at the next table were looking at Vance Devlin and his wife. She heard one of them murmur, "How on earth do you explain it? Why did he ever marry her in the first place?" The other woman shook her head: "They say it's 15 years. And he's so marvelous. Strange!" When they rose and went out Henry asked:

"Did you hear that, Laurie?"

"I've heard it a hundred times." She looked across the room again, feeling free now to observe Georgia and Vance quite openly. She had a view of his fine, slim back, his dark, close-cropped head inclined slightly toward his wife.

This evening Laurie would sit with Vance and his words would flare like rockets, leaping with golden sparks above everything in the world—illuminating dull or dark spots, transforming the commonplace into magic. . . . But O, Vance, Vance! Since we love each other why do you never say anything about Georgia! Surely I have a right to know . . .

He was rising now, helping Georgia with her wrap. He looked especially grave and slim and youthful as he put the short fur jacket around Georgia's wide shoulders. She was a big woman who should not have worn a short fur jacket. The little black hat cocked on one side of her head was perhaps a good French model, but it lost all smartness contrasted with Georgia's indeterminate gray-brown coiffure. Awkwardly she dropped a glove which the waiter hastened to pick up; she stopped to smile and to thank him so heartily that he and Vance both looked embarrassed. Then she retreated from the dining room with firm and self-conscious dignity; her skirt was a little too long, her face all at once too ruddy. Vance followed, glancing neither to the right nor the left. It was like a prince offering "noblesse oblige" to a peasant. For a moment the dining room was absolutely silent.

Gracefully Laurie drew on her gloves. "Shall we go?"

"Yes," said Henry. "There's no reason now for staying any longer." She glanced at him quickly, but his face was inscrutable. When they were out in the street—out in the exaggerated, unreal sunlight—he asked: "If you're walking home may I go along?"

Dimly she heard Henry's voice, "Isn't it?"

"Isn't it what?"

"Amusing." He had paused by one of the most vivacious windows on Fifth avenue, fantastic with cellophane birds nesting in trees carved out of pink rubber sponge. Daisies and buttercups of cockleshells bloomed around a lady created from blonde hemp. "See that big spider," he said. "Its legs are made from old-fashioned screen door springs."

Laurie shook her head impatiently. "Screen door springs! Don't you see the frock? The name of it?"

He adjusted his thick-lensed glasses and read the words on a porringer which the hemp lady was languidly holding. "'Torn Cobweb,'" said Henry.

"I shall have it!" cried Laurie, clapping her hands, childishly excited.

He frowned. "It will be awfully expensive."

"I don't care! Ricky and I are the daughters of a trust fund. You must remember that, since it's your own bank which mothers and fathers us."

"But Ricky works sometimes."

"O, Ricky! Her work is always mischief which the devil finds for idle hands to do."

"I will bet," said Henry, "that you are quoting Vance Devlin."

"Then you should praise my good memory," she said sharply. "Don't be stuffy. I am going to have the frock. Are you coming in?"

She hoped he would go away. But he followed her amiably into the store. . . . The gown was of silken beige net, frosted with silvery cobwebs. The French saleswoman exclaimed with genuine admiration, "It is made for you alone! You are stunning in it! That is so much better than if it were stunning on you. You understand what I mean . . ." She sighed. "Have you seen the play?"

"Only half a dozen times," said Laurie, turning and turning before the mirrors, looking at herself with the bewitched gaze of a child staring into a kaleidoscope.

"O! For some reason I thought you weren't a New Yorker. Maybe because you are so fresh and natural. Most of them seem so hard—they resemble their own jewels. . . . Not Madame Devlin. She was here yesterday. Do you know her?"

Laurie shook her head, listening eagerly, her eyes cannily narrowed.

"Poor lady!" said the French woman. "She looked at this gown. She is far from svelte. I was in terror that she might buy it. But she only touched it, examined it very closely, and then she smiled and went out without another word. . . . They say he is most charming. Too bad his wife is pas distinguée. But they say he is extremely devoted. . . . Where shall I send the gown, mademoiselle?"

"I shall take it," said Laurie. "I shall wear it this evening."

The woman's pale eyes lighted with a vicarious triumph. "What a conquest you will make!"

Henry carried the shiny white and gold box to the door of Laurie's apartment and accepted her half-hearted invitation to come in. "The maid's out," she said. "Mix something or other while I throw on a house coat. Ricky started on a new job today—something very silly to do with a newspaper, I think. . . ." Suddenly she stopped her own aimless chatter thinking, "I sound too excited, too overbright. He knows something. . . . I must calm down. O, why is he here, of all people! Old moralist! As Vance said of him, 'Afraid to have his cake, let alone eat it.'"

Laurie Pleased at Visit from Henry

In her bedroom she opened the box and shook out the lovely gown; she put it to sleep on her own bed, its skirt billowing regally, as if it were a princess . . .

"Have I been a long time?" she asked Henry.

"For throwing on a house coat, yes," he said. "But for getting into that gold and green thing, no." She was pleased. She began to be glad he was here—so comfortable and kind, sitting erect on the Biedermeier sofa, regarding her with the remote flattery of nearsighted eyes. He had shaken up an innocuous cocktail, colored rose with grenadine; yet it was cold and deliciously tart.

They touched glasses. He tasted the cocktail, put it carefully down on the glass coffee table, and said: "Seeing Vance today reminds me of so many things. You know we were kids together in Grackleton, Illinois."

She nodded. "I know. What was he like then?"

NEXT SUNDAY—"SEPTEMBER 14-MARCH 2," A SHORT STORY BY INEZ HAYNES IRWIN

AFTER LUNCHEON ON FRIDAY

"A no-good young hellion."

"And you," she said gently, "were a nice boy? The banker's son?"

"That's right. I wore the robes of Euclid and Cicero and thick-lensed glasses. . . . Vance's father ran the grain elevator. Vance had one of the first automobiles in town. I rode a wheel. We called them wheels then."

"Dear Henry. I can just see you—thick-lensed glasses and schoolbook in the bicycle rack."

He agreed. "A prig on a bicycle. Vance called me that. He was always witty. I remember the day we had the new substitute in high school. All four grades were in one room, it was so small. The principal had taken ill and we had the substitute for the rest of the year. The morning she came in Vance felt very witty. She was a large, handsome girl—capable hands, not to say generous feet. Vance started to sing out loud:

"And her shoes were Number Nine!
"Herring boxes without topses,
"Sandals were for Clementine."

"That was cruel, I suppose," said Laurie. "But Vance has always despised dull people. He says that all dull people are dishonest."

"Very likely," said Henry. "However Miss Urweider wasn't dull. She flushed, I admit—but she was always quickly high colored. Then she said to the rest of the school room, 'Let's serenade Mr. Devlin. He likes music.' And she made us all stand up and sing to Vance for about an hour—old favorites like 'The Vacant Chair' and 'Johnny's So Long at the Fair' and 'Good Night, Ladies' and 'In the Gloaming.' He was furious. He hated her. But she had him in hand for a while."

"Nasty old maid," said Laurie.

"Yes. She was just 20 and thru normal college. Vance was 18, and taking his senior year for the second time. Their backgrounds were so different. Vance's father was an ignorant rake—Vance's mother died in childbirth. . . . Two of the most intelligent people I have ever known were Dr. Urweider and his wife. And Miss Urweider gave us our first love of music, of good books, of humor, of acting, our first wish for travel. The old principal had made everything so bone-dry that we hated all culture. We didn't know we were dying of thirst until that beautiful substitute came. And she was so beautiful! . . . Vance was the only one she found difficult. I remember staying after school—it was my own choice because I wanted her advice on some Latin composition."

"The good boy, the nice boy, the banker's son!"

Henry Tells Vance's Life as a Youth

"Exactly. And Vance was staying, too. She wanted to know why he had flatly refused to take part in the senior play. He had a fine voice and he could act or imitate anybody. She called him up to the desk first. He had none of the shyness or awkwardness which should make up the major chord of youth. He was always arrogant and poised. She said:

"What do you plan to do when you're thru high school, Vance?"

"He said: 'Run a grain elevator like my dad and later a bucket shop in Chicago.'

"She said, 'I know you like to gamble. But did you ever think of gambling with your own talents? Your voice, your ability to act? Why don't you come out for the senior play? I won't enjoy directing it unless you take the part of Richard.'

"He said: 'I see enough of you in school. After school hours I do what I please.' Then he put on his cap and walked out.

"I know she had forgotten all about me. Because she put her face down on the desk and began to cry. She didn't put her face in her arms but right down against the desk, and I could see the tears running along her cheeks and melting into the dark green blotter. I was petrified. Somehow I had thought of her as a goddess, beyond tears and pain. Now I realize that she was a kid, hurt and frightened by cruelty.

"Just why he happened to come back I don't know. He sauntered in and rummaged in his desk—she didn't lift her head at all. I suppose she didn't hear his sneakers. He looked at her for a long time and then he went out again. . . . The next day he signed up for the senior play. Her direction was amazing and Vance was suddenly able to follow along, docile and quiet. It was the best amateur performance I ever saw.

"After he was graduated they 'went together' a few months. Then, to my amazement, Vance and Georgia were married."

Laurie rose. "You mean . . . Georgia was——?"

"Of course, my dear."

She picked up the empty cocktail shaker. "If you'd like to mix another I think I'll wander back and telephone to Ricky. It's strange she hasn't come yet."

In the bedroom she sat rigidly in front of her dressing table mirror. No, my face doesn't tell a thing, she whispered to herself with stiff lips. Henry can't guess, he doesn't know—he's simply rambling along to please himself. He has no idea I wanted to hear all this. I must go back now and listen to the rest. . . . He will tell a great deal more. If only my face will stay fresh and unconcerned. It looks very fresh now. . . . Why did he say Georgia was beautiful?

Laurie went back to the drawing room and said gaily, "It's a fascinating story. What happened then?"

Henry went on: "Vance was still able to follow along—docile and quick. Georgia has privately directed every performance he has given. She has practically written most of his plays, altho they come out under his name. She has taught him how to sing and how to play those slight compositions on the piano."

"But why—why?"

"Because some women are creative. She blew the breath of life into a dull lump of clay. She is still doing it. You know that she lunches with him every Friday afternoon. Well, every Friday afternoon she tells him what to do; whom to see and what to say. She is his soul. Without her he would be nothing. She is a flame. She is one of the most wonderful women in the world."

He walked over to the mantelpiece and stood there with his back to her, snapping his cigaret case open and shut. "Remember those women at luncheon—'How on earth do you explain it? Why did he ever marry her in the first place?' It amuses me that women all over the country wonder what Vance sees in Georgia."

Laurie realized with shame and fright that Henry had told her all this deliberately. She wanted to fight against his quiet, sure knowledge but she was powerless. She was clad in transparent folly.

He did not look at her now because he pitied her—he must have been concerned about her affair with Vance for a long time. At last today he had forced himself to tell her the truth. But she had rather not have known the truth—she was without a weapon now.

Henry added slowly: "You know he has had many affairs with many women—and each one has thought it would be easy to take him away from Georgia. . . ."

She didn't speak, gallantly managing to control her anger and humiliation. When at last he turned around she was sure her face was composed. She asked, "Do you see her now? I mean, is she still as wonderful as ever?"

He nodded. "I see her now and then. She can still make me feel like Siegfried — not like a good, stodgy banker at all." He glanced at his watch. "My dear, I have overstayed. I know you must want to be dressing for dinner." After a few more amiable remarks he left her; he left her casually as if he were unaware of what he had ruined.

Laurie remained in the drawing room, staring at herself in a tall mirror. She thought she appeared slight and pale and cheap. Not a big peasant girl with strong arms. Not a great person who could forget herself long enough to become a man's soul. Not even a woman who could put her high colored cheek flatly against a desk and cry. If Laurie cried, as she longed to now, she would have to lie on a bed with pillows. She felt a bitter resentment toward the kind of pioneer background that produces a woman like Georgia — invulnerable because of natural strength and lack of vanity. She, Laurie, had spent all her life grooming her plumage for men. Now it seemed that was not enough. They admired her beauty and grace but they hungered for more, far more.

Out of the confusion of her thoughts one bit of clarity emerged. She must not see Vance again. He had no intention of leaving Georgia and probably had never dreamed that Laurie expected to marry him eventually. Now she knew why he had never discussed his wife—where Georgia stood was sanctuary.

It was about 6 o'clock, and she knew he did not like to be disturbed at this hour when he had an evening performance. But she thought grimly that she could well disturb him for one last time.

If he had sounded cross that would have made things easier. But he was gentle and gay, speaking in the magical voice that always made her heart turn over.

"You looked enchanting today," he said. "Like a Parma violet growing under the shadow of a mushroom."

"Mushroom?" she said dully.

"You were lunching with a mushroom, sweet. Not an edible mushroom, or even edifying. And why you must do such things I don't know." [Does he tease Georgia about Henry? she wondered. Probably not, for apparently the peasant can do no wrong.]

"Where shall we meet tonight?" he asked. It was difficult to find new, obscure places to meet. "Not last week's bar. Somebody mentioned seeing us there. Have you any suggestion, Laurie? How about Labrozzi's? I'm sure Papa Labrozzi figures me as a small time gangster meeting his moll. What is the matter? I'm tired of doing a monolog. There's nothing I like less than a block of silence freezing the other end of the wire."

"I can't see you tonight," she said, very low.

"Certainly you can. At Labrozzi's at 11:45."

"No, Vance, I am sick of meeting you here and there—just as if I really were a gangster's moll. I shan't see you any more. I've decided. I believe I'll go away. Yes, I am going away tomorrow."

"You are a precious but very silly child," he said gently. "I will be at Labrozzi's and you will tell me all about this strange mood."

"Mood!" she said, but he only replied, "Good-by, darling," and hung up the receiver.

She realized what this good-by meant. She would not hear his voice or feel his arms and lips again. And yet it was not until the clock had safely passed 11:45 that she was quite sure she would not meet him at Labrozzi's. In the meantime she had busily packed a trunk and boxes, all the while half doubting her own decision to go away. An incoherent telegram from Ricky had come. She was in Philadelphia and was driving back late with a news photographer. Laurie would have liked Ricky's warm companionship, and yet it was better she was not here. She had never been in love.

Laurie Wins Fight Against Own Weakness

Laurie sat down to rest. She drank some black coffee and wondered where she would go tomorrow. To the summer place up in Vermont? Neither she nor Ricky had been there for years. Maybe Ricky would give up this silly newspaper hobby and come along too. There was some stipulation in the will about the Vermont place. Being the daughters of a trust fund, Ricky and Laurie had stipulations and stipends instead of punishments and rewards.

She wouldn't consult Henry, however. He would understand why she was going and make everything simple for her at the bank.

Now the clock was around past midnight. She had won against her own weakness. There was no danger now. Vance had never waited 15 minutes for a woman in his life.

She took up a mystery novel and looked at the pages, turning them at intervals as if she had grasped their meaning. Every sentence was punctuated by her own absorbing, repetitive thoughts. "This is a tough problem to solve," said the commissioner. "It's an incredible murder. . . ." What is Vance doing now? Will he believe I am really thru? . . . "It's incredible," said the other thoughtfully, "but I'll wager that piece of green Mungo will solve it." Will he find out from Henry where I have gone? Will he follow me up to Vermont? If he does, what then? No woman could withstand Vance if he really wanted her. At least, none of the women I know.

Slowly, drearily, the clock marched on to 1. At least I have gotten thru seven hours of this pain, she thought. Then there will be weeks and more weeks and some day I will wake up and wonder why I was unhappy.

She meant to stay up until Ricky came and tell her everything. She had heard that the more you talk about grief the easier it is healed. In fact, she had known women who were healed before they finished describing the symptoms. So she was annoyed when the doorbell rang, for that was the warning. "Don't wander out in your stepins or what-have-you. Somebody's with me." It would undoubtedly be the newspaper photographer and he would want to drink and stay till all hours.

Laurie hoped that Ricky had merely forgotten her key. When she saw Vance she couldn't say a word. She stood there looking at him, feeling weak all over. He walked past her into the drawing room and sat down on the love seat. Something about his walk and his eyes made her wonder if he was drunk. She shut the door and went to stand beside him. She noticed everything clear about him as if for the first instead of the last time. He was boyishly slight, and his face was thin with high cheek bones; his dark, close cropped head was shaped for the touch of a woman's fingers. His strong, white hands were more expressive than most people's eyes.

But just now he looked haggard, and for the first time older than his 34 years. It made her sick to think she had done this to him and yet she felt a natural surge of relief and triumph.

"How long?"

"I waited at Labrozzi's," he said.

"A couple of years, I think. This evening has been a century. O, all of the dark ages."

"I know, Vance."

"Then I went home and it broke over me all at once. I felt as if I were drowning. And so I had to come here. Forgive me for coming, Laurie. You don't really mind seeing me again?"

She put her hands behind her back to keep from stroking his hair. "I did mean what I said. I do mean it. If I have to keep on meeting you in that cheap, clandestine way. But if—"

He interrupted with a gesture of impatience.

"That doesn't matter now. Let's not talk about that now."

"But we must talk about it!" she cried.

He covered his eyes with a weary, defeated hand. "Please be kind and listen. You are the only kind person I know. Everybody else will say I deserve it. Listen tonight, and then I will never bother you again. Georgia is leaving me."

She sat down beside him very carefully and slowly. It was true then. She didn't matter at all. He was unaware of her except that she was kind and warm and would listen. She summoned all the strength she had, thinking pitifully, "Now I am being a great, strong woman too, but of course he will never know it."

"Please tell me what happened," she said gently.

He took her hand and clung to it as a person in unbearable pain will hold it. "Nothing happened, really. When I came home she told me very quietly that she had decided to leave me. She said, 'I am tired, Vance. I have done all I can and now I am tired.'"

"You can persuade her not to go. You must persuade her. She will be lonely and lost without you. She can't leave you if you want her to stay."

Vance Hopeless of Winning Georgia Back

He shook his head, hopelessly. His face was like a room in which the candles have flickered out. "She isn't a woman who weeps and changes her decisions. I saw her cry only once—when she was 20. . . ."

All her tears in that one moment, thought Laurie. And after that, peace and strength. Young, high colored cheek against a flat desk and a willful boy watching her—changing his whole plan and purpose because of her passionate tears.

"She has done all she could and now she is tired," said Vance with an inflexible voice. "She is going to marry Henry Shelford."

Laurie gasped. "But no! How could she—? Are you mad? I can't understand!"

"Of course you can't understand," Vance said irritably. "She is tired. Henry is a very restful person, being stupid. And all stupid people are dishonest."

"I would put it the other way around," said Laurie. She could see Henry entering the hotel lobby with his unhurried, confident step; and then his smile as if he were amused by the world's irony, and she could hear his exalted voice, "Georgia can still make me feel like Siegfried."

Vance talked a great deal more but Laurie did not listen much. Now that she was a confidante rather than a woman she grew drowsy. She felt a great pity for him as he went out at last. She remembered vaguely that pity is love's tombstone. [Yes, that was from the third act of "Torn Cobweb."]

She went back to her bedroom. The gown was still lying there, as if it were a sleeping princess. She folded it deftly to fit the shiny white and gold box. "Where is the sales slip?" she wondered. "It must be returned tomorrow."

And his words would flare like rockets, leaping with golden sparks above everything in the world.

IN THE BALANCE

She saw no more than she had to see, and turned and came away.

What Has Gone Before

Lisle Jerningham, bride of six months, runs away from a house party when she overhears gossip that her husband, Dale, killed Lydia, his first wife, for her money and was attempting to kill Lisle when she almost drowned recently. Lisle confesses what she heard to Miss Maud Silver, a private investigator she meets on the train, and Miss Silver gives Lisle a business card in case she should ever need help. Dale and Lisle live at Tanfield, the Jerningham estate, that has been in the family for 500 years. Lisle wants to sell Tanfield, for she feels the upkeep is too great, but Dale loves the place so much he tries to make Lisle give him money to run it. Lisle cannot bring herself to like Tanfield, as the place is so gloomy and her life there with Dale and his cousins, Alicia and Rafe, is difficult. Alicia, in love with Dale, openly hates Lisle and derides her when Dale insists that Lisle get the steering gear of her car fixed before going back home after he drives her car to the station. Infuriated with Alicia, Lisle lets her out at the garage and doesn't wait to check her own steering gear as Dale ordered. On the way back home Lisle narrowly escapes death as she jumps from her car just before it crashes. Suspicion falls on Pell, a mechanic who has been dismissed because of an affair with a local girl, Cissie Cole, who did not know he was married.

INSTALMENT V.

ALICIA balanced the crystal and blew smoke at it.

"Elusive little devil, isn't he?" she said. "Reminds me of the Cheshire Cat's grin."

"Keep it if you like," said Dale. "Lisle doesn't care about it."

Alicia looked at him steadily for a moment. Then she laughed and looked away.

"Do you know, I rather like having my presents chosen for me, not for somebody else. And if you're doing any choosing, I've no objection to diamonds. Hi, Lisle—catch!"

The crystal sparkled in the air. Rafe reached up, caught it deftly, and put it back in Lisle's lap. But before she could touch it Dale got up and came over to her.

"You don't like it?"

"I—Dale——"

"It's a bit sinister," said Rafe.

Alicia laughed. Lisle, tongue-tied and distressed, put out a hand toward her husband.

"Dale—you've got it all wrong. I—it was sweet of you to get it for me—please——"

There was a moment of discomfort and strain. The dark color came up into Dale's face, as it did when he was angry. But before he or any one else could speak one of the men servants came into the group. Lisle looked at him with relief.

"What is it, William?"

"If you please, madam, it's Miss Cole. She says could you see her for a moment?"

Dale went back to his chair.

"Miss Cole from the postoffice?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"I wonder what she wants. You'd better go, Lisle."

Lisle got up and went.

She felt as much in disgrace and as glad to escape as if she had been 7 years old instead of 22. She held the crystal in her hand. Alicia's high, floating laugh followed her across the lawn.

The one room that Lisle really liked in the big house was her own sitting room. It was small, and everything in it was old—a bureau of bleached mahogany, a highback couch, a bookcase, a little upright piano with flutings of ash green silk, and a fretwork scroll which displayed the signs of the treble clef on the one hand and the bass on the other. There were three windows looking to the lawn, the cedar, and the sea.

Lisle came in thru the middle one, which was a door, and Miss Cole rose from the edge of an upright chair and advanced to meet her. Nobody would have taken her for Cissie Cole's aunt. Where Cissie was long, limp, and straw-colored, Miss Cole was small, plump, and brisk. Her eyes were as bright and brown as a bird's. She had a high, fixed color and a darting way with her head. She began to speak at once, all in a hurry, and as she spoke she got out a handkerchief and dabbed her face and neck.

"How do you do, Mrs. Jerningham? Very hot today, I'm sure, isn't it? And I do hope you'll pardon me bringing you in from the garden, and a lovely tree to sit under and all, and the breeze from the sea—most enjoyable, I'm sure. You wouldn't hardly credit how hot it is in the village, but there—we get the shelter in the winter, so where you lose one way you gain the other, and I'm sure we've all got something to be thankful for if we take the trouble to look for it."

Lisle said, "O, yes"—and "Won't you sit down?"

Miss Cole sat down on a small Victorian chair worked in cross-stitch with a pattern of roses, thistles, and shamrocks. The groundwork had once been purple, but was now gray. A little dull red still lingered about the petals of the full-blown rose, but the shamrock and the thistle were mere wraiths. Miss Cole laid a bright brown handbag on the carpet beside her, smoothed down the skirt of her best dress, a rather lively blue artificial silk, and broke into polite inquiry.

"I hope you're none the worse, Mrs. Jerningham. I'm sure I'm as pleased to find you up and about. I'm not one to go to bed myself. You must have had a shocking turn with the car all smashed to bits like it was, and next door to a miracle you've not been hurt, so it stands to reason it must have been a shock and no saying when it'll come out. My own sister-in-law's sister had a fright with a tramp some time in December, and six months to the day she had to have two good back teeth out, and right or wrong, that's what she put it down to, because all her family had wonderful good teeth, and as she said to me herself, 'Why should I lose mine, if it wasn't for me having a shock?' And I'm sure we must all hope you won't have any effects like that."

Lisle smiled at her.

"O, I'm sure I shan't."

"Nobody can't be sure," said Miss Cole briskly. "And of course a shock it's bound to have been. All broken up the steering was, so they say, but of course what every one wants to know is what call had it go to break? Things don't break of themselves—that's what every one says, and begging your pardon, I'm sure, for repeating it. There's some that think maybe Pell might know more about it than he's any right to——"

"Miss Cole!"

Miss Cole darted her head like a bird pecking at a worm. She wore a shiny black hat with a bunch of bright blue cherries at the side. Every time she made one of her quick movements they rattled on the brim like hail.

"I'm sure I beg your pardon, Mrs. Jerningham, but you can't stop people passing remarks—and when it's an accident right there in the village and that Pell in the bar of the Green Man no more than a week ago letting on that those that went against him never had no luck after—Tom Crisp heard him with his own ears. 'No one never did me down and got away with it'—that's what he said, and, 'Mark my words, there's some that'll get what's coming to them, no matter what high horses they're riding now.' And I'm sure I beg your pardon for repeating such language, but I thought Mr. Jerningham ought to know."

"I thought Pell had gone away," said Lisle.

Lisle Helpless to Change Conversation

Miss Cole darted again.

"That Pell? Not he! He's one of those that'll hang about as long as there's any mischief to be done—and boasting how he can get a job as easy as kiss your hand!"

Lisle felt an uneasy distaste. She wanted to change the conversation, but found herself helpless. Miss Cole had come here determined to talk about Pell, and talk about him she would. Almost without her own volition Lisle found herself asking the question which Miss Cole intended her to ask.

"Has he got a job?"

"Up at the aerodrome," said Miss Cole portentously. "And in the Green Man every night, talking big about the money he gets, and what a lot they think of him up there." She dabbed at the beads of sweat on her forehead and chin. "And if that was all, he'd be welcome and none of my business—and I'm sure no one can say I've ever been one to push myself into other people's affairs. But there it is and you can't get from it. Cissie's my niece and a poor orphan girl without a father or a mother to stand for her. So if I don't look out for Cissie there's no one else will, and she's not one to look out for herself."

"Is Pell annoying her?" said Lisle.

Miss Cole bridled.

"If he annoyed her, I wouldn't be worrying. He don't let her alone, and it's got so she don't want to be let alone."

Lisle said, "I'm sorry."

"She'll be sorry herself when it's too late," said Miss Cole with a dart. "And how she can—a good girl like Cissie—brought up the way I brought her up! I'll say this for her, if she'd known he was married from the first of it, she'd never have looked his way, but it wasn't but a week ago it come out, as you know. And there she sits and cries and says she's got herself so fond of him she don't know what to do.

"That's when I came up to see Mr. Jerningham—and most kind he was, I'm sure—a real feeling heart, and might have been the girl's father. And 'Out he goes!' he said, and went straight off and had it out with him. And what I've come up about now is whether Mr. Jerningham could get him out of the aerodrome, and I didn't like to trouble him after he'd been so kind and all, but I thought perhaps if you would say a word——"

Lisle blenched.

"I don't think I could."

It wouldn't be any use. Dale wouldn't. He'd say it wasn't his business—and it wasn't.

Miss Cole fixed her with a bright, persuasive gaze.

"If you would just mention it. And of course I know what gentlemen are—they take ideas, and then it's no good going on, because it only puts their backs up, but Mr. Jerningham's always been so kind, so perhaps if you could bring it in just in the way of talk——"

"You never know," said Miss Cole brightly. "And I won't keep you, Mrs. Jerningham, but if you could say a word to Cissie yourself I'm sure she'd think the world of it."

Lisle said "O——," and then, "Would she?" in a doubtful tone. She didn't feel old enough or wise enough to give advice to Cissie Cole. And what could she say to her? . . . "You've lost your heart to the wrong man. Take it back again. Don't be sorry any more, because he isn't worth it. Save what you can while there is still something to be saved." She might say these things. But would Cissie listen, or would it help her if she did? . . . Faint and far away something whispered, "You might say those things to yourself." It stabbed right thru her. She said:

"Is she very unhappy?"

"Cries herself sick," said Miss Cole, for once succinct.

Lisle put a hand up to her cheek. It was a gesture which spoke distress.

"But would she mind? I shouldn't like——"

Miss Cole shook an emphatic head.

"She thinks the world of you. There's no one she'd listen to more than what she would to you. I'm sure I was ashamed to think she'd come crying to you the way she did about that Pell, but she couldn't say enough about your kindness, and she took notice of what you said, because she told me some of it. You know how it is, Mrs. Jerningham, if a girl's got a fancy for any one she'll listen to them, and if she hasn't she won't—and I'm sure Cissie thinks the world of you, as I said before."

Lisle Promises a Gift for Cissie

Lisle got up. If she didn't say she would see Cissie, Miss Cole would go on talking until she did. It would really be easier to talk to Cissie than to go on talking to Miss Cole. And she could give Cissie her green checked coat. That was a really splendid idea. It would cheer Cissie up, and it would get rid of the coat. Every time she saw it in her cupboard she could hear Alicia say, "That ghastly coat!" But Cissie would love it.

She said quickly, "If Cissie could come up this evening, I could see her. Tell her I've got something for her."

Miss Cole got up too. She picked up her brown handbag, put away her handkerchief, and shook hands.

"It's very kind of you, I'm sure," she said.

When Miss Cole had gone Lisle stood at the glass door and looked out. The group on the lawn had broken up. The chairs were empty. The shadow of the cedar covered them. If she had to speak to Dale about Pell she wanted to get it over. If he had come in from the garden he might be in the study. Nobody ever studied there, but it was by custom and inheritance Dale's own room. Everything at Tanfield was like that. Lisle's little sitting room was not hers because she liked it, but because the mistress of Tanfield had always had that room. Her great, gloomy bedroom was hers for the same reason. If she had wanted another room she would have wanted it in vain.

She came to the study by way of the gun room next door. Afterward she wondered why she had not gone straight to the study door. If she had, things might have been different. But think as she would, she could get

TRIPS—VACATIONS

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

TOURS—CRUISES

2 Miles a Day Is Speed of This Mountain Trip

[This is the fourth of a series of stories on the progress of an expedition thru North and South America. Mr. Richardson, a Detroit newspaper man, and two companions are attempting to go by auto all the way from this country to the Strait of Magellan—a feat never accomplished to date.]

By Sullivan C. Richardson.

Beating by more than two weeks any previous record for automobile crossing of these southern Mexico mountains, this expedition reached Tehuantepec after covering the 50 odd miles of roadless canyons and hillsides in 25 days. It is the first of four stretches between Detroit and the southern tip of South America—ultimate destination of the expedition—where, we were told by reliable road authorities, we might not be able to go, even with extra men to help us.

TEHUANTEPEC, OAXACA, MEXICO.

No wheeled traffic of any kind passes thru these mountains. Caravans of burros, accompanied by tattered natives in big hats, with black sandaled feet and 22 inch machetes, and hour-glass shaped water gourds slung across one shoulder, constitute the only traffic.

Slightly more than two miles a day for 25 days. Fifteen men, one water burro, one tortilla burro, steel bars, shovels, picks, sledge hammers, 300 feet of rope threaded into block and tackle, and 50 feet of 1 inch rope for straight pulls. Countless times the car was dragged up grades by the men and the ropes. Dozens of times the half ton of equipment was carried by the men on their backs up mountain sides which could not have been negotiated by the loaded car under any circumstance.

• • •

Many times the car was off the dugways with one or more wheels at a time, trying to make turns much too short for 1941 cars with big bodies and long wheel bases. An equal number of times our sedan was dragged back to safety by the men and the block and tackle. Two heavy duty, six-ply rear tires have been burned and torn almost to complete uselessness in 50 miles of spinning on the sharp rocks and boulders of steep turns.

The worst day for mileage was fourtenths of a mile, climbing the mountain above Nejapa. The hardest day was pulling up out of Rio Hondo [Deep river] near the middle of the stretch. Then it took six hours, fourteen hitches with the block and tackle, and several times that number of straight pulls by the men on the ropes to climb the nine sharp bends of the burro trail which twisted up from the water. The total distance was little more than a quarter of a mile. Our speedometer showed a full mile. The difference was made up in slippage of spinning rear wheels leaving a trail of black burned rubber on the bends.

• • •

That is the brief story of this crossing—the third time the feat has ever been accomplished. Both other times the cars were lighter and higher and had shorter wheel bases and a much shorter turning radius.

The tightest spot was a narrow dugway turn on the mountainside up from Las Minas, this sire of San Juan Garcia. The burro trail made a short bend into the hillside in crossing a little drainage arroyo, and a boulder almost as large as the car had rolled down and blocked at least one-third of the dugway. It was impossible to move it with our equipment. We had no blasting powder. We started to work with sledges and by 10 o'clock the following morning we had about 14 inches broken off the jutting side. We measured the distance from the rock to the outside of the dugway and had 3 inches to spare, but that put the outside wheels into the soft dirt on the edge of the dropoff. Still we thought we could make it.

Hitching the block and tackle to a tree above the boulder, we anchored to the rear spring of the car, just in case. Letting out the 1-inch rope from the front bumper, we put 12 men there to drag the car with a minimum of power in the rear wheels, which, we were afraid, might throw the back end down the dropoff, due to the soft dirt edge. Then we were ready.

• • •

One of us stood in front to guide the driver. Another directed the Mexicans holding onto the block and tackle at the rear, and played out slack as the car needed it to move forward. All worked well, except that the driver hugged the boulder a little closely. We didn't blame him. The rock scraped Maine and Vermont off our North America map on the rear door. "That ought to please Roosevelt," murmured Whitaker, one of my companions, as he got out from behind the steering wheel and wiped his red, 10 day beard with his handkerchief.

The nearest we came to a major accident was on the last day of the 25. Coming down the mountain on this side, the trail crossed the rocky creek bottom of the little canyon we were following, took a short turn upward, and came out of a 10 foot cut onto a narrow ledge 50 feet above the canyon floor. With the rear wheels still in the mouth of the cut, slanting up with the steep angle of the grade, the front wheels were within 4 feet of the cliff's edge. The trail then doubled back over itself and, with hardly more than a foot to spare on either side, crept above the 10 foot cut on one side and an incurve of the 50 foot cliff on the other.

• • •

Working carefully, with only a few inches to spare, we jockeyed the car around until it sat squarely across the cliff space. We still needed the rear end 3 feet to one side before we could move ahead across the ledge and back to safety on the mountainside proper. That 3 foot move was accomplished by all the men pumping up and down on the rear fenders and bumpers, and with each upswing, pulling and pushing the way we wanted to go. The car moved 2 or 3 inches at a pull.

We had been taking motion pictures of the proceedings and, now that everything was ready, we wanted to film our final success. With the men on the rope to help the motor up the rocky ledge, the "'sta bueno" was given to proceed. But Whitaker forgot about the in-curve of the ledge. Four feet ahead, and the left front wheel dropped over with a jerking slide. Picture-taking stopped. Quickly we got down the block and tackle and, with a minimum of movement which might make the car slide still further down, we secured the tackle to the front of the frame and back to a tree growing out of the downside of the turn just passed. Then we breathed more easily. It took more than half an hour of pulling on the block and tackle and lifting on the left front with bars and men to get the wheel back onto solid ground. Such close calls make good pictures, but we'd rather do without that kind of photography.

• • •

We have survived the three tough weeks better than has the car. Now we are refastening fenders almost torn completely off the body, getting the rear door to open again after being caved in on a boulder, repairing shock absorbers and stabilizers shorn by the strain, and making other repairs which bear record of the trek across these mountains. We think we can make Guatemala City in 10 days. We have bull-cart trails to follow, and wheeled trails of any kind will seem almost like four-lane highways to us after the last 25 days.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Please keep them brief. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

TRAVELING ON A SHOESTRING.

Palmer Lake, Colo., May 22.—To the Travel Editor: Spring came last week to this part of the Rockies. Palmer Lake is on the Divide, where all the storms seem to center, but it's a truly beautiful spot, nevertheless.

A recent letter from Annie House of Eureka Springs, Ark., advised me that people are coming there almost every week, carrying my TRIBUNE stories of the town and the Ozarks in their pockets, and going to see each spot I have described. A number have bought homes there, others are boarding, and still others are merely sightseeing.

One of your Chicago readers with a summer home up in northern Michigan has written to me inviting me up there for a visit and telling me it would be a lovely spot to write up for you. Another reader wrote asking me to advise him where to locate. [I might try the real estate business. But I like writing too well, and I sold life insurance in Chicago for 10 years prior to starting out three years ago to see the United States on a shoestring. Sometimes it breaks, but I tie another knot, and go right on.]

I am hoping that I can get around in Colorado soon and will then get some stories of a few "not vacation folder advertised" scenic spots—the same as I've sent you of this little town and its real vacationland beauty, so close to Colorado Springs that it is only a few minutes' drive down there and only 53 miles to Denver. PEARL ANOE.

Tulip Time Tale Oft Told, but It's Still New

By Frederic Babcock.

Holland's three million tulips have gone into eclipse. So have the apple and cherry blossoms around St. Joseph and Benton Harbor. Summer weather came upon western Michigan unusually early this year, and the flowers responded accordingly. Now the residents of the American Riviera have nothing to do except look forward to another big invasion from this side of Lake Michigan.

The Memorial day week-end marked the start of the annual invasion. From now until Labor day the people of Chicagoland will be pouring into the towns and cities along the eastern shore. St. Joseph, Benton Harbor, South Haven, Saugatuck, Holland, Grand Haven, and Muskegon will catch the bulk of the trade, but, further north, Ludington, Manistee, Frankfort, Traverse City, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Harbor Springs, and Mackinac Island will be getting their share. Only Wisconsin can rival western Michigan as the great summer playground of the middle west.

• • •

This year, with the S. S. Theodore Roosevelt out of the running, just about everybody will be going by train, bus, plane, or auto. But our pilgrimage was made on a Great Lakes liner. The Holland Tulip Time festival was closing a week ago yesterday, and the Georgian Bay Line decided to put on a special cruise in order to let 300 Chicagoans in on the finale.

Whoever thought up the idea must have known what the people want. It was the kind of week-end party that most of us read about, but don't often attend. The S. S. South American, gleaming in its new coat of paint and its new furnishings, proved to be an ideal setting for such a party, and the people of Holland helped by putting on a memorable show.

E. J. Goebel, the Georgian Bay's passenger traffic manager, was there as generalissimo. Jimmy Thompson of Oak Park was cruise director and master of ceremonies, Harry Wolf was present with his color photos, and Julian Jackson was on hand to look after the newspaper men. Traveling together were several large groups, including one of 20 midwesterners whom Ed Lundberg had conducted all over Mexico and who still called him their leader.

• • •

The first thing we noticed after we had landed in Holland was the refusal of the Dutch to get hysterical about anything. They were winding up the job of entertaining half a million persons, and, after a week of jammed streets and more or less jammed facilities, they were still taking it calmly.

Duncan Weaver, Holland correspondent of THE TRIBUNE, took us first to the offices of the Evening Sentinel for a courtesy call on the editors. But the editors were out. They were having their koffie kletz. It appeared that every morning at 9:30 and every afternoon at 3 everybody drops whatever he is doing and hies himself to the nearest restaurant for a cup of coffee. Wars and celebrations may come and go, but they must wait for a few minutes twice a day. The custom is adhered to by all the Hollanders, regardless of their nationality. When we finally met up with C. A. French, the Sentinel's editor-in-chief, and W. A. Butler, the business manager, it was obvious that neither of them is of Dutch extraction.

• • •

Our next call was on S. H. Houtman, the festival manager, and there we found not only a real Dutchman but also a real Dutch costume. After all these years of being the mainspring behind what has come to be one of America's foremost festivals, Mr. Houtman has lost none of his enthusiasm. He still lives, breathes, and dreams Tulip Time.

Besides managing everything, and doing a splendid job of it, he writes reams about his pet avocation. Here's a sample:

"Now that a European sightseeing tour is out of the question, travel minded Americans will be on the lookout for substitutes. Now is the time to spread the gospel of See America First. And it is being done with every community in the country seeking to outdo the other in presenting the appeal of its particular local attractions under such borrowed terms as the Switzerland of America, Sahara of the West, American Riviera, or what have you.

"Perhaps nowhere is the substitution so satisfying to the visitor as at Holland at tulip blooming time. Here the effort to reproduce the atmosphere of a European fatherland is motivated not by commercial interests but by a genuine desire on the part of the citizens to preserve thru annual revivals the traditions of The Netherlands.

"The traveler who had hoped to be thrilled by the acres of vivid hued tulips nestling in the Haarlem area back of the great North Sea dunes in the province of South Holland need not be too greatly disappointed. He will be equally stirred by the millions of tulips massed on the bulb farms in southwestern Michigan. These are a few miles west of the Dutch settlement at Holland, where Macatawa bay breaks the line of dunes forming Lake Michigan's eastern shore."

• • •

Nearly every one knows by this time that first and second generation Hollanders make up three-fourths of the city's population of 15,000; that the fête is opened annually by the picturesque street scrubbing ceremony, in which the burghers and vrouws scour the thorofares to Dutch standard cleanliness, and that each evening 300 high school girls do a marvelous wooden shoe dance in front of the postoffice. The story has been told many times, and it never seems to grow too old for repetition.

This year, for the first time, the management engaged a professional troupe to do a bit of Dutch drama. The play was called "Silver Skates," and it added a great deal to the whole effect. On hand, as usual, were the massed bands of high school and college students, and the 15 miles of tulip borders along the streets, and the paraders, and, of course, Albertus Klinge.

Albertus is in his 80s, and he's been making wooden shoes for 70 years. Each festival time he occupies a place of prominence in a show window while he plies his trade. The crowds of sightseers never fail him. The story is that whole forests of poplars have been cut down to supply his materials—but that's something of an exaggeration.

• • •

All that is over now, but two of Holland's exhibits are open all summer. They are Little Netherlands, a faithful reproduction of the canals, islands, homes, and inhabitants of the mother country—all done in miniature—and the display of Dutch antiques at the museum. If you missed the festival, you still can capture some of the spirit of Holland by visiting these two fascinating places.

Not so well known—at least to this traveler—as the city and its celebration was the development at nearby Castle park. There, a few geniuses, among them Prof. E. P. McLean of Holland's Hope college, have taken over an old castle and transformed and enlarged it into a summer resort of pastoral simplicity. There are a plantation house, a guest house rebuilt from the beams and boards of a barn, and seven cottages—all in a perfect setting above the lake and the dunes. The roofs are covered with the rustic shingles known as shakes, and it took 35 mountaineers from the south to do the job. The place will accommodate only 85 guests. So far the tourists haven't overrun it or robbed it of its charm.

AMONG THE TULIPS

Betty Ten Have, one of the wooden shoe dancers, and David Houtman, 15 month old son of S. H. Houtman, manager of the Tulip Time festival at Holland, Mich. The 1941 festival, attended by half a million persons, ended a week ago.

Embroidery of Early Europe on Exhibition

By Edith Weigle.

An important exhibition of European embroideries of the 16th and 17th centuries, presented by the Antiquarian society at the Art institute, proves that domestic needlework of that period was definitely one of the arts. Perfection of workmanship, exquisite blending of colors, and intricate design make the various items in this collection invaluable relics of a bygone era.

Mrs. Phillip Miller, president of the society, explains that many of the embroideries have never before been loaned to exhibitions in the middle west and Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland in an interesting introduction to the catalog gives a resumé of the two centuries they cover. Prior to 1600 both artists and laymen, she states, created for the church.

But the Reformation and the Renaissance turned attention to the individual and to the court. It was an era of great personal display. In the exhibition are examples of the elaborate costume accessories worn at the time, and among the most beautiful items in the entire group are "table carpets" and bed valances executed for the homes of the nobles.

Biblical scenes were interpreted by these marvelous needle workers; also court scenes of the time, as well as subjects concerned with the humble little flowers of the field and with birds and butterflies. Time has mellowed the gay colors of the threads they used, increasing the beauty of their work.

The exhibition will continue till June 29.

Portraits of Men and Women Who Helped to Make Chicago Great, 1891-1941, is the name given a showing of 26 portraits at the Art institute. Arranged in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the founding of the University of Chicago, paintings of the following men and women are included: Jane Addams, Philip D. Armour, Frank Billings, James H. Breasted, Daniel H. Burnham, Charles G. Dawes, Frank W. Gunsaulus, William Rainey Harper, Robert S. McCormick, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. Potter Palmer, and Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.

On June 6 an exhibition of the work of Carl Milles comprising a number of pieces of his sculpture of the last decade will open at the Art institute. Meyric R. Rogers, head of the decorative arts department, says, "The creations of the last few years are as legitimately American as they are Swedish in their origin. Without losing its unique personal savor Milles' work has become the symbol of the strength and richness that can result from the mingling of the Scandinavian genius with the more expansive spirit of the west."

At the Anderson galleries is a return showing of a number of famous portraits of famous men. These were reviewed in THE TRIBUNE last fall by Eleanor Jewett and make up a memorable collection, among them being the well known Cogswell painting of Lincoln which THE TRIBUNE reproduced in color, the G. P. A. Healy likeness of John Quincy Adams, a Gilbert Stuart portrait and a Rembrandt Peale of Washington, a portrait of Col. Gerard Jarvis by John S. Copley, Henry Clay by Bass Otis, Benjamin Franklin by Carle Van Loo, Gen. William Hull by Stuart, and Lafayette by Louis Leopold Boilly.

Thirty oil paintings of Colorado by Louis Cheskin are on view at Kroch's bookstore.

At the Findlay galleries is a large show of water colors, many of them by Chicago artists. Highlights of the exhibition are a landscape by Fritzi Brod, "Jack in the Pulpits," a fascinating botanical and bird study by Frances Badger, a landscape by Willard Johnson, and several amusing papers by Ethel Spears.

There also are ceramics, an amazing menagerie of fantastically modeled animals never seen on land or sea, and water colors of the same. The latter are painted by Lyman Carpenter, while both he and Vera Topper did the ceramics. Their work is highly original, gay and amusing. Little attempt at realism is made.

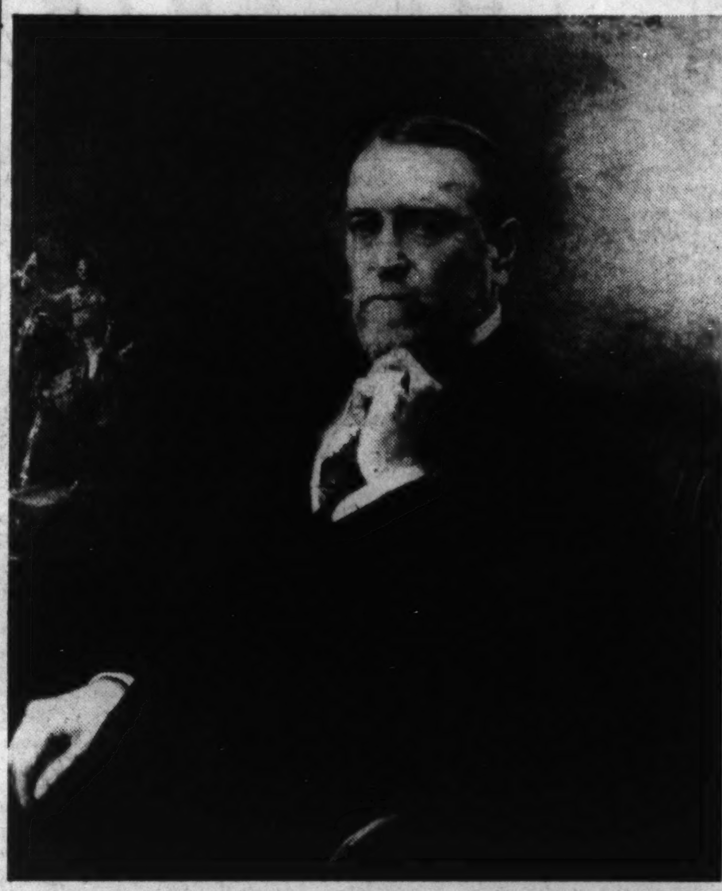
Paintings and etchings by artists of the Fox river valley and the north shore suburbs are on view at the Elgin academy, Elgin, Ill. Elizabeth Englehard, June Jean Myall, Mrs. Archibald Sheldon, and Frances Cook Vance are each represented by five paintings or prints.



This portrait of Robert S. McCormick by Aime Morot, painted when Mr. McCormick was ambassador to France, is hung in the exhibition of Portraits of Men and Women Who Made Chicago Great, 1891-1941, at the Art institute.

Lake View Music Society to Give Concert Series

The Lake View Musical society will present the Philharmonic string quartet in a series of three concerts next season, it was announced last week by Mrs. Hilda P. Engle, publicity chairman. Oct. 26, Nov. 23, and Jan. 25 are the dates set for the programs, which will be given at the Goodman theater. John Weicher, Robert Quick, Walter Hancock, and Dudley Powers are members of the string quartet.

Mrs. Hilda Bryant, second vice president of the society, is general chairman of the series, and Mrs. Frederic Tellander, first vice president, is finance chairman. The society, founded in 1895 to "stimulate musical interest in Chicago," has given consistent support to the city's most important musical institutions, and has awarded more than $10,000 in scholarships.

Julia Howe Milan Is a Bride of May 29

The marriage of Miss Julia Howe Milan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Milan, to Casper Peter Stich, son of Mrs. Barbara Stich of Oak Park, took place on May 19 at the Chicago temple. Mr. Stich has taken his bride to the Catskills for a wedding trip. After Oct. 1 they will be at home in Glen Acres, where they are building a house.

Household Forum

[Have you some favorite household help; something that lightens labor and gets results? Is there some comfort or convenience you could enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers.]

Miss Martha L., Chicago—I have to use telephone directories a great deal in my office work and at home, too, and the idea has come to me more than once: Why not thumb index heavy phone directories? It would make finding names a lot easier.

* *

Mrs. L. Ray, Chicago—I save all those little purse mirrors in our family thruout the year and when Christmastime comes I have them ready for glittering bits of decoration. It is easy to paste gilt paper on their backs, bind them with passe partout and hang them on tree by stout, gayly colored cords. They will reflect your tree's colored lights.

* *

Mrs. T. H. C., River Forest, Ill.—We always keep a sheet of stiff paper in our auot and when we leave the car out on frosty nights we slip the paper under the windshield wiper. This, we find, keeps frost from collecting on the windshield at the point where driver must look thru it.

Mrs. L. F. S., Detroit, Mich.—I was told last year by some one who should know that our nice little birds which are fun to have around but do like to nibble at cherry and other fruit trees and bushes aren't half so likely to linger around if one hangs little purse mirrors among the branches. The birds just don't like glittering things. I'm passing this on for a fact. If I'm wrong, let me know.
